Portsmouth Chronicle.

OPIUM SMOKING.

The increasing number of young people of both sexes addicted to opium smoking and chewing is really alarming. A Chronicle reporter has made inquiries concerning those who frequent the opium dens, and some of the names given him would give a shock to the community were they published. Girls of only fifteen and young men from fourteen to twenty-five years of age are habitues of these loathsome dens of vice. Sing Woh, the proprietor of a den on the corner of H and Union streets, informed the reporter that he had kept the place for years. When he first engaged in the business his patrons were almost exclusively Chinese. Every year the number of his patrons has steadily increased, while many young men and girls have learned the habit in his place. During the first year his sales of opium to these persons were only 94 ounces; second year, 132; third year, 200; fourth year, 394; fifth year, 561. This enormous consumption of opium will be understood when it is known that some young girls are now smoking as many as seventy-five pipefuls per day. To be sure the Chinese opium pipe holds but little (not more than from three to five grains, apothecary's weight,) still seventy-five times five grains is an enormous consumption. The opium used by the Chinese for smoking purposes is a compound of pure opium and sweetened poppy juice, and though a pound of it does not possess the narcotic properties of a quarter of pure Turkey opium, yet it is sold by the Chinese merchants here at an exorbitantly high figure, a pound of the preparation costing four or five times as much as a pound of pure opium could be bought for in San Francisco. Many people are familiar with the structure of the Chinese pipe and the mode of preparing the drug before smoking. It is subjected to a heating process, which the lovers of the drug believe expels the poison from the compound and at the same time hardens it. A small instrument of steel wire, resembling an old-fashioned knitting needle, is employed for the purpose of rolling the morsel of opium into a cylindrical shape before laying it into the very small bowl of the pipe. The opium when thus prepared does not lie on the cavity of the bowl but on the top of it. It is then held over the lamp and a dozen whiffs taken and inhaled, when another piece is prepared. Conversation with a few of the opium-smokers reveals the fact that the small apparent effect produced on the system by the first few pipe-fulls was the principal reason of their adopting and continuing the habit. They made their first essay at smoking, with feelings of dread. Knowing that it was rank poison they watched for speedy results, and were resolved not to follow up the habit. They smoked one, two, four and six pipefuls without experiencing any of the effects of opium except a slight dizziness. Opium became, therefore, not an indulgence to be dreaded. They kept on smoking pipeful after pipeful until they became hopelessly intoxicated, and had taken such an amount of the poison into their system that a continuance of the dissipation was necessary to relieve them from the after-effect.

The Chronicle reporter then visited the den of Sung Woh, who corroborated all the statements made by Sing Woh. Although he has a very small establishment he has noticed the same terrible increase in the sale of opium in late years mentioned by Sing Woh. These two proprietors furnished the reporter with the names of twenty-two young white people, male and female, who frequented their establishments. The reporter inquired as to their whereabouts, and had about fifteen of them pointed out to him. They were all beginning to look like China men and women—pale, yellow-streaked countenance, blackish and yellowish-blue circles around the eyes, eyes dull and glassy, vacant expression to their features, the mouth especially; and dense perspiration of the forehead and head. They exhibit no ambition except to eat, sleep and smoke opium. Sung Woh stated that troops of young men and women—as many as ten at a time—visit his den nearly every night They settle themselves on the couches, regardless of sex, and lie there in a stupid, narcotic sleep till morning, when the effects of the drug have passed away. They lie on the bed huddled and mixed in every shape, intent only on gratifying their degrading habit. There are many persons in this city addicted to the use of morpdine, the effects of which are not nearly so severe as those of opium. This drug contains at least eight different alkaloids, some of them directly contrary in their effects on the system, and yet not antidotes for each other. They are meconic acid, morphine, codeline, the baine, papaverience, narcotine, narceine, and meconine. The complications arising from the use of opium almost baffle the attempts of the physician in his endeavors to cure the habit. The chewing of the betel nut is also becoming a growing habit among a certain class of young people here. This is a West India nut which, when chewed with a small proportion of slaked lime, produces intoxicating effects similar to those of hasheesh. Sing Wah stated that many young girls come to his place and first chew the betel nut until they are delirious, and then they taper off on opium. His sales of betel nut now amount to about $30 per week.—Virginia City Chronicle.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President --Lincoln--will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

Portland.

At the city election in Portland, Monday, Gen. Fessenden, the republican candidate for mayor, was elected by about 500 majority,—a gain of nearly 1000 from last year. The most enthusiastic republicans had only claimed 300 majority, the democrats claiming 200 majority. Gen. Fessenden was a gallant Union soldier, and lost a leg in the war waged to save the Nation.—In this State, next Tuesday, patriotic men will have to choose between a man who fought for the Union and a man who consigned to "the inheritance of eternal infamy" Abraham Lincoln and all who supported him, for chief magistrate of the State. We have no fear as to the result,—notwithstanding Manchester's ward five.

Lewiston went republican, Monday.

The Democratic Plan.

The democrats have no hope of electing their candidate for governor by the people, and are bending all their energies to securing the Legislature, to effect which they will pour out money like water, and unless all present indications fail will endeavor to surpass even their last year's frauds in towns and wards where they control the ballot-boxes. Their scheme for securing the State contemplates the election of thirty or more bogus representatives, and directions have already been issued apportioning these among twenty-two towns and wards, which are expected to elect them, irrespective of law or honor; second, the manipulation of the check-lists in all democratic wards and towns so as to shut out in each one ten or a dozen republicans who have a right to vote, and put on the lists the names of as many democrats who have no right to vote. They expect to be able to seat enough of their representatives (under the ratable poll law which even Foster's Democrat denounced as infamous and expressly intended to promote fraud,) to secure a majority on joint ballot, and enable them to put a "white oak" figure-head on the ship of State and send a democrat to the U. S. Senate. That they intend repeating and ballot-box stuffing to be carried on in Manchester's democratic wards to a still greater extent than at the last election, is evident enough from the way they have made up the check-lists; and it is asserted by republicans at Concord that the democratic managers have sent one of their ablest political engineers to this city, to assist the local wire-pullers in any scheme of rascality they may not be themselves able to manage. The democrats heartily endorse the sentiment, "nothing succeeds like success," and what they cannot accomplish by honorable means or bribery they will try to compass by trickery and fraud at the ballot-box. Too much vigilance in watching them, too much earnestness in combatting their schemes, cannot be exercised by the republicans,—and a primary duty for each one is to see that his own name and the names of other republicans who have a right to vote are on the check-lists, and that the democratic wire-pullers succeed in carrying out no check-list frauds through republican indifference or a misplaced faith in the "honor" of democratic ward officers. Now is the time to work.

A Word to Thinking Men.

The time has come when all honorable men, irrespective of party, must consider carefully the results of the example they are to set by the votes they cast on the 14th of March. There is food for deep reflection in the fact that there is to-day an organized plan, deliberately formed and to be executed to such an extent as the men who first broached the infamous scheme dare go, for the overthrow of the rights of the people by direct resort to fraud and intimidation!! Men of New Hampshire! Democrats! Republicans! Prohibitionists! You are brought face to face with the startling fact that ruffianism is to be countenanced and encouraged, the election rendered a farce, and a fair and honest expression of public opinion defeated so far as possible by the machinations of politicians who regard success if achieved by trickery and unscrupulous action as far preferable to defeat in a fair and open conflict!

Since the infamous Lecompton swindle, there has been nothing in any State North of Mason & Dixon's line more deliberate in its boldness of conception or more fraught with danger to the liberties of the State than that which is at present threatening the honest voters of Manchester and Portsmouth, and through them the State and Nation. Throwing aside all political feeling and division of sentiment, every voter is called upon to judge of the facts,—the alarming tendency of politicians to imperil the safety of society, to undermine the very foundations of a free government, and to replace it by the substitution of a class of individuals who have nothing but their own selfish schemes of aggrandizement at heart, and who rely solely upon the most disorderly classes of society, to whom they cater for their much desired triumph over law and the principles of justice. Your attention is called to the facts which to-day threaten to render our popular form of government a mere mockery and our present condition of peace only a prelude to a season of violence and disorder.

Read This!

From the Manchester Mirror of Saturday we condense the following expose of the manner in which the democratic officials of Ward Five in that city have made up the check-lists:

Last spring, as is well known, the selectmen of Ward Five put upon the check-list about three hundred fictitious names, upon many of which repeaters voted. But that list contained, when the polls were opened, less than 1200 names in all, and not more than 900 which represented legal voters. This year the republicans of the ward, just previous to the posting of the list, made a thorough canvass, visiting every tenement in the ward and obtaining a perfect census of every male inhabitant in it. They found that there were in the ward one hundred and seventy-two empty tenements, and thirty which were occupied only by single women. Reckoning all the men who claimed to be voters there were less than a thousand. But the selectmen made out a list which contained seventeen hundred: before it was printed, however, it was concluded by the managers at Concord that to post such a list would have a bad effect throughout the State, and it was therefore decided to strike off about 400 names, and the list as printed and posted contains 1284. The law requires that each voter shall be located at some street and number, which shall be printed upon the list; this makes it a comparatively easy matter to determine whether a man whose name is on the list is really a resident of the ward. This work has been thoroughly done by a committee, and as a result it is found that of the 1284 names more than 450 are those of men who have no business whatever to vote in the ward! In the first place the names of legal voters have been repeated with more or less variation. Secondly, locations are doubled up as follows: Connor's Block is located on the corner of Elm and Park streets, and if its number is 100 on Elm and 50 on Park, its occupants appear first on the list located in Connor's Block; secondly at 100 Elm street, and third y at 50 Park street, and, perhaps, fourthly at the corner of Elm and Park streets. Again, the list contains the names of many men who have just moved into the ward, and of many others who left it long ago; these last being located at their old residences. There are also on the list many names of men who have never been naturalized, of others who are minors, and of a large number which were apparently copied from the directories of other cities and cannot be traced at all. This is the list as it appears to-day, and it is openly boasted on the street, by the men who have the management of the matter, that the 400 other names which were stricken off to prevent a bad effect outside the city, are to be written on before the polls are opened. If this is done, and none of the names now upon it are stricken off, the list on election morning will contain at least eight hundred fictitious names, put upon it for the purpose of allowing a gang of imported repeaters and hired ruffians to vote upon them, and thus overcome the voters of the city. Connor's Block contained, on the 29th of February, but thirty-nine men, of whom only twelve claimed to be voters; but the check-list as posted shows fifty two names of voters for said block—a very good increase for seven days. Borns' block has six legal voters and thirteen non-voters,—nineteen in all: but the democratic check-list locates forty-one voters in that block. The Mirror publishes three columns of names for which no owners can be found, or of which the owners have no right to vote in the ward; and making all allowances for mistakes, it is safe to say at least four hundred of the names published are wrongfully on the list. The names of at least fifty republicans, many of whom are old residents in the ward, have been left off the list, their places in some instances being occupied by imaginary democrats who are located at their residences, but whose acquaintance they indignantly deny.

We invite the attention of honest men of all parties to this sample of democratic purity, and ask them to carefully consider, before depositing their votes next Tuesday, whether they are desirous of foisting upon this State as rulers the men who carried out the frauds of last year and planned the villainy exposed above. If the wholesale falsification of the check-lists (which necessitates perjury and bribery before it can amount to anything as an election move) is admirable, then vote with the democratic party; if not, vote for the republican candidates.

Ahead of Marcy.

A wealthy farmer of the democratic belief, (whom the people of Hampton Falls are glad don't live in their town but who does reside on and own one of the best farms in Stratham,) was not a great while ago heard to remark that he hoped to see the time so hard that a laboring man would be obliged to beg for a day's work of him for twenty-five cents a day! This same man tried to get elected to the General Court a few years since, but secured a decided election not to go, instead.

News and Notes.

The Manchester Union says: "Every day we hear of more or less honest republicans who will this year vote the democratic ticket." It makes a trifling mistake; all the "republicans who will this year vote the democratic ticket"--if there are any such—must of course belong to the "less honest" class.

The New York Herald says: "Now they (the democrats) propose to take possession of the government in Louisiana by a subterfuge. First it was force; now it is fraud. The country looks with deep anxiety upon all these expedients, and asks, What would these men do in Washington if they had the power?"

That ridiculous farce of impeachment in Louisiana played out very suddenly. A farce it was in one of its aspects, but in another it was of grave importance. It served to show the true spirit of the Southern democracy. The charges which were made against Governor Kellogg were of the most empty and frivolous kind. Furthermore, it came out, during the debate that preceded the presentation of the last articles, that the very acts of which most serious complaints were made, were indorsed by the best lawyers of New Orleans. The democracy became aware that this thing would not do. It was hurting the party in the North. Swift instructions must have been sent to Louisiana to dry up. But the instructions were not swift enough to prevent this exposure of democratic spirit. What has been done shows very plainly the steps that will be resorted to all through the South to fasten on the States democratic governments, to hold power that has been once acquired.

At North Hampton a pair of horses belonging to Abraham Hobbs, recently broke through the ice on Knowles'-pond, and one of them was drowned.

The Exeter Manufacturing Company has been compelled to suspend on account of the failure of Dale Bros. & Co., the selling agents of the Company in Boston.

It now seems that the democratic members of the investigating committee knew of Belknap's guilt some weeks before the republican members of the committee heard of it, and that it was the latter who then insisted on its being at once made public. Possibly the democrats intended to bring the scandal out at the only time it could have been brought out to influence the New Hampshire election,—a day or two before the voting day—thinking it of more importance to make political capital for the bankrupt party than to promptly expose and punish official corruption.

A leap-year ball by the young ladies of Great Falls, Friday night, was a great success.

Hon. John Henry Elliot, of Keene, on Saturday slipped on some ice, and broke one of his legs.

Biddeford had a $3000 fire, Saturday morning.

Ralph McMurphy, of Lake Village, hung himself on Saturday. He was only 15 years old.

George W. Wendell, one of the oldest inhabitants of Great Falls, died Friday night of cancer, aged 72 years.

The British bark John Geddie, at Charleston, S. C., for Havre, with a cotton cargo, was on fire Saturday. Loss, $100,000.

At Terre Haute, Ind., March 3d, George and Thomas Watts, brothers, attacked in the street with butcher knives, counter-weights and pistols, two men named Freeman Reid and Louis Seigly, whom they supposed had shot through the door of their butcher shop. Reid and George Watts were killed.

It seems to be the lot of Newburyport to be continually haunted by an incendiary. After the great fire-bug, Choate, was sent to State Prison, people thought they could rest easy, but not so. Several times since then incendiary fires have occurred, and now there seems to be a desire on the part of some one to burn the north part of the city. A number of attempts have been made, Saturday morning two of them—on a carpenter's shop, which was burned at a small loss, and on the barn of Mr. Richard Ordway, who, after leaving the first fire, went to look at his own premises and found his barn open, cattle turned loose, and the remains of a fire which fortunately went out of itself without doing any great damage.

Attention is directed to the card of the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Depot, New York. This hotel is one of the largest and most popular of the New York city first-class hotels. It is so conveniently located to the Grand Central Depot, that all expense of carriage and baggage expressage is saved its guests. An indisputable recommendation of this house is the fact that guests who stop there once become regular patrons thereafter. Persons contemplating visiting or passing through New York, or to attend the Centennial, will do well to give the Grand Union a trial. The Grand Union supplies every advantage afforded by a first-class hotel, while the rates of charges are moderate, being suited to the stringency of the times.

The amount of money the late secretary of war—Belknap, of democratic antecedents—received in bribes, is stated at $40,000. The people of Strafford county alone were robbed of the amount mentioned by the last secretary of war under democratic administration—Floyd—and the worthless acceptances are now held by a Manchester savings bank.—Nashua Telegraph.

Remember.

Our friends elsewhere must remember that every republican vote will be needed on election day, because it is certain that hundreds of fraudulent democratic votes will be cast in Manchester if the democratic programme is carried out. It is to be hoped that some way will be found to prevent a repetition of the infamous frauds practiced by the Manchester democracy last year, but in any event let every republican elsewhere vote, and in spite of the frauds the State will be ours. Then an effective remedy will be found and applied.

A Genial Restorative.

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are emphatically a genial restorative. The changes which this great botanic remedy produces in the disordered organization are always agreeably though surely progressive, never abrupt and violent. On this account it is admirably adapted to persons of delicate constitution and weak nerves, to whom the powerful mineral drugs are positively injurious. That it imparts those processes which result in the re-establishment of healthful vigor is conspicuously shown in cases where it is taken to overcome that fruitful cause of debility, indigestion, coupled, as it usually is, with biliousness and constipation. Thorough digestion, regular evacuation and abundant secretion are results which promptly and invariably attend its systematic use. It is, besides, the best protective against malaria, and a first rate diuretic.

TOO YOUNG TO DIE.—Thousands of young persons between the ages of 16 and 25 die of consumption, every one of whom might have been saved by using HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR when the cough first set in.

Pike's Toothache Drops cure in one minute.

The climate of New England is extremely "trying" to weak lungs, and often people are compelled by its rigors to seek a warmer climate or go down to the grave with consumption. Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam strengthens and heals weak lungs and temperes the climate to all.

Sore Throat, Cough, Cold, and similar troubles, if suffered to progress, result in serious pulmonary affections, oftentimes incurable. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" reach directly the seat of the disease and give almost instant relief.

Important to persons visiting New York or the Centennial. The Grand Union Hotel, New York, opposite the Grand Central Depot, has over 350 elegantly furnished rooms. Elevator, steam and all improvements. European plan. Carriage hire is saved, as baggage is taken to and from the depot free. Guests can live better for less money at the Grand Union than at any other first-class hotel. Stages and cars passe the Hotel constantly to all parts of the city, and to the Philadelphia depot. dawtr1277

Grand Republican Rally.

There will be a grand Republican rally at the Temple on Thursday evening, at which Senator Bainbridge Wadleigh, Ex-Gov. Walter Harriman, and Hon. Richard J. Oglesby, Ex-Governor of Illinois, and U. S. Senator from that State, will speak. Senator Oglesby was a warm friend of Abraham Lincoln, fought gallantly against rebellion and treason under Gen. Grant, and earned a Major Generalship before the close of the war. He is one of the most popular orators in the West, has a clarion voice and is an eloquent and entertaining speaker, being possessed of an inexhaustible fund of humor and a droll quaintness of expression that cannot be described. His speech in the Philadelphia convention which renominated President Grant in 1872 was a most effective piece of oratory and stirred the multitude to such a storm of applause that he was unable to proceed for several minutes. After the adjournment of the convention he was waited upon by the New Hampshire delegates and requested to make speeches during the following campaign in this State. This being impossible, he promised to come to the State when needed at some subsequent time and to speak in Portsmouth during his stay. He will redeem that promise next Thursday evening, and the people who want to obtain a chance to hear must go early to the Temple.

Jottings.

Miss Cayvan, the brilliant dramatic reader, will give an entertainment at the Temple on the evening of the 16th, the proceeds to be devoted to improving the Portsmouth Rink, and to no other purpose whatever.

A republican friend wants us to put more politics into the CHRONICLE, but we won't; we are not going to transform this paper into a political sheet to please anybody.

That story about the democratic managers having sent one of their ablest wire-pullers here to help our local democracy in engineering through some brilliant election frauds, we must confess we hardly believe, for the aforesaid managers haven't got in their pay a man able to teach our local democratic fugiers anything in the way of trickery,—if they have he's one almighty rascal, that's all.

A man at the West end, being annoyed by the congregation of dogs around his house, on Sunday fired a charge of shot at them. The shot struck the ice and some of it glanced upward and went through a window, breaking twenty-one panes of glass. A woman seated in the room in which the glass was broken was slightly wounded on the cheek and nose, either by shot or pieces of the broken glass.

James S. Maffit, the celebrated Pantomime Clown, with a company of thirty-five persons, will appear at the Temple on Tuesday evening of next week, in Humpty Dumpty; those who desire reserved seats can procure them three days in advance, at Preston's.

Mr. Henry C. Barnabee, with a concert company, will be at the Temple in this city, on Saturday evening, March 25th.

Mr. Sewall W. Webber on Monday bought the real estate, good will and fixtures of the soap factory belonging to the Walker estate, for $4300. The miscellaneous property found various purchasers. Mr. Webber bid off the real estate on behalf of Wm. E. Hadley, Esq.

Youthful Indiscretion.

A young Portsmouth sprig of the law, whose maiden effort on the stump has been made this week for the enlightenment of older, more ignorant and less important statesmen of the democratic persuasion, was sent to Raymond recently to reconnoitre a liquor case, came across a Manchester lawyer not unknown to fame and fell into ambush like a ripe grape into the mouth of a fox. There are two Sullowaysh's prominent in New Hampshire; Alvah Sulloway, of Franklin, the chief engineer of democratic campaigns, and Cyrus A. Sulloway, of Manchester, who measures 75 inches in his stockings, from sole to summit, and is a very prominent republican, so prominent that because he challenged the repeaters at Manchester last year he was unceremoniously hoisted out of Ward Five ward room into the street.

Young hopeful mistook Cyrus for Alvah and immediately emptied himself of all he knew in regard to politics. Cyrus took it all in serenely and waited for more. Finally, the orator, who had yet to learn that his democratic engineer-in-chief was not a Manchester man, closed with the remark: "I just wish we had somebody in Portsmouth to manage our wards as you do Ward Five in Manchester. It would make a difference of 600 votes to us." Cyrus' eyes twinkled and he carried out the joke with the reply: "I know just the man." "Who is he?" excitedly put in his victim. "Gh! I'll give you a letter to him," said Cyrus, following up the promise by writing a letter of introduction to Tom. Morrison, a prominent democratic "worker" of Manchester politics. Our hero from elam Shell Corner took the first available train for Manchester and sought out the congenial Morrison, who read the letter and stared at the bearer with a grin that resembled that of an alligator when opening his jaws for the accommodation of a mule. Then he explained that the young democratic statesman from Strawberry Bank had made a sad mistake, had "bit" at the wrong Sulloway, had fixed things for a democratic triumph with one of the "redhottest" republicans on earth, and had wrecked things generally. Citizens on Elm street stopped and gazed with increasing interest at a departing figure about the size of the aforesaid young patriot, which used the space between that street and the depot with a rash haste betokening excessive agitation of mental capacities, and a countenance indicating a mixture of humiliation and grief. Tom. Morrison will not appear in Portsmouth on election day. His contract to operate in Manchester is already liable to be a failure.

Mr. Alvah Sulloway, on hearing of the faux pas, was very indignant that any one, even of his own party, should think him capable of engineering such frauds as those at Manchester, or of "putting up a job" in any illegal manner.

Died,

RANDALL. In this city, March 5, Mr. Fred H. Randall, son of Mr. Wm. B. Randall, aged 20 years.

Mr. Randall had been for some years an employe of the CHRONICLE office, and was at his post as pressman on the Tuesday morning preceding his death. Naturally somewhat silent and reserved, a short acquaintance would not make manifest his good qualities; but his entire faithfulness, honesty of purpose and rigid adherance to the truth were proverbial among those who know him best. He was not one of the exceptional geniuses born to sway the world; he was simply a young man of good natural ability and good habits; yet in his early death the world has suffered a loss, for honest, rigidly truthful and trustworthy men can never well be spared.

—A man can find fault in any direction he is pleased to look for it.

—Said a Nevada lawyer concerning a man who had kicked his wife down stairs: "Gentlemen of the jury, he hoisted her! Great heavens, he hoisted her!—He, the brute, once, perhaps, a man—raised his foot and applied it to the form of her who, at the holy altar, he had sworn to love and cherish."

—I have no faith in a virtue strong only in crutches and props, which topples over the instant friendly outside support is withdrawn. The soul that is virtuous only because of the absence of temptation is not virtuous at all; but the soul that looks enticement steadily in the eye, and frowns it down until it slinks away abashed; which has the offer, but refuses the bribe,—to that soul the struggle and the triumph are divinely strong. His virtue is not an accident; it is the result of that heroic self-control which follows the impartment of the spirit.—Golden Rule.

—President Eliot told a good story of himself at the recent dinner of the New York Harvard Club. He said that, contrary to the usual course of nature, he was growing younger instead of older as years advanced. About twenty years ago, when he was a tutor and proctor, he was disturbed one night by a noise in the yard and, going out to see what was the matter, he heard a voice exclaim, "Here comes old Eliot." But last winter walking into town one evening, he met two undergraduates, and heard one say to the other, when he had passed by, "I wonder where Charlie is going at this time of night."

—For some time past the occupants of a house on West street have been annoyed by the almost continual ringing of their door bell, but on answering it no one was to be found at the door. Soon they became suspicious that it was done by mischievous boys, and a watch set, but all to no purpose, as the bell still clanged away, and no ringer to be seen. The superstitious attributed it to unearthly causes, and doubtless our spiritualistic friends would have windy articles in our papers, shortly explaining the "rappings," had it not been discovered yesterday that the ringing was caused by a rat running along a wire in the cellar. Since his capture the "manifestations" have ceased.—Wilmington Commercial.

—The fog of yesterday attained to the dignity of a financial agent. It was so dense as to hinder business in the city. The money article of the Times opens with these words: "A dense fog prevailed throughout the day in the city, and business was in consequence much impeded." A good fog is often honored with articles in the newspapers, but this is the first time I remember to have seen it dealt with as a matter affecting the rate of discount and the price of stocks, and it was only a white fog, after all. An English lady whom I met at dinner in the evening spoke of it with undisguised contempt, as if it were a kind of impostor, and not the real thing. She further declared that she liked fogs; that one of the things which always put her in high spirits was a yellow fog. Now what is called a yellow fog is about the color and consistence of soup made from dried peas. It is, I believe, unknown anywhere in the world out of London.—London cor. N. Y. Tribune.

Daily Chronicle.

—At the funeral of a woman in Alabama recently, a neighbor in attendance, feeling called upon to say something sympathetic to the afflicted husband, kindly remarked, "You've got a splendid day for the funeral!"

— The Abbots of Mount Millary in Ireland, Sept Fonds in France, and Mariastern in Turkey, all monasteries of the Trappist order of monks, have decided to purchase land in Maryland to establish a house in the United States, and have appointed as their agent, Brother Francis de Sales. The Order of Trappists is the severest in the Catholic Church. Perpetual silence is one of their vows, and dispensation is given to speak only when necessity demands it, or to those few of the brothers who fill offices in the monastery which demand occasional conversations. They are not allowed meat, eggs, butter, cheese, fish or oil. They sleep on narrow beds of straw, raised a few inches from the ground. They dig and refill from time to time their own graves as a reminder of their mortality. They arise hours before dawn, and after prayer and meditation, betake themselves to their respective employments. Among them are blacksmiths, shoemakers, tailors, carpenters, farmers, diarymen and mill-wrights.

—A negro named Paul Sebastanni was recently arrested in Newark. He is a native of Tripoli, and when only eleven years of age was sold as a slave to an English sea captain, with whom he remained until he was twenty-one. He then took service on board the British war-ship "Chanticleer," from which he subsequently deserted at Honolulu, where he enlisted on the United States corvette "Monongahela" which was then in that port looking after Captain Semmes. At the close of the war he was discharged, and made his way to Italy, where he entered the naval service, and was on board the "Affondatore" when she was sunk in the Gulf of Lissa by the Austrian squadron under command of Admiral Tegethoff. Escaping from the wreck he went to Algiers, where he served the Khedive, professing to have been the servant of General Loring, an American officer who was in the Egyptian army. Thence he went to England, re-entering the naval service, and was on board the "Bellerophon" when she visited Newport last Summer. At that place he left that vessel and has since been wandering about the country. He was suffering from starvation, and was fed and discharged. He is a giant in stature, and is about fifty years of age.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while the most vile literature, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with grotesque and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. It is not much of the low moral tone of society that is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

THE AVALANCHE OF IMMORAL LITERATURE

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commanded a larger share of the resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, CURRENT'S ILLUSTRATED, AND MAGAZINE FOR GIRLS AND BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the twelve numbers, (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $5.00.

Or, for $4.50, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is $6.00; or, for $6.50, they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc., more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 5,000 book pages costing $3.00!!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

Ten years ago Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. established their advertising agency in New York City. Five years ago they absorbed the business conducted by Mr. John Hooper, who was the first to go into this kind of enterprise. Now they have the satisfaction of controlling the most extensive and complete advertising connection which has never been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. They have succeeded in working down a complex business into so thoroughly a systematic method that no change in the newspaper system of America can escape notice, while the widest information upon all topics interesting to advertisers is placed readily at the disposal of the public.

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaints, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their announce was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I remained for a week. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I first benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reported himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills as not one cost anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.5o for three more packages for my friends. H. D. LEBROUX.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, which made for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a deal of money for worthless medicine, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Cosmopolitan, bought one medicine and took it as I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight Pills I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in my appearance. It will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they have proved a blessing to mankind, and will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.
Yours respectfully,
MRS. E. T. LANE.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslindale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.
MRS. B. T. LANE.

PULMOCINE.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

a no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, greatly stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the luxury trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the cunce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

Westminster Hotel,

ON THE EUROPEAN PLAN.

Corner Irving Place and 16th Street, New York. One Block from Union Square and Broadway.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

PULMOCINE.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which promise to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration now drawing to a close. Its course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or be reinvigorated and made more usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, perhaps largely in politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are hopes that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to the past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued regard of all old readers, and the accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, unbiased by partisan necessities or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will be found on the old favor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion and leader throughout the American conflict, and it will rejoice wherever those principles are fairly put under the old banners. But it can never be the servant of any party or any personal interest. It must approve what it finds good in the acts and purposes of either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to set forth the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics it will still have one object in view—that whom the country knows and can trust, to place in hard in sey. Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it found last fall, rallying the forces for the splendid hard money victory in Ohio, in which publicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and in generally striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which, fairly or unfairly, the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so steadily again in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties have at times complained that it is popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost candor with judicial fairness; will keep its columns free from personal warfare, and will give no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and it therefore will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor to their homes, THE TRIBUNE receives a continuance of the favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1874 and 1875 the position assigned it long ago, first by critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally accepted, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest watching near the most lavish expenditure to secure the best attainable intelligence, the most complete reports, the most sketches, pungent letters and essays, and the ablest work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its contributors are many of the most eminent men in the country.

Ancient City in Missouri.

Captain Whitely has just returned from New Madrid country with over 100 more specimens of pottery and relics of prehistoric residents of Missouri, which will be classified and added to the centennial collection. Captain Whitely and the party who accompanied him have traced the remains of a former extensive city, which show the evidences of having been densely populated. The city was surrounded by fortifications, the embankments with covered ways connecting the outworks of which have been traced for several miles. The remains of mounds, serving either for outlooks to watch an enemy, or as cemeteries for the burial of the dead, in which are found skeletons, associated with drinking vessels, are also found distributed about the area of this ancient encampment. The indubitable traces of the dwellings, streets and avenues were also traced over large portions of the grounds, the proper survey of which would doubtless tend to throw new light on the origin of these people. The houses were quite small, from eight to twelve feet in diameter, and located about twelve feet apart. They existed in regular rows, with streets and avenues running through the city at right angles and at proper distances apart. The foundations of the dwellings, if not the entire structure, were made of a kind of adobe brick, of a red color like modern brick, but of coarser material. The brick, specimens of which were brought up here by Captain Whitely, have transverse holes passing through, supposed by some to act as ventilators to the dwellings, as, the bricks being laid flatwise in the wall, the sides of the house would be thereby pierced with a multitude of holes for the admission of outside air.

Another and more probable theory is, that the bricks in a malleable state were pierced with round sticks for the more readily handling and burning, and the sticks having burned out, leave the impression of their form, in the shape of a hole. The sites of these ancient habitations are plainly observed by a sunken depression of several feet in the ground, leaving evidence like that seen in the sites of demolished habitations frequently met with in the country in modern times. At first sight of these habitations the observer might be led to believe that these ancient people lived in cellars and built their houses underground; but this impression will vanish on reflecting that the accumulated debris of ages has entombed these dwellings beneath the surface. Besides, on one side of the ancient city, there is still a lake or marsh, which at some remote period may have overflowed its banks, submerging portions of the site of the ancient city long after its extinction, and added its deposits to the accumulating debris. The site of the city is now covered with trees, mostly oak, an ancient growth, showing that thousands of years have rolled round before the handiwork of these early Missourians was exhumed for exhibition at the centennial. The pottery brought up here this time by the indefatigable antiquarian, some of which was taken out on Saturday last, consists largely of drinking cups, culinary utensils, and bottles of a gourd shape. There are also rude trowels and tools used for fashioning and ornamenting the pottery, and whet-stones for sharpening the stone axes and other instruments in use. But the fantastic character of the ornamentation of the vessels is what strikes every one with surprise. There are very accurate figures of fish, frogs, hedgehogs, and such animals as existed at that time; besides, among the feathered tribes are the goose, duck, owl, hawk, and probably the rooster from his comb.

There are miniature busts of male heads carved out of clay, representing a type of face more resembling the ancient Aztec race than the modern American Indian; but further and more careful inquiry is necessary before coming to any conclusion on this point which would tend to settle the origin of these early builders and taxpayers of the State.—St. Louis Republican.

Fish Living in Hot Water.

A most singular discovery was, yesterday, made in the Savage mine. This is the finding of live fish in the water now flooding the Savage and Hale and Norcross mines. The fish found were five in number, and were, yesterday afternoon, hoisted up the incline in the large iron hoisting tank and dumped into the pump tank at the bottom of the vertical shaft. The fishes are eyeless, and are only about three or four inches in length. They are blood red in color.

The temperature of the water in which they were found is 128 degrees Fahrenheit—almost scalding hot. When the fish were taken out of the hot water in which they were found, and placed in a bucket of cold water, for the purpose of being brought to the surface, they died almost instantly. The cold water at once chilled their life blood.

In appearance these subterranean members of the finny tribe somewhat resemble gold fish. They seem lively and sportive enough in their native hot water, notwithstanding the fact that they have no eyes nor even the rudiments of eyes. The water by which the mines are flooded broke in at a depth of 2,200 feet in a drift that was being pushed to the northward in the Savage. It rose in the mine—also in the Hale and Norcross, the two mines being connected—to the height of 400 feet: that is, up to the 1,800-foot level. This would seem to prove that a great subterranean reservoir or lake has been tapped, and from this lake, doubtless, came the fish hoisted from the mine, last evening.

Eyeless fishes are frequently found in the lakes of large caves, but we have never before heard of their existence in either surface or subterranean water the temperature of which was so high as is the water in these mines. The lower workings of the Savage mine are far below the bed of the Carson River, below the bottom of the Washoe Lake—below any water running or standing anywhere within a distance of ten miles of the mine.—Territorial.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President --Lincoln--will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

"The Leading Issue."

Washington specials say: "The Congressional democratic campaign committee had a meeting Saturday night, and determined to make Belknap's corruption the leading issue in the campaign now going on in New Hampshire and Connecticut." The people of New Hampshire will no doubt feel much obliged to the ring of democratic politicians at Washington who so kindly propose to say what shall be "the leading issue" in the present campaign; but the voters of New Hampshire are not yet disqualified to act and think for themselves. The "leading issues" were made up long before even the democratic chairman of the House committee on expenditures in the War Department had learned of Belknap's corruption, and the voters of this State will hardly throw them aside now even though the democratic Congressional campaign committee have determined it shall be done. The issues on which the two parties will meet at the polls next Tuesday are, whether the people prefer the party which is responsible for the outrageous partisan legislation which disgraced the State in 1874, for Weston & Co.s' outrage of last June, and for the wholesale frauds in this city and Manchester, to the party which administered the State affairs so honestly and economically throughout the period of the worst extravagance and corruption that the democrats could find nothing to "investigate" when they secured control of the State government; and whether, in the present condition of the country, with the democratic Southern States openly re-affirming the doctrine of State Rights, and prominent secessionists boldly defending that doctrine and denouncing the saviors of the Union, on the floor of Congress, they are ready to endorse an open advocate of the extreme State Rights theory, in preference to a man who believes that "this is a nation," and who imperilled his life and lost his health in fighting against the rebellion which Daniel Marcy's secession friends inaugurated.

Navy Department.

The democratic papers have been promising terrible revelations concerning corruption in the Navy Department—corruption which would throw into the shade Belknap's little peccadilloes; but according to the Globe's Washington special, "Mr. Whitthorne, Chairman of the Naval Committee, declares with emphases that there is not a word of truth in the story that his committee has obtained testimony implicating Secretary Robeson and his wife and Representative Samuel J. Randall of Pennsylvania in certain corrupt transactions growing out of naval contracts. And furthermore, that no evidence has been taken by the committee, even tending to implicate Secretary Robeson or any member of his family in any improper transaction." And the Boston Post's Washington special of the 6th says: "Congressman Randall asserts that the investigation into the affairs of the Navy Department will not develop anything of importance. The investigations by the Naval Committee will during this week be devoted to the subject of the general management of the Navy Department, and to matters at the Washington Navy Yard. The transactions in the sale of the Philadelphia Navy Yard property have, however, already been partially investigated by the Committee."

Poor Capital.

If any further proof than the total failure of the democratic majority in the House to inaugurate legislation of national importance were needed to show that all the loud promises of the democrats concerning reform, prior to the last Congressional election, have resulted only in a desperate effort to make political capital for their party, entirely regardless of the national welfare and the national needs, it would be found in the action of the War Department investigating committee, in Belknap's case. It is openly charged that Clymer withheld from the republican members of his committee all knowledge of the Belknap affair for one month, in order that the exposure might be delayed until just before the New Hampshire election. Similar efforts for partisan advantage are discernable in all the miserable business. Mr. Clymer is severely criticised for not detaining Caleb P. Marsh as a witness, it being positively asserted that the secret service officers told him Marsh had made arrangements for flight, and could be detained if desired. The republican members of the investigating committee protested against his being allowed to leave after giving his testimony, but Clymer said his presence was unnecessary and went with him to the office of the Sergeant-at-Arms and saw that he was paid his fee and mileage, thus effectually removing him from the jurisdiction of the House.

The democrats are welcome to all they can make out of the Belknap affair—the one disclosure brought to light by their innumerable investigating committees, (and their frantic endeavors to find out something to help their party as much as the indiscreet speeches of the rebel brigadiers in Congress, and the wretched shirking of any attempt at any really decisive legislation by the democratic majority in Congress, have hurt it,) which they think they can use, as political capital. The democratic managers see now that the Belknap exposure came too soon,—that after the first shock the matter was viewed in its proper light, and what might have done serious harm to the cause of patriotism and honest government in this State, if held back until just before election-day, will really exert no appreciable influence on the election. It is said they propose to remedy this by circulating on Saturday night—too late, of course, to admit of any effectual refutation or enquiry into the truth of any statements made—a vast lot of campaign documents containing wholesale charges of corruption against about every republican official in the country, reckless as to the after exposure of their falsity. Such a plan is in entire accordance with the very genius of the democratic fuglers; but it will not work as they hope it will.

News and Notes.

Thursday, April 13, has been appointed a day of fasting and prayer in New Hampshire.

Haytien advices state that all Cubans are ordered to leave Hayti or be handed over to the Spanish gunboats. A financial crisis is imminent at Port au Prince. President Dominguez has ordered the closing of the foreign club, but the American Minister, Bassett, refuses to obey, he being President of the club.

The republican majority in Lewiston, Me., Monday, was 400.

George Hobbs intends to build a public house this season on the spot where the Ocean House stood that was destroyed by fire a few months ago, at Wells Beach, Me.

An overhaul of the records of Robinson and Armes, the ex-army officers whose testimony led to Belknap's conviction, shows that they were both expelled from the army for scandalous practices upon complaint of their superior officers, and that Belknap had nothing to do with it. But their rascality is no palliation of Belknap's.

The temperance reform movement continues with unusual interest in York, Me. Large numbers have signed the pledge, including nearly all the prominent and influential men of that town. A large and enthusiastic temperance meeting was recently held in the Town Hall, and was addressed by T. H. Bryant of Lewiston and Hon. N. G. Marshall of York.

Gen. Belknap, at the time he entered the army, was a member if not chairman of the democratic State central committee of Iowa, and was collector of internal revenue for the first district of Iowa, under Andrew Johnson. That the republicans of Iowa have never considered him one of their party, is shown by the fact that at the recent Senatorial election, in which Belknap was an avowed candidate for months before the election and it is said brought all the patronage of his department to bear in his favor, he only got about a dozen votes out of a hundred and fifty. But all this does not alter the fact that he was Secretary of the War Department of the United States, shamelessly abused his trust, and brought dishonor on the county.

A Fortress Monroe letter says eight wood choppers in James county, Va., killed their employer, Henry Jones, who went into the woods to pay them. They chopped his head and arms off, covered his remains with leaves, robbed him of all the money he had and fled. Seven of them have since been arrested.

A large fire occurred in Barrington, Sunday morning about 2:30 o'clock. The grist mill and pail factory at Trickey's mills took fire and were burned to the ground. The fire had made such headway before discovery that it was impossible to save anything. The loss is placed at some $15,000 and it was the work of an incendiary. It was with great difficulty that the saw mill near by was saved.

Ex-Captain Robinson, who says he wrote to Grant about Belknap in 1873, 1874 and 1875, is found to have been justly kicked out of the army for cheating the government. There was therefore no reason whatever for paying any attention to his letters.

Richard H. Dana, Jr., of Massachusetts, has been nominated as minister to England.

The democratic selectmen of Ward Five, Manchester, who made up the check-list which has occasioned so much comment, have published a card declaring it honestly made up! It is cheering indeed to find out that they are such honest men. The Manchester Union announces that the men whose names the Mirror published as nonentities or non-voters are nearly all legally entitled to vote, and will be around bright and early on election morning. No one will doubt the latter statement of the Union, whatever they may think of the former.

"Perley" says the republicans are in possession of facts to be made public in a few days which are very likely to demand the expulsion from the House of a prominent democratic member, and if the democrats set the precedent the impeachment of a prominent democrat who recently held civil office.

Thomas Thompson, David Daley and Charles Morrison, escaped prisoners from Brentwood, have been arrested by the police authorities of Lawrence, Mass., and are held to await the arrival of New Hampshire officers.

On Monday, in the House, just before the close of the session, the republicans endeavored to introduce a resolution directing an investigation to be made of the reasons why the Clymer committee permitted the witness Marsh to be discharged, and consequently to escape. Sunset Cox was in the chair and refused to "see" anybody but democrats, and the House adjourned by a party vote.

The eye that sees all things else sees not itself.

The absent party is always faulty.

Maine.

The republican majority in Portland, Monday, was 516, a net gain of 943 over last year.

At Bath the republican majority was 260, against a democratic majority of 62 last year.

Rockland chose a republican Mayor by 33 majority, the general ticket averaging 175 majority. The present Mayor is a democrat.

In Lewiston the republicans made a gain of 196 from last year, and elected their mayor by 395 majority.

Deluge in Valparaiso.

Our Chilian exchanges give particulars of the terrible deluge of rain which fell upon the city of Valparaiso on the 10th of December last. We translate the substance of the reports: Early in the afternoon thunder claps commenced to shake the heavens, as it seemed, and the skies looked black and sullen, as if brewing a fearful tempest. Soon the rain commenced to fall in torrents, pouring down with immense force. It seemed as if the clouds could not contain the force within them, and they literally burst over the city. It was a tremendous water-spout striking us at one fell blow. The gulches around the city were instantaneously turned into rivers, which overflowed themselves, sending fright to the hearts of the people, and carrying away all obstacles. From 4 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon, Valparaiso appeared to be a city floating on a red sea. The principal streets looked like the natural courses of rivers, and could be navigated. This was actually the case on Cochrane street and other streets. A like condition of things was to be seen elsewhere, and the streets centering on the public plaza turned the square into a lake. Victoria and Independence streets were so swollen that they looked like two tumultuary rivers, and seemed to be the natural outlet for this extraordinary deluge.

The calamity produced by it is general. It is not possible on this, the day following, to give full particulars of the destruction caused, but it is safe to say that the number of houses feeling the force of the rain tempest is much greater than those that escaped. To give an idea of the immense bodies of earth which swept down and banked up in the streets, a full force at work since the flood subsided, has been unable to make impressions upon the vast mud banks. There are enormous piles wherever the water was stopped in its headlong course. During the day all traffic and business were entirely suspended, and cars and coaches of every kind were completely blockaded. In some cases vehicles had to be abandoned in the public street, and conveyances must be slow for days to come. Several cars and carriages were swept by the flood to the beach, and others were dashed against houses and bridges, smashing them to pieces. Never did carriages make such rapid time in Valparaiso before; it seemed as if they went with the speed of lightning express trains. An enumeration of the damages to stores and warehouses can not be given now, but the loss must be very great. Little did the people expect that in the month of December, in the very heart of summer, we should have such a frightful tempest of rain. Its tremendous volume can be imagined by stating that more rain fell, yesterday, in Valparaiso and vicinity than ever in the same time was known before, and that the volume of this one day was half as much as that which ordinarily falls during an entire year. The cries for help in the inundated streets were heart-rendering. The flood rose with such inconceivable rapidity that blocks of houses appeared to be flooded instantly, the inhabitants being barely able to save their lives. Fathers and mothers fled with whatever clothes they had on them, carrying helpless little children and crying babes in their arms to places of safety.—Cincinnati Times.

Few who heard her then will neglect the opportunity of hearing her a second time. She is we believe regarded as the most brilliant and effective reader on the American platform. Her reading of "Robert of Lincoln" is alone worth more than the price of a ticket.

The following is the programme for Miss Cayvan's readings: Mona's Waters; The Auction Extraordinary; The Blacksmith's Story; Make it four, yer Honor; Pipes at Lucknow; Robert of Lincoln; King Robert of Sicily; Papa's Letter; God Shield the Poor; Henry V's address at Agincourt, (Shakespeare;) The Wonderful Sack; Charlie Machree; Mary Malony's Philosophy.

Newcastle Election.

Newcastle held its town election on Tuesday, and both parties worked hard, the republicans electing all their candidates. On the vote for selectmen, the test vote, the republicans had 11 majority. There was much splitting of tickets, the highest vote for any republican candidate being 73, to 62 for the leading democratic candidate.

Jottings.

The democratic managers announce Howe Call, Esq., of this city, to speak at Peterboro' on the 7th and Candia on the 9th. They might as well give him his full name, while they are about it; he used to be known as Moses H. Call, in this city, and we have never heard of his changing his name.

The many friends of Mr. N. Dana Whipple will regret to learn that he has had severe attacks of hemorrhage of the lungs. He is now with his family, sojourning in the Bermudas, with the hope of relief.

The Portsmouth ship Yosemite, Capt. Mack, from Manilla, arrived at Boston Tuesday forenoon. All well.

Mr. Rockwell D. Varney, a laboring man residing on Myrtle street, has been in a depressed state of mind for some time past, and on Monday afternoon took a heavy dose of laudanum. Medical aid promptly rendered saved the unfortunate man's life.

Several children in a family at Rye are sick with small-pox.

We invite attention to the advertisement of sale of valuable household furniture, etc., at Dr. Stevens' residence on Middle street, on the 16th inst.

Fishing schooner Celia, recently stove and sunk at Langing island, Isles of Shoals, has been raised, and was towed into this harbor late on Monday by steamtug Clara Batemen. She is considerably injured, but will be repaired.

A part of the original house once occupied by William Whipple, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, is still standing in Kittery.

A post office has been established at Dover Point, and Parker Spinney of Dover Point House has been appointed postmaster.

Gen. "Dick" Oglesby, who is to speak at the Temple Thursday evening of this week, has had a varied experience. He was born in Oldham county, Kentucky, in 1824; settled in Decatur, Illinois, (where he now resides), in 1836; received a limited education; was a carpenter for two years; worked two years in the California mines; in 1860, was elected to the Illinois State Senate, served one year and resigned to enter the Union army in 1861; was chosen Colonel; was afterward appointed Brigadier General; and in November, 1862, was promoted to be Major General, resigning in 1864, when he was chosen Governor of Illinois. In November, 1872, he was re-elected, and eight days after his inauguration in January, 1873, was elected to the U. S. Senate by the legislature for six years, to succeed Lyman Trumbull.

MARRIAGE SUPERSTITIONS.

Since marriage became an institution there have been certain signs and superstitions that have clung to its celebration through all ages and in all countries. Even to-day in the most civilized nations we have not entirely rid our minds of these superstitions, and I warrant there is never a bride but indulges herself in looking for some happy omen. Few people are dauntless enough to be married on Friday, and we have the most unlimited confidence in that old shoe thrown after the newly-wedded pair. Nearly every bride of to-day wears about her when she is married some trifling thing borrowed from a lady friend, and all know that "Blest is the bride on whom the sun doth shine," and are equally certain that "To change the name and not the letter, is a change for the worse, and not for the better."

So on, quite indefinitely, it is wonderful how these ancient signs are handed down from generation to generation, and how impotent reason is to do away with their hold upon the human mind. Say what you will, we are naturally given to superstitious fears, and there are the fewest people who are not more or less affected by them. But let us recall a few of the olden beliefs concerning marriage superstitions.

In the earliest weddings we read of among the Jews we find that the fourth day of the week was considered the unlucky day for virgins to wed, and the fifth for widows. The Romans also believed that certain days were unfavorable for the performance of marriage rites, and these were the Calends, Nones and Ides of every month, the whole months of February and May, and many of their festivals. June was considered the most propitious month of the year for matrimony, especially if the day chosen were that of the full moon or the conjunction of the sun and moon. The month of May was especially to be avoided, as it was under the influence of spirits adverse to happy households, and for centuries this superstition seemed to prevail in Italy against May marriages and even to this day prevails in some parts of England and our own country. In China, marriages are positively prohibited at certain times and seasons, on account of their being unlucky.

There was at one time a superstition current in England against marrying on Innocents' Day, the 28th of December, a day of ill-omen, because it was the one which commemorated Herod's massacre of the children. And it is still thought unlucky to marry in Lent. "Marry in Lent, and you'll live to repent." An old line also says, "May never, was ye month of love," and another, "Who marries between ye sickle and ye scythe will never strive." The old rhyme that we have all heard tells to marry on "Monday for wealth, Tuesday for health, Wednesday the best day of all; Thursday for crosses, Friday for losses, Saturday no luck at all."

At one time it was taought that all those who married on Tuesdays and Thursdays would be happy. Among the Romans no marriage was celebrated without an augury being first consulted.

In the Middle Ages it was considered an ill omen if the bridal party, in going to the church, met a monk, priest, hare, dog, cat, lizard or serpent; while all would go well if a wolf, spider or toad were encountered.*

It is lucky if the initials of a wedded couple spell a word.

In the south of England it is said to be unlucky for a bride to look in the glass after she is completely dressed before she goes to the church; so a glove, or some other article, is put on after the last look has been taken at the mirror. Gray horses at a wedding are lucky. It is supposed to be unlucky if a wife does not weep on her wedding day. In Scotland it is considered an unhappy omen if a couple are disappointed in getting married on the day first fixed for that purpose.

In the Isle of Man it is believed that it insures good luck to carry salt in the pocket when going to be married. At Hull it is considered unlucky to go in at one door and go out at another when a person gets married.

Whoever goes to sleep first on the wedding night will die first.

If there is an odd number of guests at a wedding one is sure to die within the succeeding twelve months.

—The man who can invent a lazier amusement than croquet will make his fortune.

—It is an extraordinary fact that when people come to what is commonly called high words, they generally use low language.

—There is a man living in Taunton who has had rather a checkered career. He has been twice shipwrecked; was nearly baked in a railroad accident; has been run away with times without number; was shot in the neck at Gettysburg; was a prisoner in Libby prison; fell overboard from a whaler and had two fingers bitten off by a shark; was drafted twice; had his right arm broken in two places in the first New York riot; stood on a barrel with a rope around his neck from sunrise to sunset in an Alabama town at the outset of the rebellion; was crushed by a falling building during an earthquake in California, and was without food or drink nearly fifty hours; and when going home from the White Pine mines narrowly escaped lynching. Still he doesn't complain.

Daily Chronicle.

—A train on the Northern road ran into a cow recently. It didn't hurt the cow but it threw the engine off the track. People accustomed to the beef steak furnished in the boarding houses of this section express much surprise at the slight damage done to the train.—Norwich Bulletin.

—In the early days of the Republic refreshments were always served at the President's receptions. Dr. Mitchell, who was a Representative in Congress from New York in 1807, wrote a very graphic account of one of these public "feeds," in which he said: "Great mirth and humor prevailed, and you may readily conceive wherefore, when it is computed that besides the smiles, cordiality, and welcome which the company received from their generous entertainer (Mr. Jefferson,) they consumed for him a quarter cask of wine, a barrel of punch, and a hundred-weight of cake, besides other knicknacks to a considerable amount." This serving of refreshments at the Presidential receptions was kept up by Presidents Madison, Monroe, and Quincy Adams, but when Jackson came into power the struggles of the democracy for the good cheer provided terminated on several occasions in blows, and the custom was discontinued.

—The eccentric duel between Clay and Randolph has had many different versions, but the following are the facts; Randolph appeared bright and early on the ground, dressed in a morning gown and slippers. After the distance was measured off and the antagonists had taken their positions, the second said, "Are you ready, gentlemen?" Then followed the usual "One—two—three." Clay, being an expert marksman, took deadly aim and fired, carrying away a portion of Randolph's garment, in close proximity to his back. At the same time Randolph discharged his pistol in the air, but, finding that he was not wounded, and seeing the rent that was made in his garment, he ran up to his opponent, at the same time extending his hand, and in his shrill, squeaking voice said, "Henry Clay! Henry Clay! you owe me a new coat!" Clay accepted the proffered hand, and in his eloquent and dignified manner replied, "John Randolph, I thank God Almighty that I am no deeper in your debt." After this event the great statesmen were fast friends until the death of Randolph, which soon after took place in Philadelphia, on which occasion Clay was at his bedside, and one of the chief mourners at his funeral.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks such pabulum accepts to guide the children's minds in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all other works are as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits St. Nicholas), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST NICHOLAS has a fair claim to be platted, and commended for this service wider resources in art and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

Rev. C. S. Robinson, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '73, to Dec., '76) for $5.00.

Or, for $4.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '73, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is $7.00 (or for $6 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five superb diff ssrtes, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than one hundred contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 5,000 book pages costing $25.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

Ten years ago Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. established their advertising agency in New York City. Five years ago they absorbed the business conducted by Mr. John Hooper, who was the first to go into this kind of enterprise. Now they have the satisfaction of controlling the most extensive and complete advertising connection which has never been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. They have succeeded in working down a complex business into so thoroughly a systematic method that no change in the newspaper system of America can escape notice, while the widest information upon all topics interesting to advertisers is placed readily at the disposal of the public.

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon returned more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that I despaired of ever getting well. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror. I had tried so many things, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit, I first hesitated to try the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured your pills for a friend, and he you for a friend, and he myself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages.
SAMUEL PLAISTED, Jr.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir.—I received your package of pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a box for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and have not taken a dose of anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it without one if I could not get more. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have constantly suffered from Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable to stand or walk or sit upon a small chair for from the poor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must drag out my life in misery. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist and Boston Recorder, and got one box if needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well now, which I could not do with Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think the most prove a blessing to thousands who will be cured by them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.
Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane---Health Better at 64 than at 44---Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. Pills, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Boxboroughs, who are in ill health and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.
MRS. B. T. LANE.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best remedy he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the luxurious and trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

— USE —

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of the arts of industrious, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time in twelve years, the Democratic party is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration with unsparing hand. The course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fail to place a center upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be set straight, and reforms to be put into the test. In the settlement of the national finances they may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, to the Family, and to the Public school, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are hopes that it will be the long deferred revival.

Amid such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued support of intelligent readers, and its accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan prejudice or personal interest or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion for more than a generation, and will rejoice whenever those principles are victorious under the old banner. But it can never be the servant of caucuses or conventions; and it will approve what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and apologize upon which he can only for neither. In giving the news it endeavors to set forth the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to elect honest men, whom the country knows and can trust; to secure hard money, Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it intends that its Fall Full, fully up the Force for the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and is earnestly striving to force the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Liberal Ring, stopping the Ring in Pennsylvania, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course throughout all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much encumbered by a mere party name, is that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and to promote some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conservative and independent voters have thus within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the latest knowledge with judicial fairness; its editorial columns free from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and its newsdepartments will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.

To those who believe such a journal a valuable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1874 and 1875 the position assigned it among newspapers by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the unusual excellence of its news and the most lavish expenditure to procure the freshest intelligence, the most complete reports, the most interesting letters and essays, and the most able work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the country, and among its outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

AN AGRICULTURAL EDITOR.

I did not take the temporary editorship of an agricultural paper without misgiving. Neither would a landsman take command of a ship without misgivings. But I was in circumstances that made the salary an object. The regular editor of the paper was going off for a holiday, and I accepted the terms he offered and took his place.

The sensation of being at work again was luxurious, and I wrought all the week with unflagging pleasure. We went to press, and I waited a day, with some solicitude, to see whether my effort was going to attract any notice. As I left the office, toward sundown, a group of men and boys at the foot of the stairs dispersed with one impulse, and gave me passage-way, and I heard one of them say: "That's him!" I was naturally pleased by this incident. The next morning I found a similar group at the foot of the stairs, and scattering couples and individuals standing here and there in the street, and over the way, watching me with interest.

The group scattered and fell back as I approached, and I heard a man say, "Look at his eyes!" I pretended not to observe the notice I was attracting, but secretly I was pleased with it, and was purposing to write an account of it to my aunt. I went up the short flight of stairs and heard cheery voices and a ringing laugh as I drew near the door, which I opened and caught a glimpse of two young rural-looking men, whose faces blanched and lengthened when they saw me, and then they both plunged through the window with a great crash. I was surprised.

In about half an hour an old gentleman, with a flowing beard and a fine but rather austere face, entered and sat down at my invitation. He seemed to have something on his mind. He took off his hat and set it on the floor, and got out of it a red silk handkerchief, and a copy of our paper.

He put the paper on his lap, and while he polished his spectacles with his handkerchief, he said, "Are you the new editor?"

I said I was.

"Have you ever edited an agricultural paper before?"

"No," said I, "this is my first attempt."

"Very likely. Have you had any experience in agriculture practically?"

"No; I believe I have not."

"Some instinct told me so," said the old gentleman, putting on his spectacles and looking over them with asperity, while he folded his paper into a convenient shape "I wish to read you what must have made me have that instinct. It was this editorial. Listen and see if it were you that wrote it:

"Turnips should never be pulled; it injures them. It is much better to send a boy up and let him shake the tree."

"Now what do you think of that?—for I really suppose you wrote it."

"Think of it? Why, I think it is good. I think it is sense. I have no doubt that every year millions and millions of bushels of turnips are spoiled in this township alone by being pulled in a half ripe condition, when if they had sent a boy up to shake the tree"—

"Shake your grandmother! Turnips don't grow on trees!"

"Oh, they don't, don't they? Well, who said they did? The language was intended to be figurative—wholly figurative. Anybody that knows anything will know that I meant that the boy should shake the vine."

Then this old person got up and tore his paper all into small shreds, and stamped on them, and broke several things with his cane, and said I did not know as much as a cow; and then went out and banged the door after him, and, in short, acted in such a way that I fancied he was displeased about something. But not knowing what the trouble was, I could not be any help to him.

Pretty soon after this a long, cadaverous creature, with lanky locks hanging down to his shoulders and a week's stubble bristling from the hills and valleys of his face, darted within the doors, and halted motionless, with finger on lips and head and body bent in listening attitude. No sound was heard. Still he listened. No sound. Then he turned the key in the door, and came elaborately tiptoing toward me till he was within long reaching distance of me, when he stopped and after scanning my face with intense interest for awhile, drew a folded copy of our paper from his bosom and said:

"There, you wrote that. Read it to me quick. Relieve me. I suffer."

I read as follows, and as the sentences fell from my lips I could see the relief come. I could see the drawn muscles relax, and the anxiety go out of the face, and rest and peace steal over the features like the merciful moonlight over a desolate landscape:

"The guano is a fine bird; but great care is necessary in rearing it. It should not be imported earlier than June or later than September. In the Winter it should be kept in a warm place, where it can hatch out its young.

"It is evident that we are to have a backward season for grain. Therefore it will be well for the farmer to begin setting out his cornstalks, and planting his buckwheat cakes in July instead of August.

"Concerning the pumpkin. This berry is a favorite with the natives of the interior of New England, who prefer it to the gooseberry for the making of fruit cake, and who likewise give it the preference over the raspberry for feeding cows, as being more filling and fully as satisfying. The pumpkin is the only esculent of the orange family that will thrive in the North, except the gourd and one or two varieties of the squash. But the custom of planting it in the front yard with the shrubbery is fast going out of vogue, for it is now generally conceded that the pumpkin as a shade tree is a failure.

"Now, as the warm weather approaches, and the ganders begin to spawn"—

The excited listener sprang toward me to shake hands, and said:

"There, there—that will do. I know I am all right now, because you have read it just as I did, word for word. But, stranger, when I first read it this morning, I said to myself, I never, never believed it before, notwithstanding my friends kept me under watch so strict, but now I believe I am crazy; and with that I fetched a howl that you might have heard two miles, and started out to kill somebody—because, you know, I knew it would come to that sooner or later, and so I might as well begin. I read one of them paragraphs over again so as to be certain, and then I burned my house down and started. I have crippled several people, and have got one fellow up a tree, where I can get him if I want him. But I thought that I would call in here as I passed along and make the thing perfectly certain; and now it is certain, and I tell you it is lucky for the chap that is in the tree. I should have killed him, sure, as I went back. Good-by, sir, good-by; you have taken a great load off my mind. My reason has stood the strain of one of your agricultural articles, and I know that nothing can ever unseat it now. Good-by, sir."

I felt a little uncomfortable about the cripplings and arson this person had been entertaining himself with, for I could not help feeling remotely accessory to them. But the thoughts were quickly banished, for the regular editor walked in. (I thought to myself, now, if you had gone to Egypt, as I had recommended you to, I might have had a chance to get my hand in, but you wouldn't do it, and here you are. I sort of expected you.)

The editor was looking sad, and perplexed and dejected.

He surveyed the wreck which that old rioter and those two young farmers had made, and then said, "This is a sad business—a very sad business. There is the mucilage bottle broken, and six panes of glass, and a spittoon and two candlesticks. But that is not the worst. The reputation of the paper is injured—permanently, I fear. True, there never was such a call for the paper before, and it never sold such a large edition or soared to such celebrity, but does one want to be famous for lunacy, and prosper upon the infirmities of his mind? My friend, as I am an honest man, the street out here is full of people, and others are roosting on the fence, waiting to get a glimpse of you, because they think you are crazy. And well they might after reading your editorials. They are a disgrace to journalism. Why, what put it into your head that you could edit a paper of this nature? You do not seem to know the first rudiments of agriculture. You speak of a furrow and a harrow as being the same thing; you talk of the moulting season for cows, and you recommend the domestication of the polecat on account of its playfulness and its excellence as a ratter. Your remark that clams will lie quiet if music be played to them was superfluous—entirely superfluous. Nothing disturbs clams. Clams always lie quiet. Clams care nothing whatever about music. And heavens and earth, friend! If you had made the acquiring of ignorance the study of your life, you could not have graduated with higher honor than you could to-day. I never saw anything like it. Your observation of the horse-chesnut, as an article of commerce steadily gaining in favor, is simply calculated to destroy this journal. I want you to throw up your situation and go. I want no more holiday—I could not enjoy it if I had it. Certainly not with you in my chair. I would always stand in dread of what you might be going to recommend next. It makes me lose all patience every time I think of your discussing oyster-beds under the head of "Landscape Gardening." I want you to go. Nothing on earth could persuade me to take another holiday. Oh! why didn't you tell me you didn't know anything about agriculture?"

"Tell you, you cornstalk, you cabbage, you son of a cauliflower! It's the first time I ever heard such an unfeeling remark. I tell you I have been in the editorial business going on fourteen years, and it is the first time I ever heard of a man's having to know anything in order to edit a newspaper. You turnip! Who write the dramatic critiques for the second-rate players? Why, a parcel of promoted shoemakers and apprentice apothecaries, who know just as much about good acting as I do about good farming, and no more. Who review the books? People who never wrote one. Who do up the heavy leaders on finance? Parties who have the largest opportunities for knowing nothing about it. Who criticise the Indian campaigns? Gentlemen who do not know a war-whoop from a wigwam, and who never have had to run a foot race with a tomahawk, or pluck arrows out of the several members of their families to build the evening camp-fire with. Who write the temperance appeals and clamor about the flowing bowls? Folks who will never draw another sober breath till they do it in the grave. Who edit the agricultural papers, you yam? Men, as a general thing, who fail in the poetry line, yellow covered novel line, sensation drama line, city-editor line, and finally fall back on agriculture as a temporary reprieve from the poor-house. You try to tell me anything about the newspaper business! Sir, I have been through it from Alpha to Omaha, and I tell you the less a man knows the bigger noise he makes and the higher salary he commands. Heaven knows, if I had been ignorant, instead of cultivated, and impudent instead of diffident, I could have made a name for myself in this cold, selfish world. I take my leave, sir. Since I have been treated as you have treated me, I am perfectly willing to go. But I have done my duty. I have fulfilled my contract as far as I was permitted to do it. I said I could make your paper of interest to all classes—and I have. I said I could run your circulation up to twenty thousand copies, and if I had had two more weeks I'd have done it. And I'd have given you the best class of readers that ever an agricultural paper had—not a farmer in it, nor a solitary individual who could tell a watermelon tree from a peach vine to save his life. You are the loser by this rupture, not me, pie-plant. Adios."

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President--Lincoln--will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

The Republican Canvass

In the interior of the State is becoming red-hot. Enthusiastic meetings are being held nightly, in many places, and the ability of the republicans to carry the State triumphantly in spite of democratic gold and democratic frauds is daily becoming more absolutely certain. The checklists in towns where the selectmen are democrats are receiving proper attention from the republicans and thorough work is being done in the line of getting home absent voters. Such work in every town is needed, for the democracy have shown that they will stop at nothing to win a victory for their side, and the honest voters of the State should run no risk of allowing them to win it. A full vote is all that is needed to send into merited retirement the party which perpetrates and applauds such frauds as have been carried on in Manchester and this city since the democratic gerrythander, and the indications were never more cheering than now that the republican vote will be a full one on Tuesday next. The brilliant republican victories in the city elections in Maine on Monday, so much ahead of even the most extravagant hopes of the most sanguine republicans, stimulated the already glowing enthusiasm of the party in this State to the boiling point and correspondingly depressed the democracy, already very feeble in their minds from the exposure of the gigantic preparations for democratic frauds in Manchester. The democratic managers find vain their expectations that the republicans would be turned aside from their overhauling of the war record of Daniel Marcy and his supporters, and their exposures of the iniquities of the New Hampshire democracy, by the hue and cry about the Belknap corruption; and they are terribly disappointed thereat. They find that the republicans think it their first duty to preserve their own State from the grasp of dishonest tricksters, and that no shouting of "look at Belknap" will make them cease looking at the democratic wards in Manchester and Portsmouth or make them stop talking about the Weston fraud and the wretched record of the last democratic legislature.

The Constitutional Convention.

One question to be submitted to the voters of this State next Tuesday cannot be construed into a party measure—the question whether or no a convention shall be called to amend the State constitution. One provision of that ancient document provides that none but Protestants shall hold office. This provision is and long has been a dead letter, as it should be, for the State has no business to meddle with any religion, in any way; but being of no force the provision should be stricken out. Then for the sake of economy, there should be several changes. The House of Representatives should be reduced and the Senate increased in number, and the State elections and sessions of the Legislature should be biennial. Every day that our Legislature with its present numbers is in session, it costs the State over $1200. If the House was cut down to 150 members, it would reduce this expense over $650, and also make it more efficient for the dispatch of business. When we consider the amount that is thus wasted in the course of a session of several weeks, the Constitutional Convention becomes important as a financial measure. But probably not one voter in twenty will vote either for or against the calling of a convention, unless an answer to the question if one shall be called is printed on the ballots; the matter will go by default, one way or the other. In this view of the matter, would it not be well for both parties to prepare ballots bearing an affirmative?

Get Them Home.

There is hardly a town in New Hampshire but has more or less republican voters away from home, many of them at a distance. Measures should be taken to bring these men home to vote. Not a vote should be lost, that it is possible to secure in this or any other legitimate way. The democrats will bring into the State, to vote, hundreds of men who have no legal right to do so. Let us see to it, at least, that no republicans who have a legal right to vote are allowed to remain away.

An Appeal.

The following urgent appeal is published for the benefit of those naval officers at this station who have not received the circular:

NAVAL ACADEMY, ANNAPOLIS, MD.,
February 28th, 1876.

Sir: At a meeting of the line officers of this station it was proposed to request each officer of and above the grade of lieutenant to contribute 5 Dollars and each officer below that grade 3 Dollars, to enable the committee to employ counsel, defray expenses, etc., in attempting to secure the repeal of the six year clause.

Those who may desire to assist the purpose will please send amount mentioned above to Committee. Should there be anything remaining after the contest it will be reserved as a permanent line fund or will be returned pro rata to contributors. Committee will thank contributors to state which plan they prefer, or if the amount collected is not sufficient we would be pleased if you will permit the Committee to call on you again for an amount equal to that mentioned above. The committee will keep stations informed as to progress and requests the heartiest assistance from every line officer.

Address of the committee.

Very respectfully,

Signed { W. S. SCHLEY, Com'dr.,

News and Notes.

Piper, the belfry murderer of Boston, is to have a new trial.

The Danube is still on a bender in Hungary. Pesth is overflowed, and houses are daily going down. The gas works of the city are destroyed. Other rivers are also on the overflow.

Judge Taft of Ohio has been appointed Secretary of War.

The asylum for aged persons, at Brooklyn, N. Y., was burned on the morning of the 7th, and some thirty of the inmates lost their lives. Eigteen bodies have been recovered.

A train on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad went through a bridge, on the night of the 6th, and ten persons were killed and several others severely wounded.

There is nothing so tends to shorten the lives of old people and to injure their health as the practice of sitting up late, especially winter evenings, and more especially when there are grown up daughters in the family.

—Scene, a butcher's stand. Butcher—"Come, John, be lively now, break the bones in Mr. William's chops and put Mr. Smith's ribs in the basket for him." John (briskly)—"All right, sir; just as soon as I've sawed off Mrs. Murphy's leg."

—In a Saratoga cemetery is a tombstone with the following inscription: "Emma, daughter of Abraham and Matilda C., and wife of Theodore S., died Aug. 10, 1869, aged 26 years, leaving five children—married too young against her father's will. Single women take warning." This is a moral well pointed, and graveyards are full of them, but the warning is not always lettered on the headstone.

—John Knipe was arraigned in the Washington-place police court, New York, charged with knocking Patrick Gilfoy down. But it came out that the complainant used abusive language to the mother-in-law of the defendent, whereupon Mr. Knipe promptly knock-d Gilfoy down. Justice Kilbreth, in rendering his decision, said: "Mr. Knipe, you are discharged, as you are the first man ever brought before me for taking his mother-in-law's part; you acted just right."

—Some remarkable observations have lately been made in regard to the heat of the human body. By means of an ingenious instrument recently invented by Dr. Lombard, of New York, it is ascertained that a woman's body is warmer than that of a man by about three-fourths of a degree, and sometimes as high as one-half a degree, while in no instance has the warmth of a male's body been found to be greater than that of a female. It is also definitely ascertained that children are decidedly warmer than adults, the difference being about one degree Fahrenheit, and that the younger the child the greater the diversity. A difference in the heat of the sides of the body is discovered to be an invariable law. The left side of the head, and extending downward to the base of the neck, is much hotter than the right side. These curious facts open up to medical men a new line of research and inquiry.

The huge, drastic, griping, sickening pills constructed of crude, coarse and bulky ingredients, are fast being superseded by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or Sugar Coated, Concentrated Root and Herbal Juice, Anti-Bilious Granules—the "Little Giant" Cathartic or Multum in Parvo Physic. Modern Chemical Science enables Dr. Pierce to extract from the juices of the most valuable roots and herbs their active medicinal principles, which, when worked into little Pellets or Granules, scarcely larger than mustard seed, renders each little Pellet as active and powerful as a large pill, while they are much more palatable and pleasant in effect.

Dr. Ira A. Thayer, of Baconsburg, Ohio, writes: "I regard your Pellets as the best remedy for the conditions for which you prescribe them of anything I have ever used, so mild and certain in effect, and leaving the bowels in an excellent condition. It seems to me they must take the place of all other cathartic pills and medecines."

Lyon & Macomber, druggists, Vermillion, D. T., say: "We think they are going to sell like hot cakes as soon as people get acquainted with them and will spoil the pill trade, as those that have used them like them much better than large pills."

Explanatory.

In Saturday's CHRONICLE we published an item to the effect that William Quinn had been bound over to appear before the Circuit Court for an assault on a man named Welsh, and in the kindliness of our feelings toward the Circuit Court suggested to that tribunal that to hang Mr. Quinn would be a good thing. During the day a well dressed and perfectly sober man called upon us, said he was William Quinn and suggested that it was hardly the fair thing to condemn a man before he was tried, or to imply that a man was a public nuisance when he was a temperate man and had never been charged with any other offence than fighting, and that but three times. We intimated that to the best of our recollection we had reported more and other charges as having been made against William Quinn in the police court, when he explained that there are four persons of that name in this city, and referred us to the police to verify his assertions. He further said that in this case he acted in self-defence, as he was assailed with a knife before pitching into the other man, as he would be able to show on his trial. We thereupon offered to give place in our columns to a statement by himself, if he would hand one in, and understood him to say he would do so; but as he has not, and Officer Hobbs corroborates his assertions that he does not drink, has not been before the courts on any other charge than for fighting, and that there are really as many William Quinns as he said, we write this explanation on our own book, as we believe in fair play all around. We therefore withdraw our advice to the Circuit Court, and respectfully suggest that the Court judge Mr. Quinn's case solely on its merits.

Jottings.

Senator Oglesby of Illinois, Senator Wadleigh, and Gen. Harriman speak at the Temple to-night. Ex.Gov. Noyes and Messrs. Oglesby and Wadleigh addressed an immense audience Tuesday evening at Concord, all three making telling speeches. Senator Oglesby makes very droll illustrations in his speech and his arguments are irresistable. Ex-Gov. Noyes is expected to speak here next Monday evening.

Ship Grandee, Capt. Jacobs, of this port, arrived at Callao, Feb. 7, sixty-nine days from New York,—the shortest passage on record. She sailed from Callao Feb. 10th for Pacasmayo, on the Peruvian coast.

Two ice barges in tow of a steamer, bound from Kennebec to Newark, N. J., were in the lower harbor on Monday. One had eight hundred tons on board, and the other a thousand tons.

The Boston and Maine Railroad seems to have entered on that downward grade, from which it is as difficult for a great corporation to "e'er return," as for other folks. The stock has been lately quoted in the Boston papers almost "as low as 90," but under the assurance of Director Osgood, rallied to par; but it is difficult to see how it is really worth much more than the P. S. & P., since both are in the same unfortunate predicament, of owning a line of road where there is too much money expended for the travel, present or prospective. Railroad quarrels are usually no less disastrous than other strifes. It is better as far as possible, to live at peace with all men.

We have received from the publishers, G. D. Russell & Co., No. 126 Tremont street, Boston, "My Old Home in Alabama Fo' De' War"—song and chorus, by H. P. Danks, and "Call Me Home Mother," by E. Brooks.

Mr. J. K. Osgood of Maine, and Mr. John W. Drew, President of the Concord Reform Club, who spoke here so effectually a few weeks ago, have been engaged by the Reform Club of this city, and will talk to the citizens this evening at Franklin Hall. The good work these apostles of temperance have done in New Hampshire is truly wonderful, and it seems as if they had been raised up by Providence to persuade the intemperate to live sober lives. In order to defray the expenses, the Club deem it necessary to collect the small fee of five cents at the door.

The dispatch published in the Boston papers of Wednesday evening from this city, stating that City Missionary Loyne died on Monday, originated in Boston.

Sagamore S. F. Engine, No. 2, was sent to Manchester for repairs on Monday. Her place is temporarily supplied by hand engine Granite State.

Bible Scholars.

A story comes from Albany revealing a most deplorable unfamiliarity with the Scriptures among the Senators and even on the part of our accomplished Lieutenant-Governor. Senator Starbuck, having warned Senator Woodin, in his speech on the Grey Nuns bill, how he violated the ninth commandment in the future, there was much curiosity expressed after adjournment by Senator Woodin and his friends as to the nature of the fault with which he was charged. Nobody could say what the ninth commandment was. A Bible was sent for, and Senators Woodin and Jacobs were both looking in vain for the commandments when Lieutenant-Governor Dorsheimer came along.

"Here," said the Governor, in his usual affable manner, "give me that book; I'll show you where to find it."

"Do you know where to look for the ten commandments?" queried half a dozen Senators in the same breath.

"Why, of course I do," he replied, as he took the book from Senator Jacobs.

"The ten commandments," said the lieutenant-governor, stretching himself to his full height of six feet four, as the conscious possessor of important information—"the ten commandments are to be found in Christ's sermon on the mount, which you will find in the writings of St. Matthew," and leisurely turning over the leaves of the Bible until he came to Matthew, he commenced his hunt for the ten commandments. The first time he went through the book hurriedly, like a man who was perfectly familiar with the work he was handling and could almost name the chapter and verse. But he did not find the commandments, and again turned back to the first chapter and renewed the search with more care and deliberation, but blushing like a school-boy, and evidently ill at ease as he approached the end of St. Matthew's writings for a second time.

"Well, that is very singular," he said, "I thought I could put my finger right upon them. But they are here I know, and I will find them this time," he remarked with desperation as for the third time he turned to the first chapter of St. Matthew and began to run his finger over it carefully, closely scanning each verse.

"Please, Mr. Dorsheimer," said the little page-boy who had been sent for the Bible, and who had been closely watching it since he brought it into the chamber, having been charged to bring it back, as it was the only copy about the capitol. "Please, sir, I can tell you where the ten commandments are. They are in the twentieth chapter of Exodus, and were given to Moses by the Lord in a mountain, when he was leading the children of Israel out of captivity."

Mr. Dorsheimer gave the boy a quarter, while the Senators retired with their handkerchiefs in their mouths.—N. Y. paper.

—Mrs. Swisshelm hits the mark in a letter to the Chicago Tribune, in which she says: "We need a religion which means 'sixteen ounces of sugar for a pound,' and no sand in it."

—The Louisville Courier-Journal tells of an impecunious tramp thereaway who offered a canceled postage stamp for sale at a high price as a sacred relic, declaring that it was from one of St. Paul's letters to the Corinthians. This is a hard Winter.

—A Sydney (N. S. W.) editor has the following placard posted outside his office: "'Time is money.' The editor is not to be seen; if you do insist, the first five minutes a sovereign, a quarter of an hour four sovereigns, half an hour fifteen pounds, after which every one will be ejected by the window."

—The following advertisement recently appeared in a Western paper: "A father wants to find a school for his son where a manly and useful education will be given him, and where the teachers do not fill the heads of their pupils with humbug stories about nations that died and were buried thousands of centuries ago, not a citizen of which could either command a steamboat or keep a hotel."

Daily Chronicle.

—The Norwich Bulletin says that the prohibitionists and greenbacks men having had their meetings, it is now proposed to call a convention of citizens who believe that you can drive away the rheumatism by burying a black cat in the cellar.

—"Tie backs" would seem, after all, to be no new fashion, but simply an old fashion revived. Hesiod, who wrote twenty-seven hundred years ago, says: "Let no fair woman tempt thy sliding mind with garments gathered in a knot behind."

—A great many foreign counts have visited Chicago, and the Chicago Journal has met them, and its opinion is given in two lines and a half, viz. "Many a man who would fall as a street-car conductor could take hold and make a first-class foreign count."

—In her whaling days Nantucket supplied the rest of the world with 1,598,667 barrels of oil. These figures indicate the total yield from all the voyages between 1815 and 1870. In its palmy days the island owned 115 whaling vessels at one time; to-day, not a single ship.

—The Woonsocket (R. I.) Patriot explains a point in Rhode Island politics as follows: "Our state is so small that it is difficult to turn any one out of office without his legs sticking over in Massachusetts or Connecticut; hence the reason why we give a life estate to our Congressmen."

—Centennial year revives the fashion of wearing a patch of court plaster on the nicely powdered or enamelled face. There seems to be a difference of opinion as to the gentility of this 1776 style, but inasmuch as both Martha and George adopted it, there ought not to be a prolonged dispute.

—"Say, ma, wa'nt England the mother of this country?" "Yes my son, you ought to know that." "Well—wa'n't George Washington his father?" "Why—y—yes, of course." "Well, ma, wot I wanto inquire is—" "You—you go right out and spit that wood, George, or I'll inquire you?"

—An "able seaman" from Ardamurchan was at the tiller of his sloop one night, shortly after the introduction of colored signal lights on ships. A steamer was approaching and Archy saw the green and red lights for the first time at sea. He astonished his shipmates by yelling out, "Hard a-port—hard a-port! We're gaun richt intae the 'pothecary's shop at Gourock!"

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-tenths of the books in brick demand at the public libraries are "vapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

on this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and immorality, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debauches the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gauzy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits "ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome and really attractive magazine is employed for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands a wider circle within reach, amongst its ers and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

Rev. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A more attractive and trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Feb. '76) for $3.50.

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and the two handsome bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is $7.00. Or for $6.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and the two bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00

Each the volume is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volume contains over 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, sonnets, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 6,000 book pages costing $50.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

Ten years ago Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. established their advertising agency in New York City. Five years ago they absorbed the busines conducted by Mr. John Hooper, who was the first to go into this kind of enterprise. Now they have the satisfaction of controlling the most extensive and complete advertising connection which has never been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. They have succeeded in working down a complex business into so thoroughly a systematic method that no change in the newspaper system of America can escape notice, while the widest information upon all topics interesting to advertisers is placed readily at the disposal of the public.

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1875, from the date of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and the orders for additional quantities came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that it Was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have been cross and worthless. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was advised to try your Condition Pills, and took one box, where I by several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took before. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills yesterday, truly as represented by my orders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done me by taking. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I could not live long. I have tried many, but most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials I read that they were worth ten dollars in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give before I would do without them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly, with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint, constantly causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to sleep to pick up any small article from the floor. I have never found anything to do a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I was subject to pain all my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Con-gregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and sent you the last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as easy as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it wonderful that I suffered from Piles, Constipation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money were no object. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 16, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Rosindale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the luxury trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

Westminster Hotel,

ON THE EUROPEAN PLAN.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

PULMOCINE.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arms, arts and industries and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on this continent. We shall meet under peculiar and unprecedented circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democracy, and it proposes to boldly bare the secrets of the Administration now drawing to a close. The course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall in pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the present work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many great evils to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may see the close of our debt. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are hopes that it will at last emerge from depressed revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued regard of all old subscribers, and the accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan necessities or personal hopes or antipathies.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and will rejoice whenever those principles are vindicated under the ballot-box, and have their proper reward in the servant of successes or conventions; it must approve what it deems good in the acts and professions of either party, and will apologize for the wrong from neither. In giving the news it endeavors to set forth the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to elect honest men, whom the country knows and can trust; to secure hard money Administrative reform, and economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the Democrats, the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Ohio and Pennsylvania Ring, stealing the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people ready to support its positions, and hopes to be so clearly right in its political courses through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater influence.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that concessions and improvements have more than within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a nearer but higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost candor with judicial fairness; and its columns free from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the misrepresentations its success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.

THE TRIBUNE is a family paper, and a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of its favor; it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the year 1875 it kept up the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" but come it be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the use of honest means and the most lavish expenditure to procure the fresh est intelligence, the most complete reports, the most interesting letters and essays, and the ablest work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, while its list of outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

THE VICKSBURG SLAUGHTER.

The Lebanon Free Press prints a letter from Capt. Nelson G. Gill to Mr. W. F. Bryant of Lebanon, with Mr. Bryant's account of who Capt. Gill is, as follows:

Capt. Nelson G. Gill is a native of New York, who served under Grant at Vicksburg; and a braver man never drew a sword. After the close of the war, Capt. Gill settled at Holly Springs, Miss. Mrs. Gill founded the first colored school ever established in that State. N. G. Gill has been repeatedly elected a member of the legislature at Jackson. He was a member of the committee appointed to investigate the Vicksburg affair. His character was never called in question by his most violent opponent.

HOLLY SPRINGS, MISS., Jan. 31, 1876.

Mr. W. F. Bryant: Dear Sir:—In reply to yours of Jan. 2d, I send the report and evidence in the Vicksburg slaughter. Crosby had been forced to resign the office of sheriff by a brutal mob of several hundred men for no alleged reason except that his bond was not a good one. The real reason was that they were a desperate lot of pennyless rascals who were too lazy to work and wanted the money that is made out of the office, amounting to some $12,000 in this, the richest county in the State, and that they thought this too good a thing for a "Nigger" to have. That slaughter, which went on without check for several days, in some parts of the county, was really the beginning of the late campaign, though Sheridan's advent in New Orleans threw a damper on it and would, if he had been properly sustained by the Northern people and the National Government, saved us the butcheries of the late canvass, and given us an election instead of a farce. The Mississippi Legislature by a resolution endorsed Sheridan, and I never voted for anything with more earnestness in my life than I did for that resolution, and later, when the gallant Phil visited Jackson, I swung my hat and called for "three rousing cheers for the hero of Shenandoah." But the North had not gumption enough to stand by the only General who has understood the situation and dared to meet it in a manly and sensible way. The real opening (or rather re-opening) of the campaign after Sheridan had silenced them, was at Clinton, Hurd county, when the White Leaguers opened fire into a crowd of 2500 men, women and children without the least cause or provocation. Not a gun would have been fired by a colored man but for Charles Caldwell, as brave a man as ever lived, who, after begging or doing every thing that man could do to get the White Leaguers to cease firing, and after the colored men had all run off the ground, he rallied them and returned the fire, killing three of the ruffians. The slaughter went on night and day for three or four days, the White Leaguers riding all over the country, seeking prominent colored men and white republicans, and killing what they could catch. Several hundred colored men were refugees in the city of Jackson, for a week or more; many others slept in the woods. In Yazoo county, a perfect reign of terror existed for two months before the election. One man, a leader of the White Leaguers, by the name of Dixon, boasts that he has killed twelve men since Sept. 1st, and twenty in his life. He tried to kill the Sheriff and publicly boasts that he "emptied his revolver right at him, and don't see how in hell he missed him." This sheriff I know personally, and had known for ten years. He has two brevets, one as Major and one as Lieut.-Col., on recommendation of Gen. Grant, for gallantry on the battle-field. He is a gentleman of culture and an honorable man. Has been in Yazoo county ten years, and in public office six years. He was elected Sheriff two years ago by a vote of about 2700 against 800. This year but seven republican votes were cast in the county, and 4400 democratic, according to White League returns. The Sheriff did not dare enter the county for two months before the election, and he is not cowardly. Not one republican meeting was attempted in the county. Some republican tickets were printed and sent there, but not one dared vote them openly. So it was in some other counties, only not quite as bad. These things and no show of protection from anywhere, had the effect to discourage republicans in all parts of the State. In this county, democrats publicly and privately told colored men that they could get no land to work, or any chance to live if they did not vote with them. Bribes were freely used. Last year (1874) we had a very short crop. Colored men had to buy food on credit during '75, and when they asked it, the merchants would insist on a pledge not to vote against them or to vote with them. A few days ago, a very intelligent colored woman, wife of the Treasurer of Yazoo county, said: "When we were slaves our masters would not let us be killed, but now no one protects us. Our husbands have to sleep in the woods to save their lives, and our enemies slaughter us at will without hindrance or check." Oh! what a government. What a ridiculous farce. When will the people of the North understand the situation and have sense enough to do justice. In Columbus, near Alabama, democrats fired some old sheds, the night before the election, and started the report that negroes were firing the town. One hundred and fifty Alabamians were in town, with guns, and stayed till election was over. When the cry was raised that negroes were firing the town, the democrats turned out and shot colored men wherever found, killed eight, wounded many, and the next day all was quiet. No colored men voting, and that in a city where they are in the majority. At Aberdeen, on election day, the White Leaguers came to the Court House in an organized military body, fully armed, and ordered all republicans away from the polls. The Sheriff, a brave man, protested, but they pressed him so hard that he fled to his jail and locked himself in. At Port Gibson the colored men were driven from the polls, one killed. In several counties ballot boxes were destroyed while on the way to the several Court Houses, etc. Our election was a farce, and we who have fought through the war and have since battled for the honor of the Government, exposing ourselves to more danger than while in war, are called by many republicans of the North, oppressors of the Southern people. The fact is, these Southern States should have been kept under the control of the National Government.

Yours truly, N. G. GILL.

["Senator Morton's Bloody Shirt" has struck terror to many a leader of the Northern democracy, and a piteous wail goes up from every Bourbon newspaper to take it in. "These things are not so," say they; the South accepts the situation, sustains the amendments and awards to the negro his rights as a citizen of the United States. How far they have accepted the situation has been demonstrated by the intimidation practised in the Southern States in 1875, and by the recent speeches of Southern Congressmen. The above letter is a valuable bit of history.—Ed. Free Press.]

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President --Lincoln--will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who reverse the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

Democratic Honesty.

In view of the great outcry of the democrats about the necessity of putting them in power so they can have a chance to purify things, the following evidence as to the manner in which these precious conservators of purity carried the election in Manchester last year may be interesting. This evidence was given before the Committee on Elections at Concord last June, and all the witnesses are democrats save one:

Benjamin P. Burpee, democratic Selectman of Ward Five: I wrote on all the names on the list. I canvassed the ward with the other selectmen for voters. Thomas J. Morrison canvassed the ward afterward and brought 400 or 500 hundred names. I think Jackson gave me 100 names which he said Morrison had found. About dark election night Morrison asked me for names not checked on the list, and I took them off for him. After we had canvassed we had 400 names on the back of the list.

Thomas Howe, democratic Selectman of Ward Five: I canvassed the ward with Burpee and Sleeper before election, and I canvassed it again after election for ratable polls. We had four hundred names on the back of the list then. I do not know how many names Morrison brought; there might be more than a hundred. Sleeper (the republican selectman) was not present, and he was not invited when we made the list.

William F. Sleeper, republican Selectman of Ward Five: have no knowledge of the names on the back of the list. I was present in the evening; saw one man vote five times, another three times and others twice. Late in the evening saw the other selectmen copying off names and handing them out. I did not know the state of the vote before the final declaration. Think 200 votes were cast after 7 o'clock. John Lyons voted twice. I know him; he lives on Park street; he voted first in the afternoon and then in the evening on the name of Lynch; I do not know the names of the men who voted three times; one man about thirty-five years old and who weighed about 150 pounds voted three times; he was dressed the same all the time. I said to the moderator, "That man has voted two or three times before," but no attention was paid to me. A small man voted four times, but in changed clothes; twice he had on a cap, and once a hat, and once a hat and muffler; his face was not concealed. The attention of the moderator was called to him, but he said if the name is on list I shall take the vote. Nothing was ever said to me about making up the list of ratable polls.

Darwin A. Simons, democratic City Marshal: I was present in Ward Five from 7 to 11 o'clock; there were six or eight officers there. About ten o'clock there was trouble in the room; some one tore off Haynes' collar and some parties were hustled out. Mr. French was challenging votes. Some one said "What is that man in the desk for?" I said, "French, I wish you would not incite this crowd to a fight."

George J. Little, present Clerk of Ward Five: I did not certify to the number of names on the list in the certificates issued to members. We counted up the vote at 10 o'clock, and counted it nearly every hour. Howe, Burpee and myself took off names and passed them out half a dozen times. Martin J. Foley acted as clerk election day.

Martin J. Foley, Clerk of Ward Five: Of the men who voted after 9 o'clock I know only one. Perhaps seventy-five votes were cast after eight o'clock. There were over 1400 names on the front and over 700 on the back of the list.

Albert Jackson, Moderator of Ward Five: Kept the meeting open until a quarter past eleven. At a little past seven o'clock we were seventy-one votes behind in the city. At midnight after the polls were closed we were ahead 4 or 5 votes on the State ticket.

Bear in mind that the foregoing evidence was given by the very men who perpetrated the outrageous frauds which elected a democratic mayor, State senator and Congressman, and who would certainly not "paint the devil any blacker than he is," and then ask yourself if the party whose orators and papers endorse and defend such villainies is worthy of being entrusted with full power in the State?

No democratic editor or speaker has ever had honesty or manliness enough to denounce the democratic scoundrelism carried on in Manchester and this city; on the contrary, the Manchester Union but a few days ago, with full knowledge of what was done last year and doubtless with full knowledge of what it is proposed to do this year, declared that the checklist of Ward Five last year was as honest a list as was ever posted, and that of this year like unto it!

Take the story as told by the democratic selectmen themselves. Two of them hunted the ward for voters, put on the name of every man they could find, and afterward, in the absence of the only republican member of the board, added four or five hundred other names which were handed to them by a democratic fugler! Then when night came and "we were seventy-one votes behind in the city," these honest democratic officials passed out names for the repeaters to vote on; imported and homebred ruffians assaulted and "hustled out" of the ward-room any republican who dared question the right of Massachusetts repeaters to vote more than three times, the democratic city marshal and police keeping order by energetically looking on and telling republican challengers of illegal votes "not to incite that crowd to a fight!" No wonder that "at midnight, when the polls were closed, we [the democrats] were four or five ahead on the State ticket!"

What a sweet set the fellows who perpetrated such frauds are to talk of honesty and purity; what immaculateness we would have a right to expect from the party which approves such acts, if that party was to get control of State and Nation. Belknap's guilt sinks into insignificance when compared with the doings of these democratic tricksters, for his crime was but the crime of one man, while the corrupt deeds perpetrated at Manchester strike at the very root of our institutions—the right of the majority of legal voters to rule. In fact, even the infamous usurpation of Weston and his backers, last June, was hardly a more dangerous blow at our liberties than was the triumph of mob law, ballot-box stuffing and repeating in March.

No wonder the democratic stumpers bellow "look at Belknap!" but it won't do; the black record of the democratic party nearer home overshadows all other considerations, and the more that record is inspected the blacker it appears.

The Wrong Ox Gored.

Can it be possible that the democrats are not spotless? Here we have that great democratic champion and perpetual candidate for the Presidency, Mr. George H. Pendleton of Ohio, as a chief actor in a transaction with the Belknaps quite as discreditable as the sale of the Fort Sill sutlership. The story is detailed in our telegraphic despatches. Its responsible author is the New York Herald, and if it is not true, that newspaper has laid itself open to heavy damages in a libel suit. Other features of the story are that Marsh could have testified to all these facts, and that Clymer of the investigating committee knew it, so that this is the secret reason why Clymer was in such a hurry to get Marsh off to Canada, and why the democrats have suddenly lost all desire for Belknap's impeachment or prosecution. As it stands now before the country, the administration has suffered all the disgrace which follows the successful impeachment of the Cabinet officer. His ruin cannot be more complete than it is now. And to bring into the circle of fraud and wickedness such a prominent democrat as George H. Pendleton would almost turn the tables upon that party. The situation in Washington is growing interesting for both parties.—Worcester (Mass.) Gazette.

The story concerning Pendleton is as follows: "It appears from the records of the departments that the Kentucky Central Railroad, after having been paid the usual military rates for transportation during the war, filed a claim through Pendleton for the difference between these rates and ninety per cent. of the regular rates, the amount being $158,533. Secretary Stanton twice refused to pay this after two adverse reports from Quartermaster General Meigs. In the Fall of 1870, Pendleton wrote Belknap, asking him to reopen the case, which was again referred to Gen. Meigs, who again reported adversely. Belknap then referred it to Assistant Judge Advocate General McKee Dunn, who gave a favorable opinion, on which the case was reopened. The claim was then approved by Belknap, under whose instructions the warrants were rushed through the Treasury Department in one day, and the money paid to Gen. G. H. Pendleton June 12, 1871. Of this money Mrs. Belknap has stated in the presence of democratic friends this Winter that she received some $35,000. Soon after receiving this money Mrs. Belknap, then Mrs. Bowers, made the four of Europe with Hon. Heister Clymer, Mr. and Mrs. Marsh, Hon. George H. Pendleton and others, and the railroad claim was freely talked of in the party. The railroad claim was also alluded to last week at the interview at the Arlington Hotel between Mrs. Marsh, Mrs. Belknap and some mutual Kentucky friends, and Mrs. Belknap declared that although it was said that she had received $70,000 from Pendleton, she had received only about half of that amount. But no effort was made by Mr. Clymer to investigate this charge, and when his attention was called to it he evasively replied that there was not evidence enough to implicate Mr. Pendleton, and he permitted Marsh and his wife to escape into Canada. He was anxious to have the Secretary of War in a republican Cabinet impeached, but he did not desire to trouble the democratic Pendleton, and he was willing to shield the Kentucky woman.

Let us look at what Mr. Heister Clymer has done in the Belknap case. Marsh was a witness who, not only by his word, but because of papers he held, could, as Mr. Clymer and his committee assert, convict Belknap of malfeasance in office. Marsh testified; articles of impeachment were based upon his testimony; Clymer was warned that Marsh was about to depart the country; Clymer, having the legal power to detain him, allows him to depart with all the original papers, so that it is now doubtful whether Belknap can be impeached. In the meantime it is proposed to indict Belknap; the House of Representatives, led by Clymer, and Lamar, directs its members to disregard the mandate of the Court. There is no glossing over the fact, that the republicans are not only willing but anxious to afford the courts all the aid possible in ascertaining and punishing the offence of Belknap, whatever it may prove to be, and the democrats are withholding upon a pure technicality such testimony as would be legitimate, and would tend, at least, to the bringing out of the truth. One thing is perfectly clear; the democrats in the House of Representatives, for some reason, are trying to shield Belknap.

This case of Belknap is not one for party maneuvering; it ought to be considered and dealt with in its relations to the public service. The republican party neither desires concealments, nor will excuse any direliction of duty. On the other hand the people will not be deceived as to the record, position or aims of the democracy on account of this revelation. As it first appeared, it was bad enough, is likely to prove disgraceful enough, but it will not shield the democrats in playing fast and loose with an important public matter, nor will it wipe out from the memory the greatly larger offences in this same or other directions of the democrats in high places. In a word, the case should be dealt with upon its merits. If, as it now looks, the democratic members of the House propose to make it a merely political football, whatever the opinion may be as to Belknap, the republican party will lose not nearly so much in public estimation in consequence thereof as will the democratic, which cares not a fig, apparently, for the real offence, but which makes it the opportunity for a cheap and disingenuous argument in the political forum.

News and Notes.

Prohibition tickets, printed by the democrats and paid for by democratic money, are being sent around the State to local democratic wire-pullers, by the democratic managers, to be put where they will do the most good. This will be interesting to honest prohibitionists who propose to vote a third party ticket, showing that they are to be used, if used at all, as a tail for the democratic kite. Probably the prohibition party has been sold out to the democrats by the individual who made a similar trade last year—the "reverend" Arthur Dearing.

At Dover, on Tuesday afternoon, Wilbur Conner, son of Mr. I. C. Conner, was drowned in Hanson Brook.

Wilmer Swett, of Lyman, committed suicide on Tuesday morning by shooting himself through the head. He was about thirty years old, and was supposed to be laboring under temporary insanity.

Ex-Judge McKean, of Utah, and others, flatly denounce as a lie the testimony of Lyons concerning the Emma mine.

The Mirror on Tuesday evening printed 155 bogus names found on the checklist of Ward Five, but considers that a very moderate number considering that Wards Five and Six adjoin each other and both are under democratic control.

Banks in Dover took at par $90,000 of the worthless acceptances substituted by John B. Floyd, democratic Secretary of War under James Buchanan, for government bonds; Berwick banks bought $25,000 of them. Government refused to pay the money, and the banks had to lose it.

Don Jose Holgoda, a wealthy Cuban merchant, residing at the Hotel Espanole on East Fourth street, New York, went down to Wall street Wednesday with his nephew and drew $30,000 from a bank in gold doubloons, which he placed inside his overcoat. At the corner of Fourth street and Broadway he was accosted by a stranger, hustled into a coach and driven off. His whereabouts is a mystery and the police are hard at work on the case.

A young lady residing on Laconia street, Biddeford, Me., attempted suicide on the night of the 6th by taking strychnine. She repented, and after an hour's hard work by two physicians she was restored. Disappointed love was the cause.

The Nashua correspondent of the Boston Post, in a report of a meeting of the chairmen of the democratic town and ward committee of Hillsborough County, says "the reports from some of the towns" were "decidedly encouraging to the democracy."

Biddeford has a new daily paper, the Chronicle, published at two cents a copy.

The republicans carried the city of Burlington, Vt., on the 7th, for the first time in many years. Mr. J. D. Hatch, their candidate for mayor, had 52 majority. The republicans carried three out of five wards.

Mr. Robbins of North Carolina, a democratic member of the investigating committee which unearthed Belknap's guilt, is charged with having taken a bribe when a member of the North Carolina senate, for which he was severely censured by the senate, though he escaped expulsion by a close vote. Robbins has been particularly active in catching Belknap. "Set a thief to catch a thief."

Pinchback was refused a seat in the U. S. Senate on the 8th, by a vote of 32 to 29.

Plenty of murder and suicide at St. Louis, Mo. Mabel Hall, a ballet girl, was shot through the head by E. M. Moore, at the Theatre Comique, on the night of the 8th. She died in fearful agony. Moore, immediately after the murder, sent a bullet into his own head. He died next evening. Miss Hall was a native of England, only seventeen, and very beautiful. Mrs. Schenck, wife of R. J. Schenck, cashier of the Iron Mountain Bank, lately committed suicide by shooting herself. The husband followed her example on the 8th.

The Western Settler's Chosen Specific.

With every advance of emigration into the far West, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly peopled regions are frequently less salubrious than older settled localities, on account of the miasma which rises from recently cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to freshets. The agricultural or mining emigrant soon learns, what he does not already know, that the Bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria and those disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels to which climactic changes, exposure, and unaccustomed or unhealthy water or diet subject him. Consequently, he places an estimate upon this great household specific and preventive commensurate with its intrinsic merits, and is careful to keep on hand a restorative and promoter of health so implicitly to be relied upon in time of need.

TO MY PATIENTS!

DR. ALBION M. DUDLEY,

NOW OF SALEM, MASS.,

TO SUCCEED ME MARCH 13th,

Will be fully entitled to the respect and confidence of the citizens of Portsmouth. I can unreservedly recommend him, not only as a gentleman in the true meaning of the term, but as a well read, skillful and conscientious

Dental Practitioner.

DR. DUDLEY already has a fine and rapidly increasing practice in Salem, and consents to come here on trial for a year, (to be in Portsmouth three days of each week, and three days in Salem), at my earnest solicitation, backed by the [illegible] gift of my practice.

I could have sold my practice with a recommendation, for a large sum, but feeling the kindness and confidence with which I have been treated, I have chosen, say, that it is impossible to do otherwise than sink private consideration of profit for the good of my patients.

If DR. DUDLEY is appreciated at his true worth by the people of Portsmouth, he can, through the confidence extended to him, be made to relinquish his practice in Salem, and settle here permanently. That such may be the result of his year of trial here is the devout wish of his friend and the friend of Portsmouth. A. P. STEVENS.

N. B.—I shall take great pleasure in presenting Dr. Dudley to such of my patients as my limited time here will permit, and also to make engagements for him with any who may wish suggestion or advice from me. A. P. S.

THE CHECK LISTS.

DEMOCRATIC TRICKERY.

Pleasant Reading for Legal Voters.

We print below partial lists of the names wrongfully on the checklists of the democratic wards of this city. Though the lists for wards one, six and there are far from complete, the showing made is enough to convince any one that the Portsmouth democracy are humble yet quite successful imitators of their Manchester brethren. The lists foot up about 160 names of men having no right whatever to vote in the wards where their names are on the lists. Some of these names are of dead men, or well-known democrats residing in other wards, and are put there on purpose to be taken off on demand, to keep up a show of fairness. On the other hand, many names of well-known republicans have been left off the lists, undoubtedly that the same sham show of fairness may be kept up by putting them on on demand; but we feel safe in saying that no republican voter's name that can be kept off will be put on, and no name of a dead or imaginary man on which a democratic vote can be put in the ballot-box will be taken off if it can be kept on:

The Republican Caucuses

In the various wards will be held this (Friday) evening, times and places as follows: Ward One, at Franklin Schoolhouse, on Christian Shore, at half-past 7 o'clock; Ward Two, at Walker Schoolhouse, on Hill street, at 7 o'clock; Ward Three, at the Ward Room, at 7 o'clock; Ward Four, at Oxford & Johnston's store, at half-past 7 o'clock; Ward Five, at the Court House, at half-past 7 o'clock; Ward Six, at the Common Council Room, at 7 o'clock; Ward Seven, at Elm Street Ward Room, at 7 o'clock. We do not need to urge the importance of a full attendance of the party at the caucuses, and the nomination of the best candidates that can be selected. We will be obliged if the officers of the meetings, or other persons, will furnish us with the names of the candidates nominated as soon as convenient after the caucuses are over.

The Civil War.

The following account of another episode in the revolutionary war now and for some time past raging in the Portsmouth Artillery Company, in imitation of the days of '76, has been handed in and will be read with interest by all;

Fifteen men under the leadership of Lt. Utch entered the gun house at South End, Thursday evening. Capt. Marvin, who as deputy of the Adjutant General has the charge of the State military property kept there, was soon informed of this conduct of the fifteen men, and went there in full uniform and ordered them out, calling each man by name. They refused to go, and threatened him with violence. He went up stairs to the second story and with drawn sword held the assailants in check until he fastened the door. They soon brought a plank and using it as a battering ram were like to demolish it until a pistol shot coming through the door caused a hasty retreat of the besiegers. Capt. Marvin then came out and closing the doors went peacably to his home.

Jottings.

City Missionary William A. Loyne received on Monday, the 6th, another donation of five hundred dollars toward building his "Paradise Home" for aged and needy women. Another substantial cash gift was also sent in on Wednesday, both being from residents. The lot just purchased, on which the building is to be situated, is at the corner of South and Broad streets, and work on the foundation will be commenced early this Spring.

John G. Sinclair was advertised to speak at Candia, Thursday evening, but was unable to go, and telegraphed for Moses H. Call, Esq., of this city, to go up there and feed the democracy on the sincere milk of the word. He went.

George E. Hodgdon, Esq., has been nominated as candidate for the legislature by the democracy of ward four. Good choice. He acted as civil engineer in laying out the political map of Portsmouth as it now exists, and as political engineer in carrying the gerrymander through the "reform" legislature.

A correspondent of the Boston Post, speaking of the town election at Newcastle, says "the town is under the shadow of the navy yard." As there has been nothing doing on the navy yard for a good while, it is not easy to see how its "shadow" could have had much to do with the republican victory on the 7th.

Notice to young men. There will be a partial eclipse of the moon to-night, commencing at thirty-seven minutes after twelve o'clock and ending thirty-seven minutes after two. Two persons will be able to see twice as much eclipse as one.

Brig Sally Brown, Ross, of this port, from Batavia for Boston, put into Portress Monroe, 8th inst., with loss of sails.

Mr. Charles E. Bidwell, the well-known actor and husband of Dollie Bidwell, died at Newburyport Wednesday forenoon.

The steamer Major has gone to Boston to be re-pointed and otherwise fitted up preparatory to resuming her summer trips to and from Star island.

The wife of George H. Clark, saloon keeper on Daniel street, swallowed a dose of carbolic acid, probably in crystals, on Thursday, between eleven and twelve o'clock, from the effects of which she died. Drs. Osorio and Folsom were immediately called and applied every known antidote, but failed to revive the victim, who rapidly turned black and lived but about four hours after swallowing the potion. Coroner Rider summoned a jury consisting of N. F. Mathes, Geo. E. Hodgdon and James F. Hartshorn. A post mortem examination was made and the stomach removed to be sent to Boston for analysis of its contents. The jury will have an adjourned session this morning at half-past 9 o'clock.

Schooner Annie Amsden, of Provincetown, Matheson, from Cienfuegos for Boston, was totally lost while coming from that port. She had a cargo of sugar and molasses to Messrs. Benj. Burgess & Sons. She was 256 tons register, built in this city in 1866, and was owned by Freeman, Hilliard & Co., of Boston.

"Rascaldom Doomed!" exclaimed the democratic Portland Argus, on the morning of the municipal election. And sure enough. Before the sun went down, the republicans had redeemed the city.—Boston Journal.

MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the size of the package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and a short time thereafter came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years Bad that my life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and thought I could not live long by several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving great permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I am report as well and self cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I proved one package to you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, Jr.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and say they are indeed dead wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have sold many what good they have done are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I myself took to three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials you say they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this pleasant fall $1.50 for three packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD,
Care Watson & Gannett.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing me much pain and sickness. I was unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. Several doctors, for over years a great deal for medicine, which did me good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Evening Herald. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as other people. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Kidney Complaint, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think she must prove a blessing to Women, who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. Tain, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Rockdale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

Hundreds of others have sent in unsolicited testimonials of the efficacy of these Pills. Among them are:

PULMOCINE.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the luny trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

— USE —

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall chronicle every incident under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration now drawing to a close. The course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall in pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many projects to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are hopes that it will assess the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued support of all old readers, and the accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan necessities or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion and founder, and oppose those to which it will resist whenever those principles are victorious under the old banners. But it can never be the servant of caucuses or conventions; it must speak what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to set forth the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics it seeks to be just to the men and measures whom the country knows and can trust; to secure honest money, Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it found its Tilden last Fall, during the days for the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Democrats and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania; and as earnestly striving from the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it has kept its people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course throughout all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have to the within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the Conservative with judicial fairness; will keep its columns free from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provoke from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for its readers' interests. From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE asks a continuance of the favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1871 and 1872 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally conceded, and its circulation has large greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest watchfulness and the most lavish expenditure to secure the greatest intelligence, the most complete reports, the most telling letters and essays, and the absolute work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

The Indian and His Food.

Their taste being, in some respects, rather obtuse, the flesh of which they partake is not objected to, even though it be too long since it was killed, or even whether it was killed at all. Many a buffalo calf, dying with its mother, is thus served up. They have no idea of being filthy in their habits, as who has? What if they did not wash their hands before mixing the bread, or taking up the meat? Meat is meat, and, therefore, clean. No matter if it has been carried thirty or fifty miles, swinging and dopping upon the sides of a mule, until covered with dust, sweat, and hair; it needs no washing, or at least gets none, before being put into the camp-kettle. If the hair, boiled into stews and served up with the beef, is unpalatable, it is quietly taken out of the mouth, and thrown away. Hoofs—clean, dust is clean. If dirt is, as has frequently defined, matter out of place, there is none in an Indian camp; for what can be out of place where nothing has a place? As we might be expected of a people whose subsistence depends upon the chase, they are not particular as to the kind of meat used, unless prescribed by "medicine." The buffalo, antelope, or deer has the preference; if these cannot be obtained, a pony or mule, a dog or a wolf, supplies the deficiency; and even the poor little land tortoise does not come amiss. To the latter I became somewhat partial, from the fact that, being thrown into the fire alive, and roasted with his shell on, there could none of their filth be introduced. Do not consider this act cruel. A tortoise thrown into a hot fire, with his back down, never struggles, or gives any indication of pain, but is apparently dead immediately, while he would live for hours with his head severed from his body. The Kiowas and Comanches do not eat birds or fish, neither does the Kiowas eat the flesh of the bear. They are forbidden, in the code of Bear, the medicine—labooed—or, in plain Indian, "bad medicine." Hence with them the wild turkey is valuable only for its feathers, which they use to wing their arrows. After a meal water is always offered to all who have partaken of it, to cleanse the mouth, and wash the hands. After this the pipe may be in order, but not necessarily. If it be introduced, the women withdraw and some important subject is discussed. The pipe is always circulated from one to another, from the right to the left.—Bailey.

Truth Stranger than Friction.

A remarkable occurrence, recalling in some of its features the stories recounted in the Arabian Nights, took place last week on Wood street. A humble cottage on that street is tenanted by a young couple who first year made their bridal tour to California, Oregon and Washington Territory. While engaged in salmon fishing in one of the rivers the bridegroom was so unfortunate as to drop into a current a valuable diamond ring belonging to his wife. The loss of the gem was of course mourned, but after a while the accident was forgotten, for was it recalled till last Thursday evening, when the young husband returning late at night from taking stock, discovered that his wife had prepared for supper a can of salmon. Taking it up he looked carelessly at the label and said: "Why, Marion, this salmon was put up at the very place where I lost your ring last summer. Wouldn't it be odd if a salmon had swallowed it and been caught and canned at the very factory and put into this very can, and we should find the ring in it?" His wife answered him jestingly, but he said: "I don't know how to account for it, but I have a sort of presentiment that I shall find that ring put in some such romantic manner." She had scarcely said "Don't be a goose, Gus," when her eye caught the glitter of something metallic in the can, and she fairly screamed, "Goodness, gracious me, what's that?" Her husband, who was scarcely less excited than herself, removed the foreign substance with a fork, when, what was his surprise to discover that it was indeed a big lump of solder, which in soldering the can had been permitted to fall into its contents.—Chicago Tribune.

—The Atlanta, Herald, having tried to make a joke, and having been corrected into absurdity by the printer, cries out: "The intelligent compositor is a blessing in disguise. The only trouble is that he is sometimes too deeply disguised."

"Madam," he said, "you see before you a benighted fellow-creature! I ain't a tramp, marm, I ain't! I have had my little share of wealth laid away for these rainy days; but-uh! marm, a relative and speculator brought me to this sad state, in which you see me. I was long on railroad stock, marm, and—eh? Wood? Ma! Ma! Ma! Wood? Madam, I feel you cannot realize my situation! Good morning!"—Boston Globe.

A Cherokee (Iowa) furyman got to playing with a chemical fire-extinguisher, while cogitating on a verdict, when the pesky thing (the extinguisher, not the verdict) went off and completely deluged with water and gases a lady passing under the Court House windows. The woman felt pretty much put out by the sudden immersion, while the furyman swore to gem that he never knew a water tank to get up and tree in that fashion after in all his boiler days!

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President --Lincoln--will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

The Prohibition Tickets.

PORTSMOUTH, March 10th.

Editors Chronicle: In your paper of today you state that the prohibition tickets are printed by the democrats and paid for by democratic money, and then, in attempting to give force to that statement, add that they are being sent around the State to local democratic wire-pullers by the democratic managers, to be put were they will do the most good. I wish to correct you in this matter. I know that the prohibition tickets are printed by and under the order of the Prohibition State Central Committee, are paid for by said committee and distributed by them to towns throughout the State. The prohibitionists can pay all of their bills without aid either volunteered or solicited from any other party. A. F. CRAIG, Member Prohib. State Central Com.

[If Mr. Craig had carefully read the item he refers to, he would have seen that we did not in any manner imply that the tickets distributed by the prohibition committee are furnished or paid for by democrats—in fact, that we did not mention such tickets at all. We stated simply that the democratic managers have sent, to democratic wire-pullers, prohibition tickets paid for by democratic money, showing that the democratic managers expect to gain some advantage for their party from the prohibition movement. Mr. Craig's statement is conclusive that the prohibition committee pay for the tickets sent out by them,—that is, if they have sent them out yet, for we have not seen any of them; but it has no bearing whatever on our statement that the democratic managers have also sent out prohibition tickets,—as we have convincing proof they have done.—Eds. Chron.]

News and Notes.

It is a curious coincidence that "Hon." Fernando Wood, who had possession of the floor when the committee reported the Belknap scandal, is himself undergoing investigation before a New York court on a similar charge. The creditors of one N. H. Fowler have brought a suit against Wood, alleging that Fowler paid Fernando Wood some $15,000 in return for his appointment as Corporation Attorney.

The schooner Nadal, Cheney, which sailed from Newburyport for Philadelphia on the 7th, took out thirty tons of silver ore from the Merrimack Silver Mining Company, and some beautiful specimens of Verd Antique from the "Devil's Basin," quarried by Williams and Lowry, which specimens will be placed on exhibition at the United States Mint and at the Scientific Institute at Philadelphia.

Belknap, though a scamp, is not a murderer, as the democratic papers have tried to make him out. The news from Maine proves that he did not kill the republican party.—Springfield Republican.

The Hartford Courant remarks that the exposure of Gen. Belknap's iniquity is evidently regarded by the democratic press and party leaders as the greatest windfall the party has had since the first battle of Bull Run.

When Mr. Heister Clymer improved the melancholy occasion by declaring solemnly that the facts of the sale of the tradership at Fort Sill "will for long years constitute a record of official corruption and crimes such as there is no parallel of in our own history or in that of any other country that I know of," he must have thought he was talking to those who knew nothing of our own or any other history. In the democratic regime in this country such an act would have been regarded as legitimate, and any democrat who exposed it would have been ostracised from the party. It is a trivial affair compared with the many cool contracts in Pennsylvania under Buchanan. When a republican House investigated and exposed them the whole democratic party denounced the investigation as mere partisanship.—Cincinnati Gazette.

Mr. Ephraim D. Whitcomb, of Boston, was on Thursday evening committed to jail for twelve days, by the Boston Common Council, for refusing to answer questions propounded by the Council.

How can the democrats have a National convention when they deny that there is a nation in this country? The only proper name for the democrats to adopt is the "democratic convention of the confederate States."—Bridgeport Standard.

The people of the United States are paying interest to-day on bonds stolen by Buchanan's secretary of the interior, amounting in value to over eight hundred thousand dollars. Yet the democrats in Congress and on the press declare with ridiculous solemnity that Belknap's crime is unprecedented in the history of this or any other country.—Detroit Post.

The Portland Argus, (democratic,) on the morning of the recent municipal election in that city, said "the result of this municipal election shall speak with no uncertain sound of that tidal wave of political reformation which starting in the Pine Tree State, is destined to sweep with irresistible power over the entire country." So it did; the union soldier, Gen. Fessenden, was elected by a majority much greater than the most sanguine republican had dared hope for.

Clymer, Pendleton, the Marshes and Mrs. Belknap, all old cronies together! What interesting facts they do develop at Washington!

The democratic papers have passed around an item to the effect that Harris G. Ryder, "a prominent republican" and one of the selectmen of Dunbarton, is a defaulter to the amount of $20,000. The selectmen of that town have nothing to do with handling the the town money, which only amounts to $6000 for the whole year; and all Mr. Ryder (who is sick at Burlington, Vt., and is one of the most respectable citizens of Dunbarton,) owes the town is the difference between a bill for services rendered by him, and a bill given him to collect on behalf of the town,—less than $10, on an account not yet balanced. But there were just as good grounds for the democratic slander on Mr. Ryder as for most of the other charges made by them—"the party" needs political capital to work on.

The democrats in Congress are staving off a consideration of the currency question in caucus, lest something should be said or done to do a damage in the New Hampshire election. The fact that they don't dare to do anything and show that they care more about political effect than anything else, ought to be enough to do the damage.—Globe.

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Herald, referring to the alleged corrupt payment of the Kentucky Railroad claim by Belknap says: "The facts are of a character to bring deep disgrace upon the democratic managers of the Clymer committee, whatever the result for Mr. Pendleton may be."

During the winter, the Grand Central Hotel, New York, has been refitted, refurnished and redecorated for the Centennial year. Besides the recent additions in rich and elegant carpets, furniture, etc., the most exquisite decorations in fresco-work ever designed here, no adorn the walls, ceilings and columns throughout the halls, parlors, dining-rooms and grand exchanges of this superb hotel. The Grand Central readily accommodates 1,500 guests beneath its ample roof; its table is growing steadily famous for its excellence; and urged by a spirit of liberal enterprise, which only its superior capacity to other hotels could justify, will fix its rates for the Centennial year at from $3.00 to $4.00 per day.—New York Correspondent.

Mrs. Belknap, the wife of the Ex-Secretary of War, was given away by Mr. George H. Pendleton when she was married to Mr. Belknap on the 11th of December, 1873.

An affray occurred at Henniker Wednesday, in which it is alleged that Moses D. Perry committed an assault on Mrs. Chester Bailey, severely injuring her and leaving some dangerous wounds. He was arrested on a complaint of assault with intent to kill, and taken to Concord for examination. The woman is the wife of the man now in jail charged with setting the late fire at Hinniker.

The store of Augustus Fox at Milton Mills was destroyed by fire Tuesday night. Loss $6000; insured $4300. The second story was occupied by the Odd Fellows who lost everything.

The old schooner Manchester, as we are credibly informed, is still in existence and owned in York, Me. She is 65 1-9 tons, built in Duxbury, in 1784, and is now 92 years of age—almost a centenarian. She was formerly of Gloucester, owned by Mr. Daniel Gaffney and others, and figured in one of Mr. F. H. Lane's paintings as a specimen of the olden time Grand Bankers. —Cape Ann Advertiser.

The city reports of Manchester show that the expenses of the city government for 1875 under the rule of the democratic "reform" party, are $25,000 more than they were under the republican government of the preceding year. The Ward Five engineers had to be repaid for their services somehow.

Mr. A. A. Folsom, Superintendent of the Boston & Providence Railroad, a lineal descendant of John Folsom, the first settler at Hingham, Mass., has made an arm chair of oak from the frame on the old Folsom mansion, which was erected in Hingham in the year 1638.

The Democratic party is the party of progress. Under its administration in this city the city debt, bonded and floating, has progressed over $700,000 in two years, and city taxes forty cents on one hundred dollars.—Indianapolis Journal.

Boston had a $60,000 fire, Thursday night, in a wooden and willow ware establishment on Dock Square.

A Georgia letter writer, says the Boston Herald, says:—"Edwin Booth is playing here to crowded houses, hundreds coming in from the towns around. They all admire him greatly, and they like him still better because his brother killed Mr. Lincoln. This is strange but it is true."

Scene on a ferry boat: "Your republican party has gone to the dogs. Belknap has blown you sky high. You are demoralized. The sooner Grant gives up the better." A quiet looking gentleman replied: "Your logic is irresistible. Judas took the bribe and ruined the Saviour and the apostles. Burr's treason proved that Jefferson was a traitor. Arnold took British gold and that involved in disgrace Washington and his staff. Hull was a coward, therefore Perry must have been a poltroon." "Ahem; Good morning."—Cor. Boston Journal.

David Turley, who was executed at Sacramento, for the murder of William Shaw, came originally from Missouri. His father was a Brigadier General in the Confederate service during the rebellion, but met with his death by the accidental discharge of his own pistol; his elder brother died; his younger brother killed his mother by accident, and was himself afterward killed by bushwhackers, from which his eldest sister became insane and died. John Turley, another brother, was murdered in a row in Western Kansas little more than a year ago. The brother who made the appeal for the condemned man's life was only lately discharged from eighteen months' imprisonment in the Colorado Jail for shooting a man at Central City. Turley's age was 34. —San Fran. Chron.

Shrewd dodge that of the democrats in the House to shut up the Belknap case till after the New Hamshire election.

Handsomely Squared-Up.

Secretary of the Treasury New, under date of Feb. 29th, writes Hon. N. G. Ordway as follows:

Sir: I am in receipt of your letter of the 17th inst., in regard to the account for pay and mileage of the House of Representatives from March 4th, 1863 to Dec. 1st, 1875, including 38th, 39th, 40th, 41st, 42d, 43d, and part of the 44th Congress, being the period during which you held the office of Sergeant-at-Arms.

The payments made to members of the House through the office of Sergeant-at-Arms during that time amounted to $17,715,651.75, and the account thereof has been audited and settled by this Department, with the exception of two small items of mileage, amounting to $156, which were certified to you by the Committee on Mileage and by the Speaker of the House, but which were suspended by the Comptroller: and excepting the account of disbursements since July 1st, 1875, which has been compared with the Treasurer's books and is awaiting settlement by the accounting officer of the Treasury, for all of which you have returned Speaker's certificates duly receipted by the members for which the amounts were drawn.

Very Respectfully,
JOHN C. NEW, Treasurer U. S.
Hon. N. G. ORDWAY, Washington, D. C.

—A young fellow, whose better half had just presented him with a bouncing pair of twins, attended church on Sunday. During the discourse the clergyman looked at our innocent friend directly, and said in a tone of thrilling eloquence, 'Young man, you have an important responsibility thrust upon you." The newly fledged dad, supposing the preacher referred to his peculiar home event, considerably startled the audience by exclaiming, "Yes, sir; I have two of them."

—One morning, during the recent cold weather, Miss Lily refused to get up and be washed. Her aunt who follows the modern mode of dealing with children, and considers that they should always be argued with but never made to do as they are bid, in vain exhausted her eloquence in describing the excellencies of purification, for the infant logician fairly confuted her by this ingenious antithesis: "Aunt Mary, you do as you like and let me do as I like. You like to be clean and cold, I like to be warm and dirty."

The huge, drastic, griping, sickening pills constructed of crude, coarse and bulky ingredients, are fast being superseded by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or Sugar Coated, Concentrated Root and Herbal Juice, Anti-Bilious Granules—the "Little Giant" Cathartic or Multum in Parvo Physic. Modern Chemical Science enables Dr. Pierce to extract from the juices of the most valuable roots and herbs their active medicinal principles, which, when worked into little Pellets or Granules, scarcely larger than mustard seed, renders each little Pellet as active and powerful as a large pill, while they are much more palatable and pleasant in effect.

Dr. Ira A. Thayer, of Baconsburg, Ohio, writes: "I regard your Pellets as the best remedy for the conditions for which you prescribe them of anything I have ever used, so mild and certain in effect, and leaving the bowels in an excellent condition. It seems to me they must take the place of all other cathartic pills and medicines."

Lyon & Macomber, druggists, Vermillion, D. T., say: "We think they are going to sell like hot cakes as soon as people get acquainted with them and will spoil the pill trade, as those that have used them like them much better than large pills."

The Western Settler's Chosen Specific.

With every advance of emigration into the far West, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly peopled regions are frequently less salubrious than older settled localities, on account of the miasma which rises from recently cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to freshets. The agricultural or mining emigrant soon learns, when he does not already know, that the Bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria and those disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels to which climactic changes, exposure, and unaccustomed or unhealthy water are so prolific in their production. Consequently, he places an estimate upon this great household specific and preventive commensurate with its intrinsic merits, and is careful to keep on hand a restorative and promoter of health so implicitly to be relied upon in time of need.

Forests of California.

To a person who visits California for the first time and goes directly to Sacramento, San Francisco, Stockton and the valley region generally, there is a feeling of early pride at the absence of forests and trees. He will see but little that rises above the dignity of shrubbery. As he descends the foothills to enter the Sacramento Valley he will see more or less of a park-like growth of live-oaks, but for the most part the vegetation will appear small and meagre compared with what he had been led to expect and he will have a feeling of disappointment that the forests fall so far below his expectations.

The fact is the forests are found chiefly in the Sierra Nevada range, and in the Coast range to the north of San Francisco, extending to the extreme north as far as Humboldt Bay. The Coast range to the south, farther than Livermore Pass, is bare and bald, though to the extreme south there are broad belts of splendidly wooded country.

The redwoods, after the giant pines and the Big Trees of the Sierra, are the glory of California, and furnish by far the larger part of the lumber so extensively used in San Francisco and in all the large towns for building purposes. The redwood is nearly allied to the Sequoia gigantea or the "big tree" proper, and is usually classed in the same genus, as the Sequoia sempervirens. It has no equal as a wood of commerce on the Pacific coast. The largest trees are fully fifty feet in circumference and grow to an enormous height, with scarcely any perceptible diminution in size up to two hundred or two hundred and fifty feet without branches, but they often reach three hundred and sometimes three hundred and fifty or three hundred and seventy-five feet, standing like gigantic wooden columns in the forest, with no shrubbery or underbrush to mar their beauty or to detract from the striking effect which they produce, and so thick that the sun cannot penetrate their shade to fall upon the earth beneath them.

Human laws reach not thoughts.

A poor man's debt makes a great noise.

—In England they tell how Sankey went up to a grenadier, and, taking him affectionately by the belt, said, "Young man, I likewise am a soldier of heaven." "Old 'un," returned the grenadier, "you're a very long way from your barracks, anyhow."

—The snow-plows used on the Union Pacific Road to clear the tracks are about as big as a two-story house, weighing from 45,000 to 50,000 pounds. With six or eight powerful engines behind it, running at the rate of forty miles an hour, when this enormous plow dashes into a drift it "makes the fur fly" gloriously.

—"Norval" writes that Mrs. Veneering has discontinued a custom originated by her of having visitors write their names in a book in the hall in event of her absence. Why? Because the milkman came and wrote: "Bill Smith called to collect a bill of milk of long standing, and is sorry Mrs. Veneering didn't leave the amount with the girl, as she agreed."

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, N. J.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of our day, it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his fiend to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for this would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those who possess minds come under the influence." Boston Traveller.

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitalizing, wholesome and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands for its service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

Rev. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more truly worthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good. Hail to the coming to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the twelve numbers (75 to Dec., '76) for $3.00.

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers beginning with No. 25, and the twelve of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for 1874 and 1875 (cost price of which is $7.50). Or, for $8.00 the twelve NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the bound volumes contains more than 1,000 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five superb steel engravings, Hunting Scenes, Historical Biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 5,000 book pages costing $30.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876, sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

Ten years ago Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. established their advertising agency in New York City. Five years ago they absorbed the business conducted by Mr. John Hooper, who was the first to go into this kind of enterprise. Now they have the satisfaction of controlling the most extensive and complete advertising connection which has never been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. They have succeeded in working down to a business basis the hap-hazard, haphazard, intermittent method that no change in the newspaper system of America can escape notice, while the widest information upon all topics interesting to advertisers is placed readily at the disposal of the public.

The Bazar is edited with a combination of tact and talent that we seldom find in any journal; and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Traveller.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household—to the children by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in endless variety, to the provident matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its tasteful designs for embroidered slippers and innumerous dressing-gowns. But the reading matter of the Bazar is uniformly excellent. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the literate enjoyment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

In its way there is nothing like it. Fresh and trustworthy as a fashion guide, its stories and essays, its poetry and sketches, are all invigorating to the mind.—Chicago Evening Journal.

MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of Blood.

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, and have gained in the first year, their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon called for more, and finally, it became a common thing to hear testimonials calling for praise from those who had been benefitted by them. Here are a few out of many testimonials.

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have suffered from Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have been very much discouraged. For years I have tried everything that I read of, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was misconstructed by my friends to my great injury. I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, with little hope of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package felt like a new man. Now I can report as self cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several persons, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package for my friend, and he reports himself benefited. Hoping this may be the means of doing others good, I remain, Yours, etc.,

SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Bill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to my friend for a package for me. I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't live. Have tried everything I read of, everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can say nothing. In one of the letters you send me I read "Pills worth their weight in gold," they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give Hundred Dollars a bill for them if I could not get more. Enclosed you will find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also with Liver and Kidney Complaint causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have tried everything I read of for great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer on as I have done for years. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent for a package of your Magic Condition Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have not Neuralgia pain, cramps or cramps as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will cure me. My wife tries now relief from inflammation of the Bowels, and Diarrhea, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think the must prove a blessing to thousands who will be benefitted by them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have Neuralgia or Kidney Trouble, but I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. Pills, with the blessing of God, attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends, Mrs. Ann Hill, old in Andover, and Hope in Rockingham, who are taking it, and are already much benefitted. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

In the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood Root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is anitoric and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the humid trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. Those painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the prevailing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, and used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

PULMOCINE.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER.

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's administration will be controlled by Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of Republican misrule—a course which, if pursued during the next six months with the skill and policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country, while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slaves is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical reform of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be made to be kept in the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs in religion. Premonitions of a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp controversy, and perhaps bitterness in politics. In trade, commerce and productive industries we are so, as that it will witness the long desired revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE will endeavor to do its duty to the country as it at present, performance, as constituting its claim for the continued regard of all old readers, and the accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to be without an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial and trustworthy presentation of parties and measures, and for personal hints or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain its ground on the old Republican principles of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and it will reject the shameless and unprincipled proposition to bury the old banners. But it can never be the servant of any party which does not approve what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to elect honest men, whom the country can trust to do its work, and hold them to it. Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, reform, as a consequence, labor and taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the forces for the splendid harmonious victory won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, the busy Hall, ruling the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and bringing taxes down. In pursuit of this purpose shattering its position, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of the policy of struggling for the triumph of principle and sound principles, has been being too much controlled by mere names, has been that individuals have found themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms demanded by the public. It may justly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have thus within the last three years practically forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to continue the unmoot candor with judicial fairness; will reject its columns from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will regard all its space for its readers and patrons.

From these who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of its favors. It has been so generously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1872 and 1875 the position assigned it by the Postal Congress, which as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally accepted, and its circulation has been greater than that of any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest watchfulness and the most liberal expenditure to procure the fresh, yet intelligent, the most complete record, the most interesting letters and essays, and the absest work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors is numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

☞ CHEAPEST AND BEST! ☜

Peterson's Magazine

POSTAGE PREPAID ON ALL SUBSCRIPTIONS.

☞ Every subscriber for 1876 will be presented gratuitously, large mezzotint engraving of Trumbull's celebrated picture of "The Signing of the Declaration of Independence." This will be "Peterson's" Christmas Picture.

"PETERSON'S MAGAZINE" contains, every year, 1000 pages, 14 steel plates, 12 colored Berlin patterns, 12 mammoth colored fashion plates, 14 pages of music, and 900 wood cuts.

Great improvements will be made in 1876. Among them will be a series of illustrated articles on the Great Exhibition at Philadelphia, which will alone be worth the subscription price. They will be appropriately called

THE CENTENNIAL IN PEN AND PENCIL!

The immense circulation of "Peterson" enables its proprietor to expend money on gallant articles, stories, etc., etc., than any other. It gives more for the money than any book in the world.

THRILLING TALES AND NOVELETTES

are the best published anywhere. All the most popular writers are employed to write originally for "Peterson." In 1876 in addition to the usual quantity of short stories, FIVE ORIGINAL COPYRIGHT NOVELETTES will be given, by Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, Frank Lee Benedict, Mrs. F. H. Burnett, and others.

MAMMOTH COLORED FASHION PLATES

ahead of all others. These plates are engraved on steel, twice the usual size, and are unequaled for elegance. In 1876 will be given, in addition, Ladies' Household and other receipts; in short, everything in, or useful to ladies.

N. B.—As the publisher now prepays the postage to all mail subscribers, "Peterson" is cheaper than ever; in fact is the cheapest in the world.

Want Their Share.

On Saturday, March 4th, a gentleman, evidently from the country, entered a store kept by one of our prominent citizens, and after a little preliminary skirmishing demanded: "Who's going to get beat? That's what I want to know." The storekeeper, who is a staunch republican, replied: "You don't keep posted, up your way; nobody down here has any doubts as to who's going to be beaten." "That's all very fine," returned the gentleman from the country; "but if you fellows think you're going to carry this election by putting out all the money on weak republicans and not giving our fellows any, you'll wake up the morning after election and find the ground's dropped from under you." He went on to explain that twenty-one democratic voters in South Newmarket must have ten dollars each, or they would either stop away from the polls or vote the republican ticket. The merchant spoke approvingly of the idea that good democrats were quite as well entitled as shaky republicans to a share of the democratic corruption fund,—on which the rural seeker after material aid requested his company on a visit to the democratic candidates; but as he was "too busy to go just then," he furnished the following letter of introduction to one of them:

PORTSMOUTH, March 4.

HON. DANIEL MARCY.—Dear Sir: This will acquaint you with Mr. J. H. Hanson of South Newmarket, who is in town for the purpose of raising money for the good of the cause in his town. I have no doubt that anything you may feel disposed to contribute will be put where it will do the most good. Yours, etc., J. L. BRONSON.

Taking the precious document with him the democratic agent departed, but soon returned with the information that Capt. Marcy was not in town,—adding that he (the agent) shouldn't return to South Newmarket without seeing him, as the party here had got to have the needed money. On Monday he was seen around town again, on the hunt for the democratic candidate; and as he did not return to the republican's store with any complaints of democratic stinginess, it is to be supposed his errand was successful and that the twenty-one democratic voters of South Newmarket will neither stay away from the polls nor vote the republican ticket on account of a lack of funds. We are glad to be assured that the democratic working men propose to have their share of their party's corruption fund.

Revising the Check-Lists.

The Selectmen of the several Wards will meet for the correction of the check-lists as follows:

Ward Two at the School House on Hill Street, at 7 1-2 o'clock.

Ward Three at the South Ward Room at 7 o'clock.

Ward Four at Gould's barn in Cass Street, at 7 o'clock.

Ward Five at the Court House, at 5 o'clock.

Ward Six at the Ward Room in State Street at 7 o'clock.

Ward Seven at the Ward Room in Elm Street, at 7 o'clock.

Ward One at the Franklin School House, Monday, at 3 o'clock, P. M.

The Republican Rally,

At the Temple, Thursday evening, was attended by a packed audience, large numbers of ladies and gentlemen being obliged to go away for want of room. Gen. Harriman fully sustained his well-earned reputation as a brilliant and effective speaker; Senator Wadleigh's speech was full of sound, clearly-expressed and convincing argument; and Senator "Dick" Oglesby of Illinois made one of the best speeches ever delivered on the Temple platform. With three such speakers of course the enthusiasm ran high, and the immense audience showed no sign of weariness when the meeting broke up, at half past 10 o'clock, after a three hours session. The distinguished speakers were serenaded at the Kearsarge House, by Harlow's band, after the meeting.

Speculations in Pills.

On Thursday a man went into Mr. Hanson's Drug Store and appropriated a box of pills, price $1. From there he went to Mr. Hill's, and representing that he had "bought the wrong kind of pills," exchanged his one box for four boxes of Ayer's pills—price 25 cents per box. Next he called on Mr. Briant, said his wife and he had each purchased a box of pills and he didn't want but one, so Mr. Briant "took back" one box and gave the speculator a quarter. The same story enabled him to sell two more boxes at the same price—one each to Capt. Thacher and Dr. Preston; and then, having been the rounds of all the drug stores, he commenced again at the head of the list, and sold the last box to Mr. Hanson! On Friday the police interviewed him, but he was let go on conditions of leaving the city.

The Republican Caucuses,

Friday evening, nominated candidates for Representatives, as follows:

Ward Three—William H. Rollins, Samuel Adams.

Ward Four—Samuel S. Whidden.

Ward Five—William H. Sise, William A. Hodgdon.

The Civil War.

Having published one account of the commencement of actual hostilities in the Portsmouth Artillery Company, we as a simple matter of justice give place to the statement of the other side, as follows:

Thursday evening being the regular time for the business and drill meeting of the company, they met for that purpose at the arsenal at the South end, the same having been turned over to them for that purpose by Mayor Goodrich. Before the meeting had been called to order Capt. Marvin appeared and in a very uncivil manner ordered every man to leave the building. He then then hastened to the head of the stairs with a lamp in one hand and a sword in the other, and threatened to cut down the first man who should attempt to enter. Lieut. Urch determined to test the determination of the captain and was about to enter, when the latter quickly shut the door and fastened it. The company then attempted to force the door, when three shots were fired from the inside, two of which passed through the door. The captain then requested the lieutenant to order the men from the stairs, but the latter refused to do so in presence of his superior officer, and was then requested by him to induce them to leave the building,—the captain promising if they would do so he would show the lieutenant a paper signed by Gov. Cheney giving the captain full control of the arsenal. The men having having left the building the lieutenant asked to see the paper, and was told if he would accompany the captain to his house it would be shown. Leaving the building the two went as far as the junction of Washington and Pleasant streets, where the lieutenant was told the paper would be shown at the captain's headquarters; not caring to pursue what he considered a myth any longer, the lieutenant returned to the arsenal, where the bullet-holes through the door were examined, and two of the bullets found on the stairs. The business meeting was then held and the company adjourned.

Jottings.

Auction at half-past 12 o'clock this day, of fire damaged buildings on Daniel street. See advertisement.

Ex-Gov. Noyes, of Ohio, a native of Dover and one of the best speakers of the day, will address the republicans of this city at the Temple on Monday evening.

Resuming his special afternoon discourses, after a brief absence from the city, Rev. Carlos Martyn will speak on Sunday afternoon on "The Work of Moody and Sankey in New York."

The Temperance Reform Club will hold another grand rally at the Temple, to-night. Mr. J. K. Osgood of Maine, the inebriate's friend, and Mr. John S. Drew, the "bully fireman" and President of the Concord Reform Club, will address the assembly. On Sunday evening, another meeting will be held in the Temple, to be addressed by the same speakers, and others. The Rye Glee Club (of sixteen voices) have volunteered their services, and will be present and discourse sweet music, provided the weather is not stormy. These will be the last meetings of Messrs. Osgood and Drew, and it is presumed they will make their best efforts. But don't forget to take five cents with you.

But comparatively few persons are aware that the goverment forbids express companies carrying sealed letters or envelopes unless they are in a stamped government envelope with the stamp cancelled. There is a heavy fine for a violation of this law. All letters are opened by the express messengers.

President Clark of the Massachusetts State Agricultural College has selected Mr. D. P. Penhallow of this city as Professor of Botany and Chemistry for the faculty of the Japan Agricultural College.

If there are any republicans who contemplate voting for the democrat nominee for Senator in this district, we invite them to consider the disgraceful frauds perpetrated by the democrats in this city and Manchester, for the sole purpose of controlling this and the Manchester senatorial districts, which they must do in order to hold the Senate—thus blocking all legislation in case they succeed. Think twice, gentlemen, before voting, and try to comprehend the value of such assistance to the democrats. Democrats who are even thus elected are not apt to legislate in the interest of the republican party, or in the interests of the people when opposed to the democratic party. Let no votes be foolishly thrown away.

Our friend Col. Wm. H. Sise was nominated for the legislature at the Ward Five caucus last evening. Glad of it; he deserves the honor and will do his share of what work there is to do. Mr. William A. Hodgdon is the other nominee in that ward—a ticket that will poll the full strength of the party.

The democratic procession to the Temple, Friday evening, stepped to the inspiriting strains of "When we were marching through Georgia"—and the procession was on its way to hear John G. Sinclair and Ex-Gov. Walker talk demacracy! But, come to think of it, a good many people "went marching through Georgia" that didn't march under the Union flag,—marched ahead of Sherman's army.

A MOUNTAIN COURT.

Old Job Dawson had been duly elected to fill the responsible position of a Justice of the Peace, and this was the first case which had demanded his attention. Job was an old veteran mountaineer and had lived in the shadow of the lofty peaks, hunting, trapping and fighting Indians, to use his own words, "sense Adam was a kid."

In that rough region an accusation of a great crime against any one is but a forerunner of a "hanging bee," and a trial even is seldom thought of. But in the present instance a wild "cuss" who had been frequenting the settlements had appropriated a "broncho" (Indian pony) belonging to a neighboring ranchman, and had been pursued, captured and brought back. Old Job was summoned to try the culprit, and a spot in a rocky gulch near the 'Squire's cabin was selected as the site for the investigation. A motley crowd of hunters, trappers, miners and rancheros had assembled. Some were lying upon the ground and others sitting upon the rocks, all anxiously awaiting the 'Squire's coming. Job soon came from toward his cabin, and with a dignified air seated himself upon a boulder, took off his bear-skin cap, and said:

"Fellers, the court ar' ready to git down to biz, and I want ye all to cheese yer racket and let up on that chin music according to law. Throw yer ha'r in sight and pay tention to the court."

Every hat came off at his command and "this Honor," glancing around the circle, said:

"Whar is the dam cuss?"

Three mountaineers, armed with Henry rifles and six-shooters, stepped forward with the thief, a young man wearing a bold, devil-may-care expression. His hands were securely fastened behind his back with buckskin thongs. Clad in buckskin from head to foot, he presented a picturesque appearance as he faced the 'Squire.

"What do they call you when yer at your home?"

"Ain't, got enny home, leastways in these parts," sullenly replied the young prisoner.

"Ain't hey? Well, wat's the name you tuk when you left the States then?"

"The boys hyer on the hills call me Tiger Jim."

"Wall, Tige, yer spotted as a horse thief, an' I reckon thar's sumthin' in it or the boys wouldn't brought you in. You can't expect a tony trial like you'd git down to Laramie or eny o' them towns along the road. We hevn't eny paper, pens or ink, or eny of that sort of foolishness up hyer in the hills, and thar aint one of us as could engineer 'em ef we had, so we'll jist grind her through, and do the best we kin for you. In the name of the law I now ax you did you collar that hoss—but stop'er rite thar, dog-gone it, I forgot to swar you. Cum mitey near forgittin' it. Hold up yer right han'!"

"Hold up nuthin'. How kin I when they'r tied titer'n blazes?"

"That's so. Yer k'rect, Tiger, but gess eny member of the body'll be cordin' to law in extreme cases. Stedey him a little, fellers, so's he kin hold up his right foot then."

"Tige" raised his moccasin-covered foot while a guard on each side held him in position.

"Now, then, I ain't fly on them 'ar lawyers affy days, but I'll make her stout enuff to hold a Mexican mule. Tiger Jim, do you swar by the holy Moses, accordin' to the laws of Wyoming Territory, that every time ye chip in yer racket ye'll give us the squar' truth. And ef ye don't, do you hope that ye may git chawed up by a grizzly, chopped to pieces by Sioux, and strung up to a pine with a rope 'round yer dam thiev'n neck and fail to connect in heaven when yer life goes out, to the best of your understandin' as provided by laws, s'help you God, hey?"

"That's jist w'at I does, pardy."

"Now, Tige, yer under oath, an' ev'ry time yer speak yer want ter hit the bull's eye. Did you nip thet hoss?"

"Wall, Uncle Job, thore's no use o' lyin' about it an' I'll tell you jist how it war. Las' night you know thar war a jamboree over to Al. Wilkin's ranche in Miller's gulch an' I war thar. Al. had bin in to Laramie City and got a keg o' good old budge, and we all got purty full. After the dancin' war over I pulled out fur Bowles' ranche, whar I'm hangin' out, an' as I was staggerin' down round Mountain Cat Hill I runs right onto the broncho that war picketed out in the grass, an' I war jist drunk enough to mount him an' lite out. I know I'm goin' to swing fur it an' I'll die game too. I ain't worth a cuss anyway, an' ef it warn't fur my good old mother back in the States (here the tears began to roll down his bronzed cheeks) who never closes her eyes 'thout prayin' fur God to send me back to her, I'd laugh at death, an' help ye fix the rope, but when I think o' that darling old soul I git weaker'n a wounded antelope. I tell ye fellers, I've bin a tuff cuss ever since I struck out fur these mountains and I s'pose the world'll be better 'thout me in it. My old mother'll suffer, I know that, fur I'm her only kid an' hev sent her every ounce o' dust that I could spare, an' its all she's bed to live on. She's bin a good 'un to me, God bless her, an' I'm sorry I hav'n't lived so's I can camp with her up thar (raising his tearful eyes toward heaven),—and boys, won't some o' ye write to her, Tom Kirk that knows whar she lives, an' tell her I got let out by an Injun, or pegged out unnatural. For God's sake don't let her know I war strangled. The news 'ud kill her. But then I'll choose this gab or ye'll think I'm weakening, an' the man don't live as can skeer Tiger Jim. Elevate me, boys, jist as quick as ye please. I'm ready when you are."

During this recital Jim's eyes were filled with tears, and a close observer would have detected silent weeping upon all sides. That magic word "mother" had awakened tender recollections in the breasts of every one of those hardy mountaineers. Men who could face death in any shape without a particle of feeling did not try to hide their tears at the mention of that sacred name, mother! How sweet it sounded in their ears. It carried them back to the happy days in the past, when they were blessed with the love of parents before the insatiable thirst for gold had led them into these mountain wilds. Not a word was spoken for a few seconds, and then old Job drew his horny hand across his watery eyes and said in a husky voice.

"Tige, ye w'uldn't break an oath, w'uld ye!'

"No, Job Dawson, not for friend or foe. Thar ain't a boy in the hills as can say that Jim ever went back on his given word. I'm a rough 'un an' do many mighty wicked things, but when I say a thing ye can gamble every dollar you've got on it bein' straight."

"Well, Tige, I had intended to swing ye an' ye deserve swingin', but I can't git rid o' that 'mother' chinnin' ye give us. I 'spect the old lady's set-her heart on seein' ye again, an' is wearing her old eyes out a lookin' for ye. I've got an old mother my self, an' tho' I haven't sot eyes on her sence '49 her picter's right hyar in my heart, an' it's a pleadin' fur the old 'ooman, Tige. It's rough, Tige, rough, an'—lemme see—yes, darned ef I don't du it. Jack, cut them ar strings so's he can git his han's loose. Thar, thet's it. Now, Tige, hold up yer right hand and ef ever ye swore strong do it now. Do you swear by the great God, an' yer blessed old mother, that ef this court discharges ye ye'll lite right out fur the States, an' go hum to the old lady an' love her an' comfort her as long as she stays out o' heaven. Do ye swar to this, Tige, before Almighty God an' this court?"

"I do, Job, an' thar's my fist on it. Put 'er thar. I swar it an'll pull stakes rite off."

"Then ye're released on them terms, an' the boys'll help ye git yer traps down to the station; but mind, I tell ye, Tige, ef yer ever caught in the hills agin ye'll go up a tree. Fellers, the court's over an' the prisoner discharged."

And big Camanche Bill, who stood back in the crowd, drew his pistol and said:

"Amen! and any snoozer that says Job's law ain't level has got to fight me right hyar."

When the Union Pacific train was about to leave Laramie the following day a number of mountaineers might have been seen shaking hands and bidding farewell to a buck-skin-clad companion who stood upon the rear platform of the train. The citizens of the place paid no attention to their movements, as it is an every day occurrence for some miner, who has either struck it rich and made his pile, or has had bad luck and become discontented, to embark for the States. The passenger was Tiger Jim; and as the train flew past Fort Saunders and began the ascent of the Black Hills range he gazed upon the distant peaks, clad in their garments of eternal snow, and his breath came hard as he muttered:

"It's hard to leave ye, old hills, but it's either the States or a necktie festival for me, an' then I'll stick to that cast-iron oath o' Job's ef it takes the ha'r off."

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President --Lincoln--will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped in-

Consider---Then Vote.

Good men in every portion of the Union, and of every political antecedent, are looking with lively interest upon this State. They recognize that the defeat of the republican party in this contest would be an admission that the war for the Union was indeed a blunder and a failure, and that the election of Daniel Marcy would be an admission that the radical "crime" (see Ben Hill's speech) of preserving the Union should be atoned for by elevating to power the men who opposed the war, who defended—and now defend—secession, and who are to-day as out-spoken in declaring "this is no nation" as they were at the time Daniel Marcy consigned Abraham Lincoln and the other men who were struggling to save the Union to "deep execration" and "the inheritance of eternal infamy." Consider well, before you deposit your vote, whether you are ready to endorse the disloyal utterances and secession principles of Daniel Marcy—for his party organs boldly proclaim that he has never changed his principles and is to-day "proud" of his Congressional record.

The democrats in the legislature looked out to remove all "oppressive restrictions" upon keeping the polls open, as the frauds upon which their party relies can be more effectually perpetrated and concealed when committed after dark. It was the removal of such "oppressive restrictions" that made possible the wholesale frauds in Manchester last year; which gave to hired repeaters, ballot-box stuffers and imported bullies the power to defeat the expressed will of the legal voters of the State, which power they exercised so well in the interests of the democratic party; which offers direct encouragement to fraud,—and was evidently intended to encourage fraud and give the control of cities and the State to the most lawless and desperate class of men in the community. If you wish to perpetuate the rule of the ruffian, and make a farce of the ballot, then vote the democratic ticket to-morrow.

Let no republican throw away his vote, or give it to the democratic candidates, because of personal goodwill toward some man whose name is on the democratic ticket, or of personal dislike to some candidate on the republican ticket. If the personal character only of the candidates is considered, the republicans have nothing to fear from a rigid comparison; if the public record of candidates is to be looked at, the republicans will be found immeasurably ahead of their opponents; but "principles not men," are on trial—and every consideration for the welfare of municipalities, the State and the Nation, every hope for the purity of the ballot and the legal rule of the majority, demands the overwhelming success of the republican party in this State to-morrow. See to it that your vote is thrown on the side of the right. Consider—then vote!

Read This!

The democratic managers of Ward Six, Manchester, have built in one corner of the ward room a close pen ten feet, square reaching to the ceiling, with two small pigeon holes to pass ballots through, and a high fence opposite so that voters will have to pass through a dark ally one at a time, and then trust entirely to the "honor" of the democratic selectmen as to what becomes of their ballots! The Mirror of Friday exposed this lovely arrangement, and the concealing partition was cut down on Saturday so that the pigeon-holes of this patent democratic "vote manufactory" are exposed to the view of people in the ward room; but the lofty, close walls of the pen still stand to conceal the interior,—an unblushing avowal by the democrats that the most outrageous fraud is intended and will be carried out. Voters—is this the party you propose to support to-morrow?

A large number of the most respectable citizens of Ward Five, Manchester, have petitioned Gov. Cheney to call out the militia on election day, or to take what other steps are necessary to protect peaceable citizens in their rights and prevent an occurrence of the disgraceful ruffianism by which the democrats carried the ward last year. The petition is backed up by another from Ex-Governors Straw and Smyth, Hon. Daniel Clark and seventy other prominent and well-known citizens.

News and Notes.

The House Committee on Commerce has agreed to report Representative Hale's bill, to relieve certain ships and vessels from compulsory pilot fees, but with an amendment confining its provisions to licensed and enrolled vessels. Merely registered vessels may still, so far as this action is concerned, be subjected by State laws to the compulsory employment or payment of pilots.

A suit has been entered by the Government, in the United States District Court, against the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, for $300,000, for unpaid taxes.

The dollar store of F. M. White & Co., at Great Falls, was damaged by fire and water early Friday morning. They claim $8000 worth of stock, which is badly damaged. The origin of the fire is unknown.

The Francestown Soapstone Company's works, of Nashua, have started up again, and will set at work a few of their old hands.

D. L. Fields, of Ellsworth, Me., a policeman, was shot through the arm about three o'clock Friday morning by some person unknown. The officer had just tried the door of the Savings Bank, and had stepped back on the stairs when his assailant fired from the foot of the stairs and then fled.

The New York Times says that the wages of laborers and mechanics in that city have declined forty-five per cent. within line of keeping wages up, than has republican rule in other places.

The jury in the case of the Strath Clyde disaster declared the captain of the Franconia, which ran down the Strath Clyde, guilty of manslaughter, and censured the pilot of the Franconia.

Schooner Frederick Gerring, Jr., Capt. Morris, arrived from the Banks on Tuesday and reported the loss of two of her crew, William Norton and Albert Sulkey, who left the vessel in their dory on the afternoon of Monday, Feb. 28th, for the purpose of hauling their trawls. It was very moderate at the time, and other crews also left in dories for the same purpose. After they had been absent some twenty minutes, Capt. Morris, as is his custom, keeping watch of the dories, saw that the one in which Norton and Sulky were, seemed to be drifting, without any effort being made to reach the buoy, whither she was bound. Soon he saw one of the other dories pulling for her with all speed, and then he supposed that something was wrong. The other dory, in due time, reached the vessel, having in tow the drifting dory, and reported that they found her adrift and neither of the men were on board. The trawl gear was in the dory the same as when they started, she had shipped no water, and the cause of the drowning of the men was a mistery which could not be solved. One pair of oars were picked up in the water.—Cape Ann Advertiser.

Letter stamps of the value of $56,910 were sold at the Boston Postoffice last month; newspapers stamps, $4264; and stamped envelopes, $13,641. 20.

Robert Harris, an ex-detective officer of New Orleans, was mysteriously shot and killed in New Orleans last Wednesday. He was walking along a frequented street but no one was able to tell who fired the fatal shot.

If we are to judge by democratic professions it would be supposed that wherever that party had complete control would be a perfect Utopia for economy and good government. New York City happens to be just that place, and nowhere is democratic power more firmly established. Let us look at the result. In 1861 the city debt was twenty millions of dollars, in 1865 it was thirty-five millions, and last year it was nearly one hundred and thirty millions! The interest on this nice little sum is nine millions per annum.

Mr. William S. Robinson, widely known as the "Warrington" of the Massachusetts press, died at Malden, Mass., on Saturday. He was a keen critic and able writer, and thoroughly detested a sham of any kind.

Hon. William H. Gove died at Weare on Saturday, at the age of 68 years. He was one of the Free Soil pioneers in this State, but of late years has acted with the democrats; was speaker of the House in 1871, and president of the Senate in 1873.

Hazelgreen, Wis., was visited by a tornado on the 11th, which blew down many buildings and caused the death of nine persons. Many others were wounded.

A landslip at Caub, in North Germany, on the 10th, buried eight houses and killed twenty-six persons.

The Stereoscope as a Civilizer.

A "Quaker among the Indians" wishes that a good stereoscope, with suitable pictures, could be exhibited in every Indian camp and properly explained to the people, the effect of an exhibition of stereoscopic views among the Comanches being according to his experience, most amusing as well as extremely salutary.

As a body, the Indians who have never been East, and, as a consequence, have seen but few white people, are dispose to disbelieve the accounts they receive respecting their numbers, the magnitude of their towns and cities, and the extent of the country they occupy. They believe that their own people who have been East have been duped by some kind of sorcery, or, as they would say, 'medicine.' They also think it is impossible to make an imaginary picture. Hence a picture is to them 'proof positive' of the existence of an original. Consequently, exhibiting towns, buildings, rural scenes and soldiers has had a most convincing effect. This was much highened by having some mountain scenes from Colorado, familiar to them, and which they recognized at once. This was, in fact, the strongest adducible evidence that the accounts they had received were so far from being exaggerations that the half had not been told them. One middle-aged man, who has always treated those reports with the utmost skepticism, was particularly struck by them. He could not sufficiently express his surprize, but beat upon his mouth in utter astonishment. Sun Boy, who had often told him what he saw in the East, would say to him in Kiowa; "What do you think now? You think all lie now? Think all chiefs who have been to Washington fools now?" Again and again would he look them over with his hand upon his mouth, dumb with amazement. After he had looked them over several times, being a war chief he called in his warriors, and exhibited the pictures to them, talking to them all the time. I could understand but a part, yet could gather such expressions as these: "Look! see what a mighty people they are!" meaning white people. "We are fools! We don't know anything! We just like wolves running wild on the plains!" Such an effect on the war chiefs and warriors cannot but be very salutary, and must induce much toward deterring them from going on the war path against such a "mighty powerful people."

—"Have you children?" demanded a house renter. "Yes," replied the other solemnly; "six—all in the cemetery." "Better there than here," said the landlord, consolingly, and proceeded to execute the desired lease. In due time the children returned from the cemetery, whither

The huge, drastic, griping, sickening pills constructed of crude, coarse and bulky ingredients, are fast being superseded by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or Sugar Coated, Concentrated Root and Herbal Juice, Anti-Bilious Granules—the "Little Giant" Cathartic or Multum in Parvo Physic. Modern Chemical Science enables Dr. Pierce to extract from the juices of the most valuable roots and herbs their active medicinal principles, which, when worked into little Pellets or Granules, scarcely larger than mustard seed, render each little Pellet as active and powerful as a large pill, while they are much more palatable and pleasant in effect.

Dr. Ira A. Thayer, of Baconsburg, Ohio, writes: "I regard your Pellets as the best remedy for the conditions for which you prescribe them of anything I have ever used, so mild and certain in effect, and leaving the bowels in an excellent condition. It seems to me they must take the place of all other cathartic pills and medecines."

Lyon & Macomber, druggists, Vermillion, D. T., say: "We think they are going to sell like hot cakes as soon as people get acquainted with them and will spoil the pill trade, as those that have used them like them much better than large pills."

The Western Settler's Chosen Specific.

With every advance of emigration into the far West, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly peopled regions are frequently less salubrious than older settled localities, on account of the miasma which rises from recently cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to freshets. The agricultural or mining emigrant soon learns, when he does not already know, that the Bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria and those disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels to which climactic changes, exposure, and unaccustomed or unhealthy water or diet subject him. Consequently, he places an estimate upon this great household specific and preventive commensurate with its intrinsic merits, and careful to keep on hand a restorative and promoter of health so implicitly to be relied upon in time of need.

TO MY PATIENTS!

DR. ALBION M. DUDLEY,

NOW OF SALEM, MASS.,

TO SUCCEED ME MARCH 13th,

Will be fully entitled to the respect and confidence of the citizens of Portsmouth. I can unreservedly recommend him, not only as a gentleman in the true meaning of the term, but as a well read, skillful and conscientious

Dental Practitioner.

DR. DUDLEY already has a fine and rapidly increasing practice in Salem, and consents to come here on trial for a year, (to be in Portsmouth three days of each week, and three days in Salem), at my earnest solicitation, backed by the free gift of my practice.

I could have sold my practice with a recommendation, for a large sum, but feeling the kindness and confidence with which I have been treated, I have chosen, nay, felt it impossible to do otherwise than sink private consideration of profit for the good of my patients.

If DR. DUDLEY is appreciated at his true worth by the people of Portsmouth, he can, through the confidence extended to him, be made to relinquish his practice in Salem, and settle here permanently. That such may be the result of his year of trial here is the devout wish of his friend and the friend of Portsmouth, A. P. STEVENS.

N. B.—I shall take great pleasure in presenting Dr. D. to such of my patients as my limited time here will permit, and also to make engagements for him with any who may wish suggestion or advice from me. A. P. S.

Those Republican "Frauds."

On Friday we published a list of some one hundred and sixty names wrongfully on the check lists of the democratic wards. Our list was only partial, many names which the republican committees are certain are bogus having been omitted for lack of positive proof that such is the case. On Saturday the Times came out with a list of some seventy names, which they claimed as being wrongfully on the check lists in the republican wards. The list contained some ten or a dozen names which did not belong on the lists where first put, which of course were taken off when they were revised; the rest of the "frauds" we dispose of as follows:—the charges in the Times being "quoted," and the explanations following immediately in the same paragraph:

Ward Two.

"Horace F. Adwers, resides in Boston. Millard F. Berry, not in the ward. Winfield F. Berry, not in the ward. Frank W. Hackett, resides in Washington. Manning K. Rand, resides in Massachusetts, Richard Davidson, boards with his brother in Ward 7. James Shaw, lives in Chicago." All unmarried, and claim homes with parents in the ward. Names all put on list by democratic selectmen, and circumstances not since changed.

"Ira F. Burnham, lives with his wife in Boston." Family live in the ward.

"Joseph Gaddis, moved out of the ward last February." Lives in the ward, and has lived there for years.

"Edgar B. Griffin, a resident of New Jersey." No such name on list.

"William A. Loyne, moved from Dover Sept. 24th." Moved into ward Sept. 13th, 1875.

Ward Five.

"Edward Ball, has lived away for ten years." Son of True M. Ball, Esq.; unmarried and has home with his father.

"Frank Brantnett, unknown in Portsmouth." No such name on list.

"George N. Carlton, has lived in Brooklyn with family twelve years." His family live at No. 1 Summer Street.

"Charles S. Dodge, has lived with family in Maine most of the time for the past two years." Answered in another place.

"D. H. Dean, a myth." Just so—no such name on list.

"Frank F. Gerrish, lives in Boston." Son of Henry F. Gerrish, Esq., unmarried and has home with his father.

"Samuel H. Goodall, resides in Massachusetts and practices law in Boston." Owns house and furniture in Ward, pays taxes here, and has never voted anywhere else.

"Thomas A. Gill, has no residence in the ward." Chaplain in navy; boards on Middle street.

"Ira C. Hutchinson, has lived in Maine for eight years." Son of John W. Hutchinson; home with his father.

"John N. Handy, Jr., is not a resident of this State." Son of John N. Handy, Esq.; unmarried, and lives with his father.

"Lefavor F. Jones, is not 21 years old." Lives with Enoch C. Jones; is of age; at sea in U. S. S. Marion.

"Daniel Judkins, has resided in Salem, Mass., for four years." No such name on list.

"Rufus Kendrick, has been out of ward for three years." Resides on Union street with his father-in-law.

"John R. Locke, resides in New York." No such name on list.

"John P. Lyman, resides in Boston." Unmarried, lives with his mother on Union street.

"George Melcher, has lived away for three years." A native and always a resident of Portsmouth; pays taxes here, and never voted anywhere else.

"John H. Miller, married and has lived in Boston with family for several years; does business there and has no more right to vote in Portsmouth than has a South Sea Islander." Name put on list by democratic selectmen, and circumstances not since changed.

"Abraham Marsden, has left the country." No such name on list.

"John W. Parsley, has been gone two years and has no home in the ward." No such name on list.

"Henry Plummer, not 21 years old." Son of George W. Plummer, Esq.; married, and lives with his father.

"Isaac H. M. Pray, lives with family and does business in North Carolina." "William P. Pray, lives in Alexandria, Virginia." No such names on the list.

"Joseph B. Stearns, has no right to vote whatever." House and furniture on Islington street. Temporarily absent in Europe.

"John H. Yeaton, belongs in Brooklyn, N. Y." Son of Moses Yeaton, Esq.; unmarried, has home with his father.

Ward Seven.

"Frances O. Allen, unknown." A woman's name, and not on list. Francis A. Allen boards on Hanover street. [See card in another place.]

"John Day, a myth." Not largely. Lives at 29 Hanover street.

"John S. Harvey, lives with his wife in Boston." Owns house and furniture in ward; temporarily absent.

"Albert Hommancy, lives in Dover." Boards on Hanover street.

"Walter Webster, moved away." Has moved since the list was posted.

And that is the best the democrats can do, to break the force of our exposure of the democratic preparations for fraud! They answer "you're another"—and then give the foregoing list to prove the truth of that assertion! Comment is needless.

Found.

PORTSMOUTH, March 10, 1876.

Having seen my name in the champion sheet representing democracy, printed in this ancient city, as a person that can't be found, allow me through the columns of your paper to say that I am found—am here—have been here eight years—am now in Ward Seven, and have been since the 11th of March, 1875,—and that the only reason the good old democrats of that Ward couldn't find me is because they know that my vote will be cast every time for the benefit of the republican party, the city, the State and the Nation. I have the honor to be, Respectfully Yours,

FRANCIS A. ALLEN.

Special Notice.

If the following named persons (credited as residents of Portsmouth,) or persons representing them, will call or leave their address, as convenient, at Marcellus Buffford's office, No. 4 Exchange building, between the hours of 4 and 5 P. M., they will learn something to their advantage. The address should give the street and number of residence.

John Barnes,	Joseph Berry,
John Collins,	John Green,
Haskell Drake,	James Flood,
John Ford,	Robert Fulton,
Henry J. Paul,	Albert Shedd,
John Smith,	Samuel Todd,

James Welch.

Jottings.

Ex-Gov. Noyes, of Ohio, and Frank W. Hackett, Esq., will address the citizens of Portsmouth on the political issues of the day, at the Temple this evening.

Mr. John A. Nicholls, of England, assisted by Mr. Frank Heath, will give an entertainment consisting of Humorous Readings and Recitations at Franklin Opera Hall, on Wednesday evening. Mr. Nicholls is well spoken of as a Character Impersonater, and the low price of admission ought to be a sufficient guarantee of a full house.

After the election—what? Miss Cayvan's readings. After the whirl and turmoil of party strife have ceased, and victors and vanquished have alike accepted the situation, an hour spent in listening to that talented lady will do more toward bringing the nerves and the temper to their natural condition than "three fingers of reform club" (that's what they call it now) or a bottle of soothing syrup. The Quincy Patriot says: "Seldom does a reader appear before the public possessed of so many natural advantages as Miss Cayvan—a fine figure, pleasing presence, a voice of good compass, clear, ringing and musical as that of the bobolink, and a careful cultivation of all the adjuncts which go to make up a successful and popular public reader."

Maffitt and Tyler's pantomime troupe, consisting of thirty-five persons, will appear at the Temple to-morrow (Tuesday) evening. Those of our readers who have never seen Mr. James S. Maffitt, should not miss this opportunity of seeing him in his celebrated character as clown in Humpty Dumpty. Secured seats for sale at Preston's Drug store.

The sub-committee (of the naval investigating committee of the House) to investigate affairs at this navy yard includes Mills of Texas, Burleigh of Maine and Jones of New Hampshire. While they are investigating around here Congress should extend their jurisdiction so they can investigate the affairs of the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad.

As a sample of the list of alleged republican the name of Mr. Charles S. Dodge, of whom it is stated that he "has lived with his family in Maine most of the time for the last two years." We are authorized by Samuel Dodge, Esq., to say emphatically that this is an unmitigated lie from beginning to end, as the person in question has never resided in Maine, has no "family" but a wife, who has always made her home at Mr. S. Dodge's house, and has himself lived there and nowhere else—his business alone keeping him away from the city, for a few weeks only, from Monday until Saturday, he regularly returning to this city to spend Sunday. If further particulars are wanted, please call on Samuel Dodge, Esq.

Messrs. Editors: I was somewhat surprised in looking over the list of illegal names said to be upon the check-list of Ward One, in not finding included in that list the name of Dennis Leddin, a minor, who was born in Charlestown, Mass., Sept. 3d, 1856, whose first vote was thrown in this city at the fall election of 1874, he then being but eighteen years of age, and who has continued to vote at every election since, notwithstanding the protests of the republicans and their showing a statement of the birth of Dennis Leddin as above, by N. Apollonio, city register of Boston.

METACOM.

"Metacom" need not think he has found an exceptional case. Many minors, known to be such by the democratic selectmen, are borne on the lists of wards Three and Six, and such minors voted last year and will this. One young man has told us within two days that the democratic managers in Ward Six have urged him to vote this year, assuring him that his name will be put on and that he can go through all right, notwithstanding he is not yet of age and has repeatedly told them so!

The naval investigating committee visited the navy yard on Saturday, and received the customary salute.

A new post route has been established over the Portsmouth & Dover railroad, and the mails from here now reach Dover at 9:25 A. M. and 7:25 P. M. Mails leave Dover for this city at 10:40 A. M. and 4:45 P. M.

The Rockingham Stable, on Fleet street, rear of Mechanics block, is conducted by the firm of Beacham & Stoddard, Mr. R. H. Beacham having sold a half-interest to Mr. D. F. Stoddard.

In Ward Four, Saturday, the republicans asked to have the name of Dennis O'Neil stricken from the check list, on the ground that he had lived in Ward Two since last August, and has his name on in the latter ward. Answer was made by one of the selectmen that it didn't make any odds; "he will vote here whether he has a right or not."

In addition to the big Injuns already reported as having been chosen by the newly-organized Lodge of the Improved Order of Red Men, the following names have been handed in: Chief of Records, H. F. Gerrish; Keeper of Wampum, John H. Cheever; Guard of the Wigwam, H. F. Eldredge; Guard of the Forest, George E. Hanson.

On Saturday, Capt. T. E. O. Marvin, of the Portsmouth Artillery Company, appeared before the police court to answer to a charge of assaulting Lieut. David Urch with a deadly weapon, and was fined $10 and costs, from which decision he appealed and gave bonds for his appearance at a higher court. Joseph R. Curtis appeared to answer to a charge of having committed an aggravated assault with a brick upon Holman Shannon. Case continued until 10 o'clock A. M., Thursday, the complainant not being able to appear. Both these cases arose out of the Artillery Company troubles.

—A leap-year party was recently given by the swell-headed young women of Washington to the swell-headed young men. Without any appreciable effort the men acted like silly women and the women like silly men, showing that silliness is not a matter of sex, but of education.

—The following address was recently delivered at the funeral of a San Francisco type-setter:—"Our brother, Mr. John Harlan, is dead. His last letter is distributed, his case is emptied, his stick is full, the last line is spaced out, and the clicking of the type is no more heard as struck by his hand. A paragraph is made, a period put in, his last proof is taken, his galley is cleared. His form is made up, and lies upon the cold imposing stone of death, silent, lifeless. His faults are set in diamond and pied, so that no more proof can be taken. His virtues are set in six-line pica, colored, framed, and hung on the walls of memory, never to be forgotten. Be warned and be ready. Correct your proof."

Now they have the satisfaction of controlling the most extensive and complete advertising connection which has never been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1873. Prepared from the first package, their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 2, 1873.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and feared I should lose my job, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hope of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have since recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for six packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1873.

THOMAS W. LANE.—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills and can truly say they have done the orders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried almost everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills as it can cut anything. In one of the testimonials said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. I may please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD, Care Watson & Gannett.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors and a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded the rest of my life I must be dependent one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent for one box and for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will well be as advertised. I feel grateful for the amation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think the must prove a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Healed at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Hartshill, one in Andover, and a lady in Reademie, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

CURIOSITY GRATIFIED.

Mrs. Brown and her gossip, Mrs. White, were conversing about husbands and the secrets of Freemasonry. Mr. Brown was a Freemason; and the fact of not being able to share the secrets of the order with him made Mrs. Brown very unhappy. She was pouring out her grief to Mrs. White, and saying for the thousandth time: "I wonder what they do in the lodge room!"

"I have no doubt but it's dreadful," replied Mrs. White. "But if my husband was a Mason, I'll bet I'd find out what he did."

"But how? They dare not tell."

"Ah! but I'd make him tell."

"How? oh, how?" asked Mrs. Brown, anxiously.

"Hush! I'll tell you; but don't breathe it for the world, because it is a dead secret."

"No, no; I won't."

"Well, do you know that tickling a person's ear when they are asleep will make them talk?"

"No. Will't though?"

"Yes. Now you wait till Brown comes home from the lodge next time, and have a broom-straw in the bed with you. When he gets asleep you tickle his ear with it gently, and he will begin to talk about what he has been doing at the lodge, and in this way you can get the whole business out of him."

"Gracious me! You don't say so, Mrs. White?"

"To be sure I do. I always get my husband's secrets out of him in this way."

"I'll do it!"

"And you'll tell me all about it, won't you"

"Certainly. But you must never say anything about it."

"Oh, of course not. I am very close mouthed," replied Mrs. White, very earnestly.

So it was agreed upon, and they separated. But unfortunately Mr. White had overheard the conspiracy, and lost no time in informing Mr. Brown, who laughed heartily over it. A few nights afterward Brown attended a meeting of his lodge, and his wife was all anxiety regarding it. On retiring, she armed herself with a spray from the broom and wakefully awaited for her lord and master to return. At last she had almost broken down the veil of secrecy which had troubled her so long, and her heart beat wildly when she heard him open the door and come in. Of course she pretended to be asleep, and did not see the comical smile on her husband's face as he turned up the gas and began disrobing for bed. But in a few minutes he was comfortably tucked in and giving out premonitory indications of approaching sleep, Then Mrs. Brown opened her eyes cautiously, and convinced herself that he had gone to that land from which sleepy husbands never return until some time next day. Cautiously she reached under the pillow, and took the broom straw from its hiding place. Then she reached over carefully and began to tickle her husband's ear, he all the while doing his best to keep from exploding with laughter. Finally he began to talk a little, and her ears were keenly alive to every syllable.

"Yes, he must die," said he. "He betrayed our secrets to his wife. I've got to kill him—the lot fell on me."

Mrs. Brown screamed and leaped from the bed, while her husband, unable to control himself, gave vent to his laughter and disturbed the neighbors for the next ten minutes. But they never came to any understanding about the strange affair. She never asked him what he was laughing at, and he never inquired what it was that made her scream and leap out of bed so quickly. Mrs. Brown and Mrs. White don't speak now. She thinks Mrs. White played a joke on her, and she seems to have lost much of her anxiety regarding the secrets of Freemasonry.

—The grand jury of Polk county, Ga., thus admonishes two rival editors: "We also feel it our duty to censure the course and conduct of our two newspapers toward each other, and urgently request the two editors to cease wrangling about themselves and branch off into agricultural articles or others that will tend to develop the interests and welfare of our county."

—A man named Geo. Hinckley was driving from Corinth to Conklingsville, Saratoga county, N. Y., late at night, recently, when his horse sheered. The driver struck the horse with a halter, one end of which was tied to the sleigh to prevent its being lost. The next instant a panther sprang squarely into the sleigh and with a blow of his paw tore all the clothing from Hinckley's breast. The latter saved his neck by getting his left arm into the panther's mouth, and the arm was bitten through. Hinckley had, in the excitement of the moment, struck the beast on the mouth and the head-stall passing accidentally over the head of the animal, and being a slip-noose, tightened in the struggle so that it choked. Its powerful paws were still clawing, when the sleigh, the frightened horse running at full speed, struck a bank and tipped. Man and beast went into the snow, but the horse rushed on, dragging the sleigh, and behind it the panther at the end of the halter. Hinckley got to a neighboring house. The broken sleigh and dead panther were found half a mile further on, and the horse reached the stable in safety.

Daniel Marcy's Sentiments.

"I believe that the name of the President --Lincoln--will go down to posterity along with the deep execration of those who revere the Union."

"The wicked, disloyal abolition party who sustain the President in his infractions on the Constitution, are joint heirs with him to the inheritance of eternal infamy."

"I tell the gentleman and all of his way thinking that I shall utter upon the floor of this House whatever I wish concerning the crimes, the follies and the outrages of this administration; whatever I wish concerning its turpitude, its sins and deformity."

The above are extracts from a speech printed in the Congressional Globe, and purporting to be a speech delivered in the National House of Representatives June 14th, 1864, by Daniel Marcy, now the democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. It was such speeches as this that helped incite John Wilkes Booth to his foul deed of assassination, ten months afterward.

Nine bodies of persons whose lives were lost at Hazelgreen, Wis., by the tornado of the 10th, have been recovered and buried. At Elizabethtown, Mo., seventeen houses were blown down, five persons killed and others fatally injured. At Hasson, Mo., three persons were killed; at Shrinkey, in the same State, two persons were killed and twenty wounded, and lives were lost and buildings, trees and fences thrown down at many other places. The tornado was very narrow at the places where it was most destructive, being from eighty rods to two hundred yards wide. It was followed by a deluge of rain and hail.

The citizens of Milford made several unsuccessful attempts to establish a reform club. The ladies then took the matter in hand and have established a temperance league, and through their influence a reform club, Friday night, was successfully organized, with J. M. Starjon for President. One hundred and eighteen signed the pledge.

THE DEVIL'S NEST.

Colonel J. W. Brooks, in a communication to the Chicago Tribune, describes a wonderful valley, which will remind the reader of that inaccessible valley of diamonds described in the "Arabian Nights:"

In the winter of 1874 I was in the service of the Government on the Pinte Reservation, in southeastern Nevada. My business was to look after the wants of the Indians, visit the different sub-divisions of the tribe, and use my influence to bring them to the reservation, where they might be cared for and taught the principles of civilization. On one excursion I was looking after the scattered bands of Sebits; and, on returning to the agency, was attempting to cross from the lower crossing of the Little Colorado, on the east side of the main Colorado River, to the mouth of the Red Virgin, over a dry, barren planteau of seventy miles. It was a wearisome march, and both man and beast had reached a state of actual suffering for want of water. Serious thoughts and calculations occupied every moment; the fear of destruction seemed to be indelibly stamped upon all; yet I, who had the experienced very similar tests of men's souls, and bade them onward; and, with my assurance that they would reach water, they trudged on. While travelling along a very old Indian trail, I discovered an object in the distance which I supposed to be a deer or an antelope, which was regarded as a sign that water was near at hand. Spurs were applied to the faithful mules, and they were not long in approaching near the supposed animal; but, to the astonishment of the party, it proved to be an Indian laden with Zoona blankets, on his way to what he called the Diablo—the Devil's Nest. He was most fearfully frightened. He afterward stated that he expected to be murdered by the party; but upon being assured of friendship and good will, he gave information of water and also of his business. He proved to be a Moqua Indian trader, with a large pack of blankets upon his back, and, as stated before, was on his way to the Devil's Nest. He invited us to follow him.

We had travelled but a short distance when we came upon a great descent in the level plain of Mesa. It was evidently too steep to be descended with animals, so we dismounted, picketed our animals, and on foot followed our guide. A few rods travel brought us to a perpendicular cliff of solid malpace, or cooled lava, from which we obtained a plain view of a most wonderful chamber lying at a great distance below us. At this point our guide threw over or down his pack, and it was soon out of sight. Immediately before us was a narrow, deep crater in the malpace, through which we went down at an angle of 80 degrees, till another perpendicular cliff was reached, which we descended by the aid of a Mexican ladder. It was made of rawhide, and was securely fastened in a large pile of stones at the top. It had small sticks twisted in the rawhide at right angles with the lariat, which served as steps in the ladder. On them, one after another, a lower point was gained, except in a few cases where a long pole was used as a substitute. At last the bottom was gained, and, after a journey of half a mile over a beautiful, smooth surface, we came to one of the most beautiful bubbling springs we had ever seen, of pure, cold and sweet water. At this point, to my astonishment and dismay I found an abundance of Indian signs (tracks of Indians). I could look around me and realize the stubborn fact that I was in one of Nature's most secure prisons. The walls were perpendicular to the height of 3500 to 4000 feet, with seemingly no possible means of escape save by the way we entered. The first thought was horrifying in the extreme. The idea of having followed an Indian into a stone-bound cave or chamber, and into the midst of a band of wild Apaches, was terrible indeed. I suspiciously and tremblingly followed the Moqua a quarter of a mile further, when the stream of the spring had grown to quite a little creek, having been increased by many other springs, and the signs of Indians had changed to that of real Indian villages; yet not an Indian was to be seen, and this was but confirming my suspicions of danger, and adding more horror to my trembling nerves. Our guide mounted a large rock and yelled, at the top of his voice, a most horrible howl. After a seemingly long suspense a very old, decrepit Indian, almost blind, crept out from the mass of detached cliff that had fallen from above, and, with trembling fear, exclaimed, "Amigo-amigo." The salute was returned, and the two cowards—no, brave men—each fearing the other, rejoiced; and, as evidence of friendship, there was an exchange of tobacco, and the pipe of peace was smoked. It was followed by calling together the whole tribe—a poor relic of some ancient tribe—numbering in all but sixteen. They had probably fled to this most secret and remarkable spot of earth for refuge in time of trouble, possibly previous to the invasion of Cortez. They were most marvellously struck by my appearance.

The Devil's Nest is situated in the northwest part of Arizona Territory, on the east side of the Colorado River, and opposite the lower end of the great Canon of the Colorado. That canon is in some places 6000 feet deep. The Devil's Nest is a sunken hole in a malpace, or lava formation, to the depth of 3500 to 4000 feet, with perpendicular walls, excepting the hazardous entrance through or over which we passed. It is an oblong square, some 2 1-2 by ten miles. I found these Indians in possession of a small flock of goats, which had been kept within bounds by means of lariats. They had also plenty of beans and corn; and, more astonishing still, they had the most thrifty peach trees that I have ever seen. It is supposable that the most uniform climate in America is to be found in this sink.

I have been for many years travelling as a pioneer in the Far West, and, upon reaching this hidden valley I concluded that here was a spot upon which no white man had ever trod before myself, but to my astonishment, just before taking my leave of the humble chief and his tribe, I got to know, through the medium of a paper handed me by the chief, that the notorious assassin and leader of the Mountain Meadow massacre had been here. The paper—a piece or leaf of a blank book—had written upon it, in pencil, the following:

"Arizona Territory, July 3, 1873. Capt. Stupe-Salie and tribe,—Ignorant, innocent and harmless. JOHN D. LEE."

A Terrific Bear Hunt.

On Saturday evening two men, who had started for the Black Hills on foot, came into town in a hurry, and said they had seen a bear about four miles west, close to track. He was in a hole in the snow, and, as they came along, stuck his head out. As they had not lost any bear, they did not stop to see whether there was more than one, nor how large that one was. The news soon spread, and despite the terrible snow storm, a party of a dozen or more was at once ready to start for the scene. Engine No. 35, run by W. R. Dickinson, was wise accommodated, the six-pounder piece of artillery that has so long stood guard over the Presbyterian church was mounted on top of the tender. All the guns that could be got together were procured, and the engine started for the place where the snow would soon be covered with fur and blood, from a score of huge grizzlies. In a short time the spot was reached, but the storm had filled the entrance of the cave with snow so that all that could be seen was one or two heaps of dirty snow. As soon as the engine stopped, Joe McManus, Mr. Earll, Frank Foote and Mr. Allen jumped off to catch the bear. "Where is it?" said Joe, and started for a heap of snow that might be the opening of the cave, but just then he broke through, his feet probably striking brain on the head, for he at once called for help. On being drawn out it was found the bear had secured one of his boots. At this juncture, Johnny Hoyt and Jesse Knight, getting considerably excited, commenced to load the artillery with lumps of coal, and Joe Edson heated the poker to touch it off, but it would not go. Upon examination it was found that in the hurry the powder had been forgotten. The firearms they had with them were then brought into requisition, and the snow for ten rods square was bored with bullets. The shovel brigade then turned loose, bent upon finding Bruin if he were there. After digging awhile, what was their surprise to come across the head of a cow that had been killed by a train. Concluding that must have been the bear that was seen, the brave hunters returned home. Several persons who were out yesterday found a groundhog, which they conclude to have been the supposed bear. Evanston (Wyoming Territory) Age.

Recently the commissioners of mines saw stored in warehouses of the mine, ready packed for sale, a quantity of white arsenic probably sufficient to destroy every living animal upon the face of the earth.

—In a casual conversation at the central police station in Montreal, Major Voyer took up a loaded revolver, and in explaining to Capt. He had no sooner done this than the revolver went off, the ball penetrating through his bowels and coming out below the right lung. He lingered a few hours, when he died.

—The Waco (Tex.) Examiner says: The other day, near town, a small yearling calf was grazing by the roadside when it was approached by a mule and most viciously attacked. The calf offered no resistance at first and endeavored for some moments to escape, giving utterance to the most piteous cries during the time. The mule followed the poor thing up, kicking and biting it at every turn, until finally, in sheer desperation, the calf turned and butted the enemy squarely in the forehead. The mule staggered a moment and fell to the ground, and when the gentlemen who witnessed the singular occurrence rode up they found it to be quite dead, while the calf, standing a few yards away, was apparently unhurt.

—A Danbury man put a pair of nine-dollar shoes in the store to dry. There was not much fire in the stove and so he closed the oven door. The next morning he built the fire without thought of the shoes, and it was not until an hour later that they occurred to him. They were ruined then. The soles were turned up in a playful manner, and the uppers resembled somewhat the coast of Maine. He didn't say a word. Sadly and silently he was removing them with a shovel, when his wife came in and saw at a glance what had happened. "Well, that's just like a man!" she indiscreetly exclaimed: "Why didn't you have sense enough to look into the oven before you started the fire?" He hadn't said a single word of his loss, but now he spoke: "Gosh darn my eyes if I'll ever build another fire!" And he is keeping his word. When will a woman learn wisdom?

—There is no fruit more serviceable to the people than apples. They contain sugar, gum, much malic acid and some valuable mineral matter. It is true that apples often produce indigestion and flatulence, but generally the cause is in the manner in which they are eaten. Apples contain a great quantity of fixed air, and if eaten fastly the air passes into the stomach, becomes heated, expands, and causes flatulence in persons with weak digestion. Such persons should choose a fresh, mildly tart apple, then scrape it to a fine pulp, and thoroughly mix it with saliva before swallowing. If it is too troublesome to scrape the apple then it should be chewed till every cell is broken down and the air liberated. Physiologically, the apple acts as a stomachic by promoting digestion, and when taken in the morning it becomes a laxative. Its action on the liver is favorable to the health of this organ. The huge, drastic, griping, sickening pills constructed of crude, coarse and bulky ingredients, are fast being superseded by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or Sugar Coated, Concentrated Root and Herbal Juice, Anti-Bilious Granules—the "Little Giant" Cathartic or Multum in Parvo Physic. Modern Chemical Science enables Dr. Pierce to extract from the juices of the most valuable roots and herbs their active medicinal principles, which, when worked into little Pellets or Granules, scarcely larger than mustard seed, renders each little Pellet as active and powerful as a large pill, while they are much more palatable and pleasant in effect.

Dr. Ira A. Thayer, of Baconsburg, Ohio, writes: "I regard your Pellets as the best remedy for the conditions for which you prescribe them of anything I have ever used, so mild and certain in effect, and leaving the bowels in an excellent condition. It seems to me they must take the place of all other cathartic pills and medicines."

The Western Settler's Chosen Specific.

With every advance of emigration into the far West, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly peopled regions are frequently less salubrious than older settled localities, on account of the miasma which rises from recently cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to freshets. The agricultural or mining emigrant soon learns, when he does not already know, that the Bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria and those disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels to which climactic changes, exposure, and unaccustomed or unhealthy water or diet subject him. Consequently, he places an estimate upon this great household specific and preventive commensurate with its intrinsic merits, and is careful to keep on hand a restorative and promoter of health so implicitly to be relied upon in time of need.

DR. DUDLEY already has a fine and rapidly increasing practice in Salem, and consents to come here on trial for a year, (to be in Portsmouth three days of each week, and three days in Salem), at my earnest solicitation, backed by the free gift of my practice.

I could have sold my practice with a recommendation, for a large sum, but feeling the kindness and confidence with which I have been treated, I have chosen, say, felt it impossible to do otherwise than sink private consideration of profit for the good of my patients.

If DR. DUDLEY is appreciated at his true worth by the people of Portsmouth, he can, through the confidence extended to him, be made to reimquish his practice in Salem, and devote his time wholly. That such may be the result of his year of trial here is the devout wish of his friend and the friend of Portsmouth, A. P. STEVENS.

The Old Ladies' Home.

It has been a matter of much comment why the proposed home for aged ladies should be called "Paradise Home." I would say to those who are interested in the Home, that the name has not been fully decided on, but most likely it will be in harmony with the design of the institution. The Home is designed for old ladies, and it is only reasonable to believe the name will be "Old Ladies' Home,"—a full description of which will be given in a few days, when the trustees shall have decided on a name for the Home and completed other primary arrangements. A FRIEND OF HUMANITY.

Jottings.

Vote, and vote early.

This is election day,—the close of a hotly-contested campaign. All the indications are that the republicans will carry the State with a clean sweep, in spite of democratic frauds and money. But let no republican "lay back" until every vote has been polled and victory is won. Vote and work to-day—rest to-morrow.

The Portsmouth Artillery Company held their regular business meeting on Monday evening, with full ranks.

Maffitt & Tyler's troupe at the Temple to-night, with James S. Maffitt as the clown in Humpty Dumpty.

Mr. John A. Nicholls, of England, assisted by Mr. Fred Heath of the Theatre Royal, Montreal, will give an entertainment at Franklin Opera Hall, to-morrow (Wednesday) evening,—humorous readings, recitations in character, and a farce. See advertisement.

Miss Cayvan, the popular and talented reader who will appear at the Temple Thursday evening, is to make her debut in New York this evening. On Wednesday she is to read in Pawtucket, R. I., and on Friday at Natick, Mass.

The republican rally at the Temple, Monday evening, was presided over by Hon. W. H. Y. Hackett, and drew together many more than the Temple could hold. Ex-Gov. Noyes of Ohio made a rousing address, which was received with immense enthusiasm. Frank W. Hackett, Esq., also made a capital speech, and the republicans left the meeting fully resolved to do their whole duty to-day. A good democrat in the gallery at one time called for "Three cheers for Jeff Davis!" and a moment later for "Three cheers for Daniel Marcy!"—a pretty good illustration of how a victory for Marcy would be regarded by the worshipers of the lost cause. "Three cheers for Jeff Davis and Daniel Marcy!" This is not a nation. Let us have peace. How are you going to vote to-day?

The Reform Club meeting at the Temple, Sunday evening, was attended by an immense audience, and one hundred and nine peasons signed the pledge. The interest, instead of diminishing, seems to increase. If one-half, or even one-quarter, of the drinking men who have joined and will join the Club, stick to their pledge, the lasting reformation effected by this movement will be the most remarkable recorded in the temperance annals of this city. The number of reformed men who have fallen from grace, so far, is but trifling compared with the numbers who still hold on.

A Shot From a Parrot.

A few days since a very well-bred and exceedingly dignified young lady of this city entered a florist's to make a purchase, when she was accosted as follows by a shrill voice resembling that of an aged lady: "Shut the door; don't you know any better? It's cold outside." Very much overcome with mortification and embarrassment, she looked about for the speaker, saying, "Pardon me, madam, but the wind blew so I could hardly close the door." "Well, mind your eye, miss, and don't do it again," repeated the voice, when to her great astonishment and amusement, the young lady discovered that she had been conversing with a well educated and certainly very familiar poll-parrot. Evidently annoyed at the bird for deceiving her so, the young lady turned her back to the cage and was intent upon examining some flowers. Suddenly, the same voice, or what seemed to be, said to her, "What can I do for you, miss?" "If you hold your tongue I shall be gratified above all things," replied the young miss, turning around as she spoke, and discovering the lady proprietor standing in her presence. The denouement was all that might be imagined.—Exchange.

—A man who was up in a police court, recently, gave his occupation as that of a "conchologist," and explained by saying he opened oysters at a market.

—The wives of India no longer burn themselves to death when a husband dies. Christianity has taught them that it is better to settle up the estate and go for another man.

—A Hartford man wants to sell a farm in which "meandering streams and rivulets permeate luxuriant pasture, while majestic oaks and stately maples attract the eye of the beholder."

—The public looks upon an editor's labors as the Indian did upon the man that was cutting hay. He finally gave in his opinion that it was "easy to see the white man mow."

—When a sweet little child skips up carlessly and rests its molasses-smeared fingers on your light cassimeres, it is well enough for you to remember that of such is the kingdom of heaven.

—When an editor of a Chicago paper tells a contributor his article is soggy, the contributor tells him in return that his paper ought to have something wet in it, for it is awful dry.

—A pert little miss residing on Eighth street, whose mother is a constant attendant at the Holy Cross Church, when asked what pleasure she was willing to give up during Lent, replied: "Going to school."—Troy Times.

—Two Irishmen crossing a field met a donkey who was making the welkin ring with his unearthly braying. Jemmy stood a moment in astonishment, but turning to Dan, who seemed as much enraptured with the song as himself, remarked: "It's a fine large ear that bird has for music, Dan, but he's got a mighty bad cowld!"

—A new anecdote of the rebellion is as follows: At the close of the war Gen. Joe Johnson met in Baltimore a young man who had enjoyed undisturbed the social delights of that rebellious city, and who said to him, "Well, General, we are conquered, but not subdued." "Were you in the service, young man?" asked the General. "No, sir, I had not that honor." "Then, my friend," said Johnson, "you may not be subdued, but I am."

—An Indiana paper, alluding to the death of the man who designed the great seal of that State, remarks that "any men who would try to make people believe a full-grown buffalo bull would deliberately rush up to a granger who was chopping down a tree at sun-rise ought to die." But the State seal of Indiana is not by any means the most remarkable of the devices employed for that purpose. Georgia offers something more astonishing in the picture of an absurd summer-house, supported by three pillars, and guarded by a Continental soldier, with weak legs; and Kentucky actually presents a figure of Gen. Washington in the act of holding up an intoxicated friend in order to keep him from falling against a bookcase in the back-ground. After this, California's device of Minerva sitting on a stone, while a cinnamon bear nibbles her left leg, seems artistic and nice.

The Dog And The Baker.

Sir Walter Scott tells of one of his dogs that one day furiously attacked the baker, and was with great difficulty called off. But as the dog observed the baker coming every day to leave bread for the family, he began to regard him in a favorable light, and in time the dog and the baker became great friends. One day Sir Walter was telling somebody how the dog had attacked the baker, and immediately he began the story the dog skulked into the corner of the room, turned his face to the wall, hung down his ears, and lowered his tail, and displayed every sign of being heartily ashamed of himself. But when Sir Walter came to the end of the story, and said, "But Tray didn't bite the baker," the dog turned round in a moment, jumped and frisked about, and was evidently quite restored to his own good opinion. To try the dog, Scott repeated the story in different tones of voice, and in the midst even of other conversation; but it was always the same. Directly he began, the dog crept into the corner, but when he came to "But Tray didn't bite the baker," he always capered back again in triumph.—Animal World.

—The dark ages of the world—The times before spectacles were invented.

—A cubic foot of pure gold weighs 1,518. 74 pounds avoirdupois; a cubic foot of pure silver weighs 556. 25 pounds avoirdupois.

—One afternoon, in a "Down East" grocery store, an old man came in for a drink of cider. The grocer had some which, having been frozen and thawed several times, was about as poor a drink as could be found between here and the Black Hills. A glass having been poured out for him, he drank it with the remark that it was "mighty poor cider." "Don't you know," said a veteran loafer, "the way they made that cider? They just set up a cask of water and threw rotten apples at it." "Well," said the man, as he slowly extracted three coppers from his wallet and paid for his drink, "they didn't hit it more'n once."

—The Chicago Tribune has an exclusive report of the case of a young woman in that city who having taken a course of chemistry, has been assisting her father in his drug store. The other day they sent in a prescription for some simple medicine for a sick baby, and next day the baby's father went down town to buy a coffin. The cheist was requested to rise to a personal explanation. "Great Jehoshaphat!" he said, looking at the powder, "why, there's arsenic in this! It ought to have been bi-carbonate of soda. Eliza, how is this?" "Oh pa!" replied his unmoved assistant, "we had no soda, and arsenic was the nearest shade that matched!"

—Tootsy pootsy! They do say that the Washington ladies are so proud of their babies that they take them to the receptions, and enjoy with maternal pride the compliments showered upon them. The latest acquisition to the juvenile set is Mademoiselle Jones, the ninety-days old baby of the millionaire Senator from Nevada, whose eyes are brighter than her mother's sparkling diamonds. The nursery, which is the young lady's general abiding place, is open on reception days, that its luxurious cradle and elegant appointments may be inspected, but Miss Jones is brought down into the drawing-room, wearing the most deliciously embroidered attire and behaving herself with becoming dignity. Society hopes that in due time Gen. Sheridan's young daughter will be brought to the metropolis, and meanwhile it is rumored among the ladies that Mrs. Sheridan has sent a package of diminutive patterns to Mrs. Fred Grant.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "vapid and sensational, for he thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is opened before the children of this country it would scarcely be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and sensuality, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debauches the intellect, ostensibly for human good, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be held under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and unwary children, must influence to a large extent the line of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds are thus fashioned into existence."—Boston Traveller.

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as beautiful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher position, and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GREAT AND BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the undersigned offer to send the 4 numbers (Nov., '75, to D. c., '76) for $5.00.

Or, for $3.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is $7.00. Or for $8.00 the two volumes of NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc., more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 6,000 book pages costing $30.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876 sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

Ten years ago Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. established their advertising agency in New York City. Five years ago they absorbed the business conducted by Mr. John Hooper, who was the first to go into this kind of enterprise. Now they have the satisfaction of controlling the most extensive and complete advertising connection which has never been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. They have succeeded in working down a complex business into so thoroughly a systematic method that no change in the newspaper system of America can escape notice, while the widest information upon all topics interesting to advertisers is placed readily at the disposal of the public.

Notices of the Press.

The Bazar is edited with a combination of tact and talent that we seldom find in any journal; and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Traveller.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household—to the children by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in endless variety, to the provident matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its tasteful designs for embroidered slippers and luxurious dressing-gowns. But the reading-matter of the Bazar is uniformly of great excellence. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the fireside enjoyment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

In its way there is nothing like it. Fresh and trustworthy as a fashion guide, its stories and essays, its poetry and squibs, are all invigorating to the mind. —Chicago Evening Journal.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the course of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which promise to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives will be for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration now managing the Republic. Its course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are hopes that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE can fairly appeal to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued regard of all old readers, and the accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan necessities or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and it will rejoice whenever those principles are victorious under the old banners. But it can never be the servant of caucus or convention, or be tied down to what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it always strives to set forth the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in political discussion its first object is to enlist honest men, whom the country knows and can trust, to secure honest money, Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the forces for the splendid hard-money triumph of Jewell by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as earnestly striving to defeat the plans of the Administration in New York, which was busy filling the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and reforming the Custom House. THE TRIBUNE is quite sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal support and concurrent greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties will themselves force to the standard some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and in practice some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have thus with more or less success been practically forced into the up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end by the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost candor with judicial fairness; will keep its own person and personal wrongs out of view; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for the news of the world. From these who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE asks a continuance of the favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1874 and 1875 the position assigned it long ago by general politics as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest watching and the most liberal expenditure to procure the freshest intelligence, the most complete reports, the most interesting letters and essays, and the ablest work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

POMPEII.

I thought I knew, says a writer, almost how Pompeii looked, yet could not understand how a city could be so covered up as to be entirely forgotten, and no description I ever read could give me a satisfactory idea. It was a small city on a plain, near the foot of Mount Vesuvius; now, where they have dug away the covering, it has the appearance of lying in a valley between two hills, when, in reality, the hills are of the same material as that which once covered the whole city, the valley being formed by removing the ashes to get at the ruins. The more they excavate the larger will be the valley, as more than two-thirds of the city still lies underneath the hills, the grass growing over it as green as it once was over Pompeii entire. No wonder it was forgotten, hidden under a hill, with good pasture land on top. The work of excavation is still going on. We started for Pompeii early in the morning. A guide accompanied us to explain the ruins and watch us. Two francs and a cigar closed his eyes while we kicked up some of the mosaics.

We spent half a day within the walls, and walked nearly over the entire city of roofless houses. It was very interesting. Everything could be traced—the houses with dining [and conversation rooms and inner courts. They believed in luxuries in those days, nearly every house having a bath-room and fountain. The latter are still standing; some with curious figures of children holding the pipes in their hands from which the water came. The pipe is still fastened in the ground. Stores, with marble counters, are standing, some with holes in them for jars of wine or oils. Bakeshops, with mills for grinding corn and ovens for baking, are to be seen. In them were found loaves of bread which might without irreverence, be marked "B. C." A few stairs are left standing to upper rooms. In some of the rooms were found bodies, that are now in the museum. The position of each denote that they died in great agony.

Some were lying with the faces upon their arms, as if to shield them from that fire of burning ashes; others are clasped in each other's arms in an embrace that knew no parting even in death. On the finger of one woman is a ring, while on another is a necklace with the name "Julie de Diomede" engraved upon it. The streets are narrow, the sidewalks high, paved with large, irregular-shaped stones, said to be the lava. On the corners are stepping stones to cross from one side of the street to the other. The houses are gayly painted and frescoed. The painting on the inside is still to be seen, and plainer than some of the work of the old masters. In one house (in which no woman is allowed to enter) are paintings few would care to look at, and none have the hardihood to describe. They show well the character of the house. Many believe that Pompeii's destruction was a just retribution. Perhaps so; but I can't see why Naples was spared.

No sight in Europe has been so interesting to us as Pompeii; everything is just as it was 1,000 years ago. The ruins at Rome and many of the old buildings show its former greatness and many of the customs of the people. But many of them have been altered, and sometimes it is difficult to tell the old from the new. More than one building we have gazed at and admired as ancient; then wormed out of the guide by degrees that this part was modern, that the roof was new, and those columns were placed there three hundred years ago, and so on till it was difficult to find anything but the foundation that was the same as when the building was erected. But in Pompeii everything is unchanged; the style of architecture is not altered; the streets are not widened or the houses rebuilt by progressive people. No, there it stands, a city as old as Rome, without any alteration.

The Rag Brigade.

Some years ago a committee of the British House of Commons, investigating the subject of the paper duty, reported that "not more than four-tenths of the rags of this country are preserved; if the remaining six-tenths could be returned to be manufactured there would be no necessity to go to foreign markets for some twenty-five per cent. of the rags now required for the paper manufacture of England." This statement furnished a hint to the Ragged School Society. There had been established a Shoeblack Brigade; why not a Rag-collecting Brigade? Trucks were thereupon provided, and poor boys trained; the trucks were numbered, and the boys clothed in a serviceable uniform. A printed tariff was prepared, showing how much money was to be offered for each kind of refuse. The collectors are the elder boys, who make purchases and manage the cash; the assistants are younger boys, to draw the trucks, and otherwise act under the collectors; while the sorters are employed at the wharehouse or depot. Every truck has its round or beat, and returns in the evening with a collected store of odds and ends, honestly paid for in money. Paper, rags, old metal, glass, old ropes, bones—all are brought, and the boys have gone so far as to buy, and bring home to the superintendent, a cocked hat, the trappings for a hearse, a bag with a million of canceled postage-stamps, and other unexpected things.—Chambers' Journal.

NEW HEMPSHIRE STARTS IT.

JEFF. DAVIS PLEASE TAKE NOTICE.

There was an election in this State on Tuesday; the following telegrams in relation to that election need no explanation. We recommend a careful study of them to Ben. Hill and Bob Toombs, to the Manchester ballot box stuffers, to the democratic papers that have been insisting the republican party is played out, and to gentlemen who steal State Senates for the benefit of political trick-sters.

At Seabrook the election passed off quietly, though a good deal of rum was drank, the town police effectually maintaining good order. A good deal of money changed hands, many democrats insisting on being paid to vote their own ticket. John M. Weare, democrat, was elected representative by one majority. Caleb

News and Notes.

A severe battle was fought between the Abyssinian and Egyptian armies a few days since, which resulted disastrously to the Abyssinians. They are reported to have lost 5000 men.

Henry Hart, formerly agent of the Pacific Mail Company in Japan and China, has commenced a suit against the company for $125,000, which he claims is due him as commissions on sales of steamers to the Japan Government effected by him.

It seems that Mr. Pendleton received the snug little sum of $80,000 for his valuable services in lobbying through the Kentucky Central Railway claim.

charged with murdering his wife and forging her signature.

The democratic organ in Washington begins to see how it is. It says: "It was a grave error to allow the witness Marsh to escape, and all the personal explanations gentlemen can make will not render it any the less an error."

It is now believed that fourteen persons were burned to death by the recent fire in the almshouse at Norwich, Conn. Several others were seriously injured.

The Globe says: "It is noticed as a peculiarity of New Hampshire that while the population has decreased the number of voters increases every year, and now there is one voter to every four inhabitants." Pooh! In some democratic districts the check-lists show as many voters as inhabitants; and unless something at present unforeseen interferes to prevent, next year some of those districts will have at least two voters to each inhabitant.

The Centennial Legion,

Which is to parade at Philadelphia, on next Independence Day, as escort of the President of the United States, is to be composed of one military company from each of the original thirteen States, which will be represented as follows:

Massachusetts—Boston Light Infantry.
Rhode Island—First Light Infantry.
Connecticut—New Haven Grays.
New York—Old Guard.
New Jersey—Phil. Kearney Guard.
Pennsylvania—State Fencibles.

Maryland—Fifth Maryland Infantry.
Virginia—Norfolk Light Artillery Blues.
North Carolina—Fayetteville Rifles.
South Carolina—Washington Light Infantry.
Georgia—Clinch Rifles.

Each command will wear its own uniform, and carry the flag of the State it represents. A medal commemorative of the occasion will be presented to each member of the Legion.

Cheated.

Mr. N——, of North Vermont, is not distinguished for liberality, either of purse or opinion. His ruling passion is a fear of being cheated. The loss, whether real or fancied, of a few cents would give him more pain than the destruction of our entire navy. He one day bought a large cake of tallow at a country store at ten cents per pound. On breaking it to pieces at home it was found to contain a large cavity. He drove furiously back to the store, entered in great excitement, bearing the tallow and exclaiming:

"Here, you rascal, you have cheated me! Do you call that an honest cake of tallow? It is hollow, and there ain't near so much of it as there appeared to be? I want you to make it right?"

"Certainly, certainly," replied the merchant. "I'll make it right. I did not know the cake was hollow. Let me see; you paid ten cents per pound. Now, Mr. N——, how much do you suppose that hole would weigh?"

Mr. N—— returned home with the dishonest tallow, but was never quite satisfied he had not been cheated by buying holes at ten cents per pound.

A Responsible Indorsement.

A money article of the New York Express contains the following interesting item: Two remarkable bills of exchange, which call for comment, made their appearance in the market lately. They were for 30,000 francs each, drawn by the Astor estate, on Hottinguer, of Paris, and indorsed by John Jacob Astor and the National Bank of Commerce. These bills were bought by August Belmont & Co., and in the course of transmission will probably go to the Rothschilds of Paris and receive their indorsement, and finally be accepted by Hottinguer. The combined wealth represented by the names that will be written upon these bills is something, we believe, without a precedent. The aggregate wealth of the Rothschilds is set down by eminent French authority as $3,200,000,000. The Astors may be put down for $250 000,000; the Bank of Commerce has a capital of $10,000,000, August Belmont is estimated to be worth $10,000,000, and Hottinguer, $25,000,000. This makes a common wealth of three thousand four hundred and ninety-five millions of dollars. We are very strong of the opinion that those bills are good.

—An enterprising grocer in the town of Santa Clara, Cal., has adopted an original method of business. Each side of the store is fitted up for business on its own account. In the general arrangement each side is a duplicate of the other, the difference being that one side is cash and the other credit. When a customer comes in the first question asked is, "Do you wish to buy for cash or on account?" If it is a cash customer the goods and prices on the cash side are shown, but if it is one who wants credit he is shown the other side, and for the first time in his life, perhaps, made to realize the value of ready money.

—The other day a very seedy chap jumped into the river at Cincinnati, but was pulled out in three or four minutes, none the worse for his bath. The crowd scattered, and after a few minutes, when he sat in the sun drying his clothes, a hackman asked; "Don't you wish you hadn't?" "This is no town, this isn't," replied the vagrant, elevating his nose: "I've jumped into the river at Toledo, and had more'n fifty men ask me to drink."

—A story is told of a gentleman who lately, in making a return of his income to the British tax commissioners, wrote on the paper: "For the last three years my income has been somewhat under £150. In the future it will be more precarious, as the

The huge, drastic, griping, sickening pills constructed of crude, coarse and bulky ingredients, are fast being superseded by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or Sugar Coated, Concentrated Root and Herbal Juice, Anti-Bilious Granules—the "Little Giant" Cathartic or Multum in Parvo Physic. Modern Chemical Science enables Dr. Pierce to extract from the juices of the most valuable roots and herbs their active medicinal principles, which, when worked into little Pellets or Granules, scarcely larger than mustard seed, renders each little Pellet as active and powerful as a large pill, while they are much more palatable and pleasant in effect.

Dr. Ira A. Thayer, of Bacousburg, Ohio, writes: "I regard your Pellets as the best remedy for the conditions for which you prescribe them of anything I have ever used, so mild and certain in effect, and leaving the bowels in an excellent condition. It seems to me they must take the place of all other cathartic pills and medicines."

Lyon & Macomber, druggists, Vermillion, D. T., say: "We think they are going to sell like hot cakes as soon as people get acquainted with them and will spoil the pill trade, as those that have used them like them much better than large pills."

Throat Affections and Hoarseness. All suffering from Irritation of the Throat and Hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches."

The Western Settler's Chosen Specific.

With every advance of emigration into the far West, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly peopled regions are frequently less salubrious than older settled localities, on account of the miasma which rises from recently cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to freshets. The agricultural or mining emigrant soon learns, when he does not already know, that the Bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria and those disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels to which climatic changes, exposure, and unaccustomed or unhealthy water or diet subject him. Consequently, he places an estimate upon this great household specific and preventive commensurate with its intrinsic merits, and is careful to keep on hand a restorative and promoter of health so implicitly to be relied upon in time of need.

TO MY PATIENTS!
DR. ALBION M. DUDLEY,
NOW OF SALEM, MASS.,
TO SUCCEED ME MARCH 13th,
Will be fully entitled to the respect and confidence of the citizens of Portsmouth. I can unreservedly recommend him, not only as a gentleman in the true meaning of the term, but as a well read, skillful and conscientious
Dental Practitioner.
DR. DUDLEY already has a fine and rapidly increasing practice in Salem, and consents to come here on trial for a year, (to be in Portsmouth three days of each week, and three days in Salem), at my earnest solicitation, backed by the free gift of my practice.
I could have sold my practice with a recommendation, for a large sum, but feeling the kindness and confidence with which I have been treated, I have chosen, nay, felt it impossible to do otherwise then sink private consideration of profit for the good of my patients.
If DR. DUDLEY is appreciated at his true worth by the people of Portsmouth, he can, through the confidence extended to him, be made to relinquish his practice in Salem, and settle here permanently. That such may be the result of his year of trial here is the devout wish of his friend and the friend of Portsmouth. A. P. STEVENS.
N. B.—I shall take great pleasure in presenting Dr. D. to such of my patients as my limited time here will permit, and also to make engagements for him with any who may wish suggestion or advice from me. A. P. S.

The Election.

Election day was clear and cold, with rather too much wind for comfort; but both parties seemed pleased, the republicans asserting that the good weather would give their party a thousand votes in the State, while the democrats were equally certain their party would be helped the most by it. Voting commenced briskly as soon as the polls were opened, on the part of the republicans especially. Good order and quietness reigned throughout the day, as a general thing—possibly because of the beneficial influence of the Reform Club movement, for the amount of drunkenness seen on the streets and in the ward rooms was much less than is usual on election day. Two of the republican wards (Two and Seven) declared their votes at a reasonably early hour; Ward Four was but little later, and Ward One shut up shop at about 10 o'clock. The other wards kept open until midnight.

At one o'clock the Naval Band, playing the same tune (Sherman's March) to which the democratic procession marched to the Temple one evening last week, started on a tour of the city with a big crowd of jubilant republicans following. Where they went we don't know, but presume they considered themselves attending the funeral of Wards Six and Three! If the Centennial ghosts of the Point of Graves do not now get released from their duty of coming back to vote the democratic ticket in Ward Three, it will be a big outrage.

Early in the afternoon telegrams from the interior of the State showed conclusively that both parties had carried the State by rousing majorities, and both parties were of course elated.

Robert Welsh voted in Ward Three as John Flynn, and in Ward Six as John C. Jones. He was seen to change his coat and hat and roll up his co-t-collar before starting on the last enterprise, and "went through" with a pipe in his mouth. He is to be investigated.

It was reported early in the afternoon that the democratic Ward Four had elected a member of Congress to take Frank Jones' place, and a new Mayor for this city; but later accounts said the old officials would be allowed to retain their places, the democratic selectmen of the ward having put up old election-warrants, calling on voters to bring in their ballots for member of Congress, etc., by mistake. We hope the latter statement is true.

In Marcy's own ward (Ward Three) he lost thirty-five votes from last year, and Cheney gained twelve,—a gain of forty-seven on the right side.

Jottings.

How about the "tin-kettle brigade?"

We learn there is a fine prospect of a good house for Miss Cayvan on Thursday evening; hundreds of tickets have been sold.

A man who has for years voted in Ward Two had his name stricken off this year, it having been discovered that he was not naturalized. As he is a democratic voter he of course must be put on somewhere, so he was put on in Ward Four, though the republicans insisted he was not naturalized and he could show no papers to prove he was,—and though the man himself said he lived in Ward Two!

John A. Nicholls, of England, well and favorably known as a reader and character impersonator, will appear at the Franklin Opera Hall this evening in a choice selection of Readings and Character Recitations. Do not fail to hear him.

How will the democrats account for the overwhelming republican victory of the 14th? That "tin kettle brigade" wasn't around this time. We had heard so much of the "navy yard influence" that we had almost become convinced the navy yard did win victories.

—A Harvard professor went down to one of the beaches on the New England coast to bathe, one stormy day, but the men in charge refused to let him go in on account of the dangerous swell. On his way back he expressed his disappointment and indignation to the driver of the omnibus. "Well, I'll tell you how it is," said the driver; "we don't like to have strangers come down here and get drowned. It hurts the beach."

—Pride is not a bad thing when it teaches

Tornadoes are getting frequent out West. One of 'em will strike New Hampshire today.—Boston Post of March 14.

'Twas an earthquake, old buffer. How do you like it?

They are betting on a thousand democratic majority in New Hampshire, Tuesday. Not enough.—Post.

They might as well have bet on ten thousand, while they were about it.

—At a collection made at a charity fair a lady offered the plate to a rich man who was well known for his stinginess. "I have nothing," was the curt reply. "Then take something, sir," said the lady; "you know I am begging for the poor."

—Parisian ladies who do their own needle-work have adopted thimbles with a pebble inserted at the top. The agate, cairngorm, onyx, and crystal are the most popular, as they look very pretty in their setting of silver.

—How long must a collector or book keeper be a man of the "strictest probity" in order to secure a reputation for honesty on which it is safe to begin to steal?

—The Michigan woman who forwarded two dollars to help pay the national debt now wants a pair of shoes, and her indigant husband asks: "Where's them two dollars?"

—A Kentucky judge has decided that a man has no right to harness his wife to a plough—no, not even with a mule. And Experience in Battle.

I believe no two good soldiers will widely disagree as to their sensations during a battle. I take it to be a piece of bravado in a man to assert that he had no fear during the progress of a long and severe engagement. A battle is a veritable hell upon earth; not to be in a serious apprehension while it lasts is to either drunk, crazy, or insensible. The highest type of bravery is that of the man who realizes the full extent of the peril, but sticks resolutely to his duty. It was my experience, and that of all those about me, repeated a dozen times, that shell firing is not ordinarily nearly so demoralizing as that of musketry. It is not often that shells are thrown so that their fragments scatter death and wounds, and their loud humming overhead does not cause that nervous tingling which always follows the sharp zip of the rifle-bullet. The peculiar cutting of the air made by half a dozen of these at once is apt to give the soldier the idea that the whole air is filled with them. All, I believe, will agree as to the sensation first caused by the impact of a bullet. It is a stunning, numbing feeling, which for a long time overpowers the local pain of the wound. In my experience, a single buckshot near the hip knocked me flat, and for two days after gave me such acute pains and such muscular disturbances from knee to shoulder that I could not stand erect. Soldiers have frequently been prostrated by spent balls. A curious effect of shell wounds is that they do not bleed; the hot fragment sears the torn blood vessels and stops the effusion. A minnie ball extracted from the human body presents a remarkable sight. I have seen them where the resistance of the flesh had turned back the pointed end on all sides with such regularity that the ball resembled a saucer or a flower.—New York Times.

The Tables Turned.

A year ago or so Ben Hines, of Brewerton, took unto himself a wife. The secret history of their lives during the year which followed shall not be written; suffice it to say that Mrs. Hines recently determined upon forcking her liege lord and did so, whereat he was wroth. To avenge his anger, he resolved upon giving Mrs. Hines a dressing of tar and feathers, but he could not make such a presentation without assistance, and how could assistance be obtained? A thought struck him; whiskey would help him out. So he assembled certain individuals before a bar where beverages were dispensed, and after all had freely partaken of his liberality, he divulged his plan. They were to go to the house where his wife was stopping, decoy her to the street, seize her, and apply the offensive coating to her twinkling. he to give the signal for action by a whistle. On arriving at the house, one of the party entered F. and soon returned to the street with Mrs. H., when the whistle was given. At once the party rushed forward, with the bucket of tar and feathers which Hines had provided, but to his horror their footsteps were directed toward him instead of in the direction of his wife. It was but the work of a moment to smear him from head to foot with tar and cover him with feathers till he resembled an Onondaga brave. He was quick to see that he was the victim of his own machinations, and was glad to sneak away without further molestation. The affair created no little excitement in the quiet village of Brewerton, and the popular verdict is, "Served him right."—Syracuse (N. Y.) Journal.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that the productions of the books in brisk demand in the public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks it is enough to guide the children's taste to be "afraid of reading more than they do." The Newark Advertiser.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is given before the children of this country it would be difficult for the ingenuity of man seriously to invent and to execute. It is even worse than an open over story of vice and intemperance, for the sensational is the most insidious of all, and it leaves excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits it for healthy, and, therefore, enjoyable, wholesome food and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. We wonder that low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can not rise to an effective level above its source, we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, delivered by millions and eager children, must influence to a lofty extent the tone of thought and the drift of a few of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If an editor were to allow, it would not detract from Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST NICHOLAS), there could be a thing to complain of. The New York Tribune says:"

THE AVALANCHE OF IMMORAL LITERATURE

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST NICHOLAS has reached a higher plot ous, and common sense this service wider resources in a more and better a, than any of its predecessors or competitors."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

Rev. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the comparative merits of ST. NICHOLAS, "SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE OF ELEGANCE AND TASTE," "A cleaner, purer, more truly wholesome periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $4.00.

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is 7.00. Or for $6.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS a year, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,700 octavo pages, with over 1,000 illustrations; they have five special series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographic papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books or 6,000 book pages, costing $3.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876 sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household—to the civil men by dressing pretty patterns, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in small as varied a variety, to the provident matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its useful designs for embroidered slippers and tasteful dressing-gowns. CONDITION PILLS!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1875. Wonderful as the sale of this package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by the Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past I have grown worse, and last April I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. About that time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt relieved by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I consider myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I purchased one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages.

SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE.—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I was so bad with Liver Complaint, I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but never found any more than two or three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this phrase find $1.5s for three packages for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing me much pain and misery. I was entirely unable for months to sleep to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal of money, and received no permanent benefit, concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken half of them I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can sleep as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and say it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Kidneys and Complaint, and would like to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think the world is a blessing to those who need them and will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane---Health much Better at 64 than 44---Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Rockingham, who are taking it, and are already much benefitted. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

Hundreds of others have sent in unsolicited testimonials of the efficacy of these Pills. Among them are:

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing to it.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is audorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the luxurious climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the cause of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent its spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration now drawing to a close. The course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept out, and great reforms to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In commerce and industry it may be a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and, particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are signs that it will without the long deferred revival.

In this strange and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued support of all who believe in the extension of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can adequately such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan prejudice or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion all through the Anti-Slavery conflict, and it will rejoice whenever those principles are victorious under the old banner. But it can never be the servant of caucuses or party leaders. Also, it will be what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and will be for the wrongdoing of neither. In great measure it endeavored to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics it will continue to be the friend of man, whom the constitution and law can trust; to secure hard in war, it will continue to reform, such economy in public affairs as will relieve the times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it found the Republican party in 1872 ready for the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and is earnestly striving to bring about a change of an Administration in New York, which was busy filching the Capital Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In the coming year the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course as to stand the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward their leaders, and to prosecute some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have taken within two or three years growth Journal, and that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost practicable freshness, and interest in its columns free from personal wranglings; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from its numerous rivals, and its readers will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.

From the time when it was a neglected which either editor or its friends can command to render each issue an entertaining and valuable compendium of

DISMAL SWAMP.

A correspondent of the Washington Star gives the following description of the Dismal Swamp, which though brief, and to those who have visited the locality, inadequate, is still worth reading. The writer forgets, among other things, to mention in favor of the swamp that its title is a misnomer, as it is far from being "dismal" in any sense, being full of brilliant flowers, beautifully luxurious vegetation, and singing birds, in their seasons; and as a counter charge, that it abounds in gnats, mosquitoes, wood-ticks and other annoying vermin, which abound to such an extent as to make a visit to their domain a thing to be dreaded or avoided at any time in the summer after the month of May.

The swamp is about thirty miles long and from fifteen to twenty wide. It is covered with a dense growth of vegetation, consisting of much valuable timber, such as cypress, juniper, pine and gum, with an undergrowth of wild cane and a great variety of other plants, in many places so dense that a squirrel could not get through. In other places, particularly those known as gum swamps, it is not so dense. Cypress and juniper make very valuable timber, especially where great durability is desired. In the central part of this swamp is a body of fresh water known as Lake Drummond, formerly said to be unfathomable, but this is a mistake. It is only from ten to fifteen feet in depth. Possibly there may be places of greater depth. It is oval in shape and about seven miles long and four wide. It has no sloping banks like ordinary lakes. Cypress and juniper grow near the shore in water several feet in depth, the crown of their roots two or three feet above the water. You can step from comparatively solid earth (if a purely vegetable mould well saturated with water may be called solid earth) into deep water. The shore appears to be gradually encroaching upon the lake, and in time will doubtless absorb it entirely. This whole swamp was once a lake of fresh water after the ocean retired to its present limits. There is unmistakable evidence that this whole lower party of Virginia and North Carolina was once the bed of the Atlantic ocean, and that at no distant geologic period. Immense beds of marl, consisting of partly decomposed marine shells, abound here, and are used by farmers on land requiring lime. It is a singular fact that in these marl beds are shells unlike any found on this coast now.

The water of this lake is very salubrious, and said to be a sure cure for chills and fever. Before the late war, a house was built near the lake as a resort for invalids and sportsmen. The lake abounds with fish, such as pickerel, pike, perch, and some other varieties, which afford fine sport the year round for anglers. In the swamp are bears, deer, raccoons, wild-cats, turkeys, and in the lake wild geese, ducks and other aquatic birds. Not infrequently the sportsman will meet with wild cattle and hogs, who live and get fat on the wild cane that grows in great abundance here. Farmers living on the borders of the swamp turn their cattle into the swamp in the fall, and they remain there all winter and get fat. Beef fatted on this cane has an excellent flavor. I have eaten it and thought it superior to any beef I ever tasted. In my late visit there I ate butter made from the milk of cows that had no other food than this wild cane, by a Pennsylvania lady, who knew good butter. She thought it equal to the best Pennsylvania butter.

There is quite a colony of Pennsylvanians who have bought farms not far from Suffolk, Nansemond county, and in the neighborhood of the swamp, many of them including a portion of it. Some of this land has been reclaimed, and is the richest part of the farm. Last summer a ditch was dug on three sides of two-thirds of an acre, which was grubbed, turned over, and planted with corn on the fourth of July. The crop fully matured, growing from ten to fifteen feet in height, and yielded forty-five bushels of shelled corn.

This whole swamp is covered with a vegetable mould, the accumulation of ages, of from three to four feet in thickness. It is not uncommon to find large trees of cypress and juniper that have fallen down and lie imbedded in this mould two or three feet below the surface, that must have lain there for centuries, and yet when dug up are split into shingles. In digging the Dismal Swamp canal, connecting the waters of Albemarle Sound with those of Chesapeake Bay, the boles of large trees were found ten feet below the surface. Trees more than two feet in diameter had grown directly over them.

Many people suppose that this swamp is a worthless waste. It is a mistake. "There's millions in it." The Dismal Swamp Land Company own over forty-eight thousand acres of it. They have built a narrow gauge railroad from the Nansemond river, near Suffolk, some eight or ten miles into the swamp, have built steam saw mills there, and are bringing out immense quantities of pine wood, railroad ties, and lumber of various kinds. They employ hundreds of men.

Chills and fever are unknown among them. The common opinion is that this exemption from disease is owing to their drinking the juniper water of the lake. This water is about the color of brandy. Others are of the opinion that the immense amount of dense vegetation absorbs the malaria that may arise from the decay of so much vegetable matter.

In the neighborhood of this swamp, on the Seaboard & Roanoke railroad, two and a-half miles from Suffolk, is the "Magnolia Spring," the water of which bids fair to rival our most popular medical waters. It has effected, it is claimed, some remarkable cures, particularly in chronic cases of dyspepsia and diseases of the kidneys and other urinary organs.

How It Was.

The political battle in this State has been fought out, and the result is that the democratic party is badly defeated. At the present moment (Wednesday), before the smoke of the conflict has fairly cleared away, it is not yet possible to make out a full list of the killed and wounded; but making all allowance for the usual falling off from the first claims of the winning party in a political fight, it is pretty certain the republicans have carried the State, and against the most adverse circumstances under which a party ever labored in New

THE SUCCESSFUL PHYSICIAN.

The is probably no man to whom the community owes so much as to the honest, fair-spoken physician, who does his actual duty both to himself and to his patients. Really skillful physicians are not so numerous that their virtues need no mention, and hence the advertisement of Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, may well claim the reader's attention. Dr. Pierce is a type of a class of men who obtain success by careful and well-directed effort, and attempting too much, or creating false ideas as to ability. The only reliable physician in these days of complicated disorders and high-pressure living is the "Specialist," the man who understands his one branch of the business. Such in his line is Dr. Pierce. For the benefit of his readers he has written a "Common Sense Medical Adviser," which is well worth reading by those who need such a work. With strict business honor, high professional skill, reasonable fees, and a large corps of competent assistants, Dr. Pierce will doubtless make his name familiar as "household words."

The age of miracles has passed, yet the cures of Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam are more miraculous than anything that has existed in modern times. Sold everywhere.

The Only Remedy.

Those who suffer from foul breath are open to the charge of carelessness. It is an offence that can be specially abated, as a single bottle of the fragrant SOZODONT will unmistakably accomplish the work. No toilet table should be without it. It will preserve and keep the teeth white, and the breath pure and sweet.

Spalding's Glue, who would be without it?

The Only Way to Conquer Dyspepsia.

It is perfectly preposterous to introduce pepsin and other artificial solvents into the stomach in the expectation that they will assist digestion by acting on the food itself. They will not. Nor is it possible thus to overcome dyspepsia. The only way to conquer that disorder, and prevent the numerous diseases and disabilities which it assuredly provokes, is to renew the activity of gastric action by strengthening the stomach. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters eradicates the most inveterate forms of indigestion by restoring vitality to the alimentary organs and those which are tributary to them. The liver, the bowels, the kidneys and the nerves, no less than the stomach, experience the invigorative effects of this standard tonic, which possesses alterative properties that greatly enhance its beneficial influence, and give a permanence to its effects which they would not otherwise possess.

Fatal Affray.

A fracas occurred on Tuesday afternoon, about 5 o'clock, at Christian Shore, which resulted in the death of a man named William Canty. Canty, who was a workman in Jones' brewery, was noisy and troublesome in Franklin Ayers' store; he was arrested by an officer, and placed in charge of two specials to be taken to the station. On the way he twisted off his handcuffs and assaulted the officers in a desperate manner; was struck by special Smith, and fell. Soon afterward he was taken to his uncle's, at the Creek, where he died about 8 o'clock the same evening.

On Wednesday Coroner J. E. Rider commenced an inquest, with Messrs. George E. Hodgdon, Josiah G. Hadley and James F. Hartshorn as jurors. A large number of witnesses have been summoned, and several have been examined. The evidence so far offered goes to show that a sort of free fight was going on in Ayers' store, and when the officers attempted to quell it they were resisted by Canty, and by some of the others present who tried to rescue Canty from the officers who were taking him to the station. After Canty was taken some little distance toward the station he got his right hand loose from Officer Smith and aimed a powerful blow at the head of Officer Glazebrook, who dodged the blow and caught it on his shoulder. Mr. Glazebrook says if he had received the full force of the blow he would have been felled to the ground, as Canty was considered the most powerful man in the city.

Mr. John Shannon saw the officers pass his window with the prisoner, and went to the door to look after them. Saw Canty get his hand loose and strike at Glazebrook, and then saw Smith strike Canty four blows on the head. Shannon has known the two officers for over twenty years, and always considered them peaceable citizens.

Drs. Whittier, Parsons and Osorio made an autopsy, and found the skull fractured. Dr. Whittier fully described the injuries to the jury, and gave as his opinion that they could have been caused by blows, by a fall, or by something falling on the head.

Jottings.

Don't forget the readings of Miss Cayvan at the Temple to-night.

At the adjourned meeting of the voters of Ward Two, Wednesday, Mr. Peter Pray, republican, was chosen to represent the ward in General Court. This makes the delegation from this city stand seven democrats and five republicans.

Certain democrats of Ward Three undertake to prove themselves very "smart" by hinting that Mr. Edwin Lowd, a square republican, was bought by the democrats and threw a democratic ticket on election day. We should fancy that admitting that the professed abhorrence of the democrats for the use of money in elections is the sham it is known to be. But Mr. Lowd is vouched for by the best authority as a straight-out republican and not for sale—either at the late election or any other time.

Dr. S. C. Whittier has in his possession two of the old campaign medals of 1840-2, on both of which are raised busts of Gen. Harrison, the reverse of one having the inscription "The People's Choice, The Hero of Tippecanoe," with the log cabin. On the other, encircling Bunker Hill Monument and the Glory of Flags, is "Harrison Jubilee, Sept. 10, 1840." These relics of a most exciting campaign can now be seen in the window at Dr. Briant's drug store.

The vote for County Treasurer in this city on the 14th, 2393, was the largest ever thrown in this city.

Auction of desirable household furniture, fine pictures, statuary, etc., at No. 52 Middle street, to-day. See advt.

A Canoe Voyage.

A journalist of this city, an associate editor upon one of the morning newspapers, undertook to make a canoe voyage down the Susquehannah River last Summer. He took his canoe up to Wilkesbarre on the cars, and launched it upon the bosom of the stream at that point. The only obstacle to complete enjoyment on the part of the voyagers upon the Susquehannah are the many dams which obstruct the stream. It is customary to carry the canoes around these and to enter the stream below them. The first one encountered by the editor was the dam at Nanticoke. This has in the middle of it an enormous shute, through which the water rushes upon an inclined plane, so as to permit the rafts which descend the river to float down. Just before reaching the dam the editor paddled in to the shore and interviewed a native respecting the condition of the shute.

"What do you think of the chances of my shooting the dam in this canoe? Do you believe that I could do it?"

"I should think you could, of course," said the man.

"Will there be no trouble about getting through?"

"No; I guess not. I never heard of anybody having any."

"Why? Did any one ever go down in a canoe?"

"Yes, indeed! There was a fellow here about a week ago who went through a-whizzing."

"What did he say about it?"

"Well, he didn't make any particular remark; took it quietly."

"Didn't seem frightened?"

"O no! After he got through he was just as calm and unruffled as a baby."

The journalist resolved that he would try it. He paddled out to the channel and headed his frail bark for the shute. Pretty soon he got into the current, and the canoe began to acquire frightful velocity. Then he thought maybe he had better give up the venture and haul the canoe around on dry land, but the current was too strong for him and the only thing he could do was to keep the boat bows on and let it go. By the time the head of the shute was reached the boat was making about 100 miles an hour, and the next moment it slid down the watery hill like a flash of lightning.

When it struck the river below it shot beneath the surface, carrying the crew with it, and for a second or two he could feel himself proceeding under water at a painfully high rate of speed. Then he became unconscious.

When he revived he found that some philanthropic person had hold of his legs and was rolling him on a barrel, while close at hand lay his canoe, with a hole stove in the bottom, and his trousers with the point of a boat-hook firmly fastened in them. Then they sat him up, and as soon as he seemed comfortable the native who had given the information about the dam approached and said:

"Two dollars, please?"

"Two—two—why, what—two dollars for what?"

"For snatching you from a watery grave. It's the regular charge."

"Why, you told me that I could shoot the dam!"

"Well, you did shoot it, didn't you?"

"And you said that the other man last week did it safely?"

"O no! What I said was that he was calm after he went through. And so he was. He was awful calm, because his pants were so tender that they wouldn't hold the boat-hook, and when we ketched him he was dead!"

"Why didn't you tell me it was so dangerous, you infamous scoundrel?"

"Young man, don't use hard words. Why didn't I tell you? I did give you all the information you asked for; and, besides, I make my living fishing fellers out; and really, now, look at the thing fair and you'll admit that I can't be taking the bread out of my mouth by begging all such navigators as you to get out and walk; now can I?"

Then the editor broke in the ribs of his canoe with the end of his paddle, and voyaged home in the cars. When he canoes again he will hunt up a river that has never been dammed.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

—A few days ago a lady walking down Fulton street, Brooklyn, was accosted by a meek-looking rustic laborer with a shovel over his shoulder, who made a respectful, but clumsy bow. "Beg yer pardon, mum, but do yer know what this is worth?" asked the bumpkin, holding out a ring for the lady's inspection. The lady looked at the ring and then at the man. Both looked honest. Moreover, she saw the ring was marked "18 carats." The man had had nothing to eat for three days; his wife and family were starving; he would take one dollar for it. The lady bought the ring, only to find later that several of her friends had been victimized by the same man, whose stock in trade consisted of one dozen rings, the cost price of which was 50 cents.

How It Was.

The political battle in this State has been fought out, and the result is that the democratic party is badly defeated. At the present moment (Wednesday), before the smoke of the conflict has fairly cleared away, it is not yet possible to make out a full list of the killed and wounded; but making all allowance for the usual falling off from the first claims of the winning party in a political fight, it is pretty certain the republicans have carried the State, and against the most adverse circumstances under which a party ever labored in New have a large and varied assortment of reasons to offer in explanation of their defeat, and we may as well give our opinion on the matter to-

When we speak of the adverse circumstances under which the republican party labored, we refer only to the manner in which the Councillor and Senatorial districts, and the ward-lines in the cities of the State, had been arranged by the democrats; for in all things else the democratic party was terribly weighted down. First was the war record of Mr. Marcy, as exemplified by his unfortunate (for him) speech in Congress, and by his votes there; and the indisorect zeal with which the Concord People, the Manchester Union and the Dover Democrat defended and applauded his expressions and acts, boasted that he still holds the same opinion he did twelve years ago, and maintained that he was right then and is right now, with the rabid secession sputtings of such men as Hill, Toombs and Davis, and the acts of the democracy in Louisiana, Mississippi and other Southern States, made the burden all the heavier.

The miserable shuffling of the democratic majority in Congress,—their total failure to introduce really important legislation, and their making the interests of the country a secondary matter to the interests of the democratic party, also helped the republican cause,—far more than the Belknap expose hurt it. Indeed, the wretched manner in which the Clymer committee bungled the Belknap matter, (to speak very mildly,) and the square stand taken by the republicans, on that committee and elsewhere, in favor of pushing things to the utmost, so strikingly in contrast with the indecision and trimming of the democrats, utterly destroyed any effect the scandal might have had toward aiding the democracy; and we believe that if the whole affair exerted any appreciable influence on our State election, it was the republican party was benefited by it.

But the hardest thing of all for the democracy to make headway against was their own record in this State. The removal of wholesome restrictions on naturalization and on the power of keeping voting places open after a reasonable hour; the passing of the infamous ratable-poll bill; the unscrupulous gerrymandering of districts and cities; the remodelling of the judiciary system for the sole purpose of making the courts democratic; the frauds in this city, and the wholesale fraud and rampart ruffianism in Manchester; and the Senatorial outrage, when Weston and his democratic advisers, on the most contemptible quibble ever brought forward as an excuse for a piece of political scoundrelism, put into the State Senate two men who were not chosen to it,—all these things were remembered against the democracy, and contributed to the decisive rebuke administered to that party at the polls on the 14th.

News and Notes.

The bankruptcy of Mr. Daniel Drew will not be much of a shock in Wall street, and still less outside of it. Mr. Drew has been practically out of business for a year—a fact to which the comparatively modest amount of the liabilities of the once redoubtable operator bears ample testimony. A petition in bankruptcy is not a very brilliant ending to thirty years of stock jobbing, though it carries with it a tolerably instructive moral.—New York Times.

Feeding Coal Fires.

A very common mistake is made and much fuel wasted in the manner of replenishing coal fires, both in furnaces and grates. They should be fed little coal at a time, and often; but servants, to save time and trouble, put on a great deal at once, the first result being that almost all the heat is absorbed by the newly put on coal, which does not give out heat until it has itself become red hot. Hence, for a while, the room is cold, but when it becomes fairly aglow the heat is insufferable. The time to replenish a coal fire is as soon as the coals begin to show ashes on their surface; then put on merely enough to show a layer of black coal covering the red. This will soon kindle, and as there is not much of it, an excess of heat will not be given out. Many also put out the fire by stirring the grate as soon as the fresh coal is put on, thus leaving all the heat in the ashes when it should be sent to the new supply of coal. The time to stir the fire is just when the new coal is pretty well kindled. This method of managing a coal fire is troublesome, but it saves fuel, gives a more uniform heat, and prevents the discomfort of alternations of heat and cold above referred to.

—Colonel Dent says his family never felt very proud of its alliance with Grant until late in life. They all thought Julia (Mrs. Grant) might have done better, at the time. The parents of the President's wife were much opposed to the marriage, but it did no good. Julia was obstinate, and met 'Liss wherever she could. One day the Colonel was out riding with his sister, when he met Grant, who was on horseback. On this occasion Grant gave evidence of that strategetic ability which has since characterized him. Grant halted the Colonel, and asked him to look at the horse he was riding. Grant stated that it was a fine animal, and he wished to have the Colonel try him. Colonel Dent climbed out of the carriage and exchanged places with 'Liss. That ride settled the matter. 'Liss and Julia made it up between them to get married in spite of the opposition of the old folks. How well they carried out the programme the people of the United States

THE SUCCESSFUL PHYSICIAN.

The is probably no man to whom the community owe so much as to the honest, fair-spoken physician, who does his actual duty both to himself and to his patients. Really skillful physicians are not so numerous that their virtues need no mention, and hence the advertisement of Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, may well claim the reader's attention. Dr. Pierce is a type of a class of men who obtain success by careful and well-directed effort, not attempting too much, or creating false ideas as to ability. The only reliable physician in these days of complicated disorders and high-pressure living is the "Specialist," the man who understands his one branch of the business. Such in his line is Dr. Pierce. For the benefit of his readers he has written a "Common Sense Medical Adviser," which is well worth reading by those who need such a work. With strict business honor, high professional skill, reasonable fees, and a large corps of competent assistants, Dr. Pierce will doubtless make his name familiar as "household words."

The Only Remedy.

Those who suffer from foul breath are open to the charge of carelessness. It is an offence that can be speedily abated, as a single bottle of the fragrant SOZODONT will unmistakably accomplish the work. No toilet table should be without it. It will preserve and keep the teeth white, and the breath pure and sweet.

Spalding's Glue, who would be without it?

The Only Way to Conquer Dyspepsia.

It is perfectly preposterous to introduce pepsin and other artificial solvents into the stomach in the expectation that they will assist digestion by acting on the food itself. They will not. Nor is it possible thus to overcome dyspepsia. The only way to conquer that disorder, and prevent the numerous diseases and disabilities which it assuredly provokes, is to renew the activity of gastric action by strengthening the stomach. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters eradicates the most inveterate forms of indigestion by restoring vitality to the alimentary organs and those which are tributary to them. The liver, the bowels, the kidneys and the nerves, no less than the stomach, experience the invigorative effects of that standard tonic, which possesses alterative properties that greatly enhance its beneficial influence, and give a permanence to its effects which they would not otherwise possess.

NOW OF SALEM, MASS.,

TO SUCCEED ME MARCH 13th,

Will be fully entitled to the respect and confidence of the citizens of Portsmouth. I can unreservedly recommend him, not only as a gentleman in the true meaning of the term, but as a well-read, skillful and conscientious

Dental Practitioner.

DR. DUDLEY already has a fine and rapidly increasing practice in Salem, and consents to come here certain for a year, (to be in Portsmouth three days of each week, and three days in Salem), at my earnest solicitation, backed by the free gift of my practice.

I could have sold my practice with a recommendation, for a large sum, but loving the kindness and confidence with which I have been treated, I have chosen, nay, felt it impossible to do otherwise than sink private consideration of profit for the good of my patients.

IF DR. DUDLEY is appreciated at his true worth by the people of Portsmouth, he can, through the confidence accorded to him, be made to relinquish his practice in Salem, and settle here permanently. That such may be the result of a year of trial here is the most wish of his friend and the friend of Portsmouth. A. P. STEVENS.

N. B.—I shall take great pleasure in recommending

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All undersigned have a agency to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are bereaved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I present Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration of the Patent Office."

EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents.

Mr. R. H. Eddy has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and skill on his part leads me to recommend his services to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and a very reasonable charge.

PROPOSALS.

An Irish girl who was very anxious that her scatter-brained brother should not be refused by the demure young Englishwoman with whom he had fallen desperately in love, implored him to try to propose with the seriousness becoming the occasion. He vowed solemnly that he would behave as if he were acting as chief mourner at his father's funeral. The demure young lady, in imitation of many of her countrywomen, graciously accepted her wild Irish lover. She, however, confided to her bosom friend that Edmond had proposed in rather an odd way. He had taken her after church to see the family vault, and had there, in a sepulchral voice, asked her if she would like to lay her bones beside his bones. This he evidently thought was a proper way to fulfill the promise made to his sister of treating the matter with becoming seriousness. It was happily his first and last effort in that direction. There must be many hundred thousand proposals made annually in the United Kingdom, but as the verb "to love" admits of endless conjugations, perhaps we shall have ceased proposing, except by filling up a printed form, before all its variations are exhausted. At the commencement of each year the Registrar-General can foretell with tolerable accuracy how many of her Majesty's subjects will enter into the bonds of holy matrimony before its conclusion. A more than usually abundant harvest might increase the number beyond his calculations, or a war might depress them; but his average would not be very far astray. But what Registrar-General can tell us the average number of proposals which are made each year, or how many rejections go to make one marriage? Indeed it is by no means easy to define exactly what is, and what is not, to be called a proposal. When a man says to a girl with whom he has waltzed several times that, if ever he becomes a Benedict, he hopes his wife will exactly resemble her and dress precisely as she does, if the girl answers "You may ask papa," there may reasonably be a difference of opinion as to whether the pretty speech can be raised into a proposal or not. When, however, a shy man, having got his mother to plead his cause, says to the beloved one, with a tremulous gasp, "Won't you do the thing my mother asked you?" there is no doubt that to all intents and purposes he has asked her to be his wife. Proposals do not necessarily precede marriage, any more than does marriage necessarily succeed a proposal, and many a servant-maid becomes a wife without the young man with whom she kept company for so many alternate Sundays ever asking her in plain words. Much of the romance of love-making has, in fact, disappeared since the number of marrying men became so small in comparison with the number of women who wish to become wives. A disagreeable fellow with twenty thousand a year may not be able to win the particular duke's daughter on whom he has set his heart, but he will not be condemned to a bachelor's existence because he cannot find plenty of pretty young ladies ready to accept his name, and help him to spend his fortune.

It is not uncommon to hear a mother detail to her friends how Mr. Longacres would have proposed to dear May, but that really, owing to the most extraordinary complication of circumstances, he never got an opportunity; and that now he is married to a designing little fortune-hunter, and is miserable. She tells how one day he got so far as to propound a riddle to May, which, if she had only been able to guess it, would have certainly led the way to a declaration of his affection. Indeed it really did amount to a proposal, for what could be more plain than saying, "My first is myself, my second a plaything, my whole you are." Of course if a woman is a man's idol he wants to marry her. But poor May becomes so agitated by the way in which Mr. Longacres looked at her that, although she had heard the riddle before, and recollected its answer the moment he was gone, the opportunity was unfortunately gone also. Then the mother goes on to say that she is quite sure one of Violet's lovers intended to come to the point in returning from the Derby, but he lost so many dozen pairs of gloves from having backed the favorite that he also lost his temper. He scarcely spoke to any one the whole way home, although she had taken care to give him an excellent luncheon and the driest of champagne. The next week he was ordered abroad, so of course had only time to say a hurried good-by!

Generally speaking, this idea of men not being able to find opportunities to tell their love is arrant nonsense. A man may sometimes not propose where he fears to be refused, but when he wishes for a Yes, and is pretty certain he will get it, the question does not remain unasked no matter what the difficulties which have to be overcome. There is no place where the ardent lover, if such a being still exists, cannot tell his tale. There are no circumstances, serious or gay, which cannot be turned to good account by a skillful wooer. True, many men are neither ardent nor skillful, and contrive almost to insult a woman while paying her the highest compliment in their power. But others know exactly when and where to press their suit with success. A young person travelling in Palestine, and asked to join a pleasant party, amongst whose numbers he found a notable lecturer of passionate piety, did well to restrain the expression

Daily Chronicle.

—A boy of Cass County, Ind., said he guessed he would "scatter them darned-old hens," meaning some women who were assembled at a quilting party in his mother's parlor. He fired upon them through a window with a heavily-loaded shot-gun, and only slightly wounded two; but the recoil of the weapon threw him down a bank, breaking an arm and two ribs.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-months of the books in brisk demand of the public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks that an anti-opium pipe is the children's book to be choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this county it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, a river can nowhere be so effectual, poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of baned paper, devoured by curious and eager children, must contribute to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to add that we have no reference in the above to the monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits "ST NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "ST

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST NICHOLAS has reached a higher plane, and continues to fill this service with resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

Rev. C. S. Robinson, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE, GIRLS AND BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the level of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the twelve numbers (Nov. '75, to D c., '76) for $3 0

Or, on $3.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound Volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is $4.00. Or for $6.00 they will send ST NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,700 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five special colored stories, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 5,000 book pages costing $25.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876 sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

GEO. R. ROWELL & CO., 41 PARK ROW, NEW YORK.

Ten years ago Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. established their advertising agency in New York City. Five years ago they absorbed the business conducted by Mr. John Hooper, who was the first to go into this kind of enterprise. Now they have the satisfaction of controlling the most extensive and complete advertising connection which has never been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. They have succeeded in working down a complex business into so thoroughly a systematic method that no change in the newspaper system of America can escape notice, while the widest information upon all topics interesting to advertisers is placed readily at the disposal of the public.

Notices of the Press.

The Bazar is edited with a combination of tact and talent that we seldom find in any journal; and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Traveller.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household—to the doll rest by Harper's Bazar, and pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in endless variety, to the prudent matron in its patterns for the children's clothes, to the pater familias by its useful designs for embroidered slippers and dressing-gowns. But the reading matter of the Bazar is quite equal to the pictures. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the fireside entertainment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

In its way there is nothing like it. Fresh and trustworthy as a fashion guide, its short stories and essays, its poetry and sketches, are all invigorating to the mind.—Chicago Evening Journal.

MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but even the sale of the first year, their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and the testimonials of the Colonists came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-five Years Cured by the Use of Two Boxes.—Must a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and this Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I remained for a week. I read your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hope of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can eat anything, and do any kind of work, has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I presented one package to you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for six packages.

SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE.—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I had been sick for a long time, and I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have taken many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried many things, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills as it can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this place find $1.5 for three more packages for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, Bowels constipated, and for a great deal of the time unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. Have tried several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Boston Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken half the Pills I was a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as any man. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from inflammation of the bowels, Constipation, and is about to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they are a blessing to thousands who will be benefited by them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two more packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, pain in the bowels, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Reading, who are taking it, and are greatly much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMONICE CORDIAL

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing to its favor.

Is the ultima thula of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lungs trying climate of New England

PULMONICE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMONICE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMONICE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

Bachman's Pulmonice Cordial.

The Pulmonice Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, but was one day discovered a wood and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

PULMONICE.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The Houses of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it is proposed to 'tie up' the record of the Administration now drawing to a close. Its course during the next six months will show the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the material interests of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into the political contests. In trade, commerce and industry there are hopes that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present capabilities, as promising the fullest and fairest continued regard of all old readers, and the accession of many new ones. Its editorial columns can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with all but pertinent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, unbiased by partisan sec ntiles or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old fundamental principles of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and it will support whatever principles may prove victorious under the old banners. But it can never be servant of caucuses or conventions; it must approve what it finds good in the acts and principles of either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to set forth the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to elect honest men, whom the country knows and can trust, to secure hard money, Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and a return of prosperity, lower taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the forces for the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people ready for the work, and nothing but the fear of clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1875 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon the popular but vicious practice of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and to practice some of the reforms they promise. It and others have found that conscientious and independent voters have to use within two or three years gradually forced both parties into to a some not highly praiseworthy shape that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the methods which have already commended it to popular favor. It will continue to expose the numerous cases of bad faith, and keep its columns free from personal wranging; will waste no time in replying to the incessant charges of excess provoked from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for the respect readers.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the generous support it has enjoyed in the past. During the years 1874 and 1875 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period of its history. It has won this position by the closest watchfulness and the most lavish expenditure to procure the fresh and intelligence, the most complete news, the most interesting letters and essays, and the ablest work in every department of a journal which has now a complished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

The Canty Inquest.

The Inquest was continued Wednesday evening.

Officers Clark and Glazebrook were examined, corroborating the testimony of other witnesses in regard to the free fight and the attempt to rescue Canty from the officers. Officer Clark, who arrested Canty, stated that Canty threw him out of the door and he did not regain his feet until he reached the sidewalk; and that Canty was the most powerful man he had arrested since being on the force. After arresting him he gave him in charge of Officers Glazebrook and Smith to take to the Police Station.

Officer Glazebrook testified: After being ordered by Clark to take Canty to the station house, he with Smith started with their prisoner. After going a short distance Canty threw them one each side of a tree; by persuasion he was induced to move along again for a short distance, when by a powerful jerk he broke the twisters on his right hand and made a blow at Glazebrook, which he partly avoided. They secured him again and he then came quietly to the station, walking as well as before, and seemed to be as well as when he was arrested. Glazebrook did not see Smith strike Canty, and did not know that he did. Considered Canty a very powerful man.

Officer Hobbs: Was in the station house when Canty was brought in; assisted Canty to wash the blood off his face. He appeared to be all right. Saw him fifteen minutes afterward, lying on the top bunk, quietly. Some of his friends were anxious to have him released; objected to letting him go, as he was lying quiet, and would be better there. After returning from supper, some of Canty's friends came to have him released, as they wanted him to go to work at half-past 9 o'clock that evening. Consulted with the Marshal, who gave orders to release him. Unlocked the cell and told them to call him, as he seemed to be asleep. I was called by Halloran; went into the cell, found Canty lying on his back, breathing heavily; raised him up and put blankets under his head, and requested Officer Watkins to go for the doctor. Dr. Potter came in a few moments.

Daniel Hadley, who was in the station some time with a friend of Canty's, corroborated Officer Hobbs' statement.

George Trafton was called as a witness; his testimony was similar to that of other spectators; was not positive as to the number of blows struck. He testified that Canty, after being struck by Smith, fell on his left side; the officers assisted him to rise, and then went over the bridge.

James McGraw saw Canty, in custody of officers, cross from hay scales to brick house opposite; when near John Shannon's house they passed witness; Canty raised his hand up and wiped the blood off his face; saw him break from Smith and strike at Glazebrook; did not know if Canty struck him; saw Smith strike Canty four times on the head with a club before he fell; after Canty was down he rubbed his head with his hand; the blows were struck in the middle of the sidewalk; should have rendered assistance if called on by the officers.

The testimony of Rev. Lot L. Harmon, who was walking nearly opposite the officers and Canty was that he first noticed a tumult in the vicinity of Ayers' store; noticed two men leading another down the street; saw Canty had one of his arms at liberty and was trying to hit one of the men; could not tell if the man was hit or not; saw the man on his left use his billy; think it was one of the men who started with him; was a little behind them; do not know the exact number of blows struck, think about a half dozen; Canty went down under the blows; witness and friend were within calling distance; witness would have rendered assistance if called on by the officers.

William Gardner: was in Ward Seven; went to Ward Two wardroom, then to Ward Six wardroom; went home between 5 and 6 o'clock; saw two officers in front of brick block, coming towards me; got within ten feet of them when Canty threw up his arms, and broke twisters from his right hand; then Smith drew his billy and struck Canty three or four times; struck him to the ground; did not strike him after he was down; heard Canty say "Well, well;" Canty got up and walked off with the officers; they did not ask any assistance; was near enough to have rendered it if asked for; it was in the middle of the sidewalk where the trouble occurred; I was near Goodrich's tan-yard; live about sixty or seventy feet from the brick house.

Dr. Whittier was recalled and expressed an opinion that an artery was ruptured when the blows were struck, and the application of cold water would have had no material effect.

Andrew J. Smith: am supernumerary policeman; was on duty election day in Wards One and Seven, with Mr. Glazebrook. Went from Ward Seven to Ward One at half-past three or as soon as the polls were closed. Went to the ward room, remained a few minutes, came out and went toward Ayers' store; went in and found considerable of a crowd there. Saw a man in a fit; a large number of persons came out while the man was in the fit; afterward the crowd went back into the store; went into the store myself and assisted in stopping the fight; made no arrest at that time. Saw Canty in the door; Canty tried hard to kick up a fight with a man in the store; officer Clark asked him to keep quiet; Canty did so for a few moments; he then went for the man again, and officer Clark spoke to him again and asked him to be quiet, and as he did not Mr. Clark took hold of him; he seized Clark and gave him a slat and both went out of the door together. Canty threw Clark partly down; as soon as I could get out I took hold of Canty, who made a number of blows at Clark; finally we got into the middle of the street, when I saw one or two others make for Officer Wm. Watkins; think one struck him. Officer Clark told Mr. Glazebrook and myself to take Canty to the police station; we did as we were ordered, and started with Canty toward the station; Canty went quietly until near Mr. John Shannon's house, when he went up abreast a large tree and slung his arms around it. Mr. Glazebrook and myself then put our twisters on his wrist and started toward the bridge; when near the corner of North and Dearborn streets he made a break and jumped away, breaking my twisters; he cleared himself from me. Canty commenced striking at Mr. Glazebrook, and also struck at me twice. I warded off the blows and drew my billy; think I was behind him then; I struck him over the head; the first blow was a glancing one; think I struck at him three times; Canty fell at the last blow; did not fall flat but partly down; assisted him up, and started toward the bridge; think he did not have any hat on when I struck him; don't think he said anything; I told him to come along quiet and there would be no more trouble; he made another attempt to get away just below the bridge; spoke to him and told him to be quiet and he would save a great deal of trouble.

Smith, continued: Canty went along easily enough to the station house, talking with us all the way down; wanted us to let him go; we told him after he got all right he could go; fetched him inside the cell part, and he wanted to wash; took his coat off; some one said "let me take it, Bill." Canty said, "No, I want this man to take it," meaning me; I took it and hung it up; he went to the sink and washed; was at the sink four or five minutes; put him in the cell, as it was thought best by Mr. Hobbs; I put him in the cell, and Mr. Glazebrook came along at the same time, as Canty made an attempt to strike me but did not; Canty looked and saw Mr. Glazebrook, and said "Ill go in;" I swung the door to and reported to the Marshal; Canty did not complain of any injury; (billy which was used by Smith was shown to the jury;) found Canty to be very powerful; did not know Canty before; good deal of excitement at Ayers' store; there was a general attack made by the crowd on the officers at the time Canty was arrested; after putting the twisters on Canty he went two or three rods; time occupied was two or three minutes; did not see any one in the vicinity; used my billy to protect Mr. Glazebrook; have been on the force two years; never struck a man before; I was cool and collected; know that Canty was under the influence of liquor; I have never arrested any man who was so powerful as Canty; I am supposed to call for assistance when needed; I should have called for assistance if he had not attacked us.

Coroner Rider then gave the case to the jury. The inquest was then adjourned until 4 o'clock. The verdict is as follows:

Rockingham ss. An inquisition taken at Portsmouth in said county on the fifteenth and sixteenth days of March, in the year of our Lord 1876, before John E. Rider, one of the coroners of said county, upon the view of the body of William Canty, there lying dead, by the oaths of George E. Hodgdon, a Justice of the Peace for said county, and of Josiah G. Hadley and James F. Hartshorn, all reputable persons, who being sworn and charged to inquire for the State when, how and by what means the said William Canty came to his death upon their oaths do say: That the said William Canty died at the house of Godfrey Canty in Portsmouth aforesaid on the fifteenth day of March, A. D. 1876, from the effects of blows inflicted by one Andrew J. Smith, a police officer, on North street in said Portsmouth, with a weapon called a policeman's billy, on the fourteenth day of March, A. D. 1876.

So the jurors aforesaid upon their oaths aforesaid do say: That the said Andrew J. Smith in manner and form aforesaid upon the aforesaid William Canty on said fourteenth day of March feloniously did make an assault, and inflict upon the head of said Canty one mortal wound, of which said mortal wound he the said William Canty from the said fourteenth day of March in the year aforesaid to the fifteenth day of March in the year aforesaid at Portsmouth aforesaid did languish and languishing did live; on which said fifteenth day of March at Portsmouth aforesaid the said William Canty of the mortal wound aforesaid died. So the jurors aforesaid say: That the said Andrew J. Smith in manner and form aforesaid him the said William Canty feloniously did kill and murder against the peace and dignity of the State.

In witness whereof the said jurors have hereunto set their hands, this sixteenth day of March, A. D. 1876.

Signed { GEORGE E. HODGDON, JOSIAH G. HADLEY, JAMES F. HARTSHORN, } Jurors.

Coroner Rider approved the verdict of manslaughter.

Jottings.

A fine lithograph of Hon. E. H. Rollins is exhibited in the window of Mr. William B. Lowd's bookstore.

We tender our thanks to John E. Rider, Esq., Coroner, for courtesies extended to our reporter at the inquest in the Canty homicide.

The alarm of fire on Wednesday was occasioned by a slight fire on the roof of a building in Hon. Moses H. Goodrich's tan-yard. The fire caught from a spark from the chimney, and the damage was trifling.

The voters of this city seem to desire a constitutional convention—2346 to 32. We have been trying to figure out some "relative gains" here for somebody, but can't. Returns on this question from other parts of the State are very meagre, but the convention has probably been decided on. This city did its share toward it, anyway.

Constructor Philip Hichborn, U. S. N., left the League Island navy yard for this city on the 14th, under summons from Speaker Kerr of the U. S. House of Representatives, to appear as a witness before the naval investigating committee now in session at this navy yard. He is accompanied by Mrs. Hichborn, (formerly Miss Jennie M. Franklin,) and during their visit they will be the guests of Naval Constructor Wilson.

St. Mary's Benevolent Society celebrate St. Patrick's Day (to-day) by attending church in the forenoon and having a good time at Franklin Hall in the evening. See advertisement.

So the rumor that Captain Marcy was to take command of the good old white oak Ship of State New Hampshire for the centennial voyage, proves to be a mere invention of the enemy of good government, does it? It appears that a Person C (called) Cheney is to have charge of the staunch Union craft Granite State on that occasion, while Capt. Marcy will commence another voyage up Salt River in the copperhead hulk State Rights, for the maelstrom of a white man's government, via rebeldom.

The Boston Globe announces that Captain Marcy received a handsome majority in this the city of his residence. Sixty-six democratic majority this year, for Marcy for Governor, against 172 for Roberts last year. We wonder what the very independent Globe would call an unhandsome result for the Captain?

The naval investigating Committee went to the Navy Yard Wednesday forenoon, the 15th, accompanied by Sheriff Samuel Rowe, whose services have been enlisted by the Committee to subpœna witnesses and otherwise aid them in their work. The officers of the yard having been examined, the Committee will occupy the United States Court room here, which has been tendered them, where all further examinations will be made. They expect to conclude their labors in a week or ten days. The Committee held their first session with closed doors, an orderly being stationed outside to prevent any communication. Commodore Bryson, Capt. Young and Naval Constructor Wilson were on the stand and examined relative to the doings in the yard since they have been stationed here.

Several prominent republicans of Ward Six have requested us to say that the democratic moderator of that ward, Mr. Samuel R. Thompson, acted with a manly fairness during the revision of the check-lists and on election day, which proved him an honorable man and a just one, and they do not believe he would knowingly have lot or part in any political fraud.

The old building on Daniel street belonging to the Badger estate was purchased by Mr. Josiah F. Adams for $17.50, and will be immediately removed to make place for the new brick building.

The republicans of this city are especially thankful to John G. Sinclair, whose speech to the democrats here converted quite a number of voters who had intended to cast their ballots for the democratic ticket. Sinclair's harangue disgusted them so completely that they voted the straight republican ticket.

Since election a democratic manager has stated that in the second ward, previous to election, thirty republicans were visited and offered $25 each to vote the democratic ticket on election day, and all declined. The ward went republican by an increased majority without the use of money.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 35 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

says, in a letter to the Boston Daily Advertiser, the publication of the Boston Commonwealth, that the public the place are "rapid and sensational," in which is an entire absence of anything that is "Pure, Elevating and Ennobling." The Newark Advertiser.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On all subjects, even in a worse literature than that which is spread before the children of Christendom it would be only to pass from the frying pan into the fire. Of the Boston Commonwealth it is every thing, and in perfection, for the purpose of its conductors. It is a thoroughly bad paper, and the best place for it is the waste paper basket. It is a paper that should not be allowed to come into any decent family. It is a paper so worthless, so effective, so pernicious, so bad in every respect, that it is a disgrace to Christendom, and to the cause of humanity, that it should be allowed to exist. Let the people of Massachusetts, and the friends of the cause of humanity, and the friends of a free and pure press, unite and crush out this serpent which is stinging to death the children of the Commonwealth. Boston Traveller.

The writer adds: "It may be proper to remark, that Dr. Holland has had no reference in his above recommendation of the Boston Commonwealth to the sensational articles which are so plentiful. He is well aware that the Commonwealth is a paper of the worst character, and that it is a disgrace to Christendom. The New York Tribune.

THE ANCHORAGE OF IMMORAL LITERATURE

Into the arms the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, yet healthy attractive more or less powerful, and so SIR NICHOLAS has an eye to a larger plot, and a cement of a this serious effect, so that we are and better, than any of the publications of the Commonwealth." Newark Daily Advertiser.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

Rev. C. S. Robinson, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times, says: "Against the issues of Mr. N. H. L. C. HOWE'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for children, I have no word to utter. Such a paper, weekly periodical or children cannot be found. It is one of all of that true and good, from beginning to end." The Sunday School Times.

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all the children, we offer to send the Magazine (Vol. 1, 2, 3) for $2.50 (Vol. 1 and 2 for $2.00).

Or, $4.00, then will send the twelve numbers beginning with Nov. '75, on receipt of the bound volume or Mr. Nichols, or to any address free of charge, of which is 7.50. Or for one dollar, will send Mr. Nichols a copy, and send the bound volumes, on receipt of which is $4.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself, the price is not a little more than the cost of the paper, and the publication is not a little more than the cost of the paper, and the publication is not a little more than the cost of the paper, and the publication

AN ILLINOIS WEDDING.

At the age of eighteen I married a minister. Eugene Morrison was my first and last love; and though I must in truth say that the life of a minister's wife is a sort of refined slavery, still I have never for a moment regretted my choice. Eugene's first call, after our marriage, was to the village of Brookborough, a small place in the State of Illinois. Our home was primitive, but I had brought with me many luxuries from the East, and we both were young and hopeful, and life was not unpleasant to us. I, of course, encountered the trials of most ministers' wives. I was criticised and found fault with, until I wondered if I was not the incarnation of original sin itself; and I frequently had doubts whether anybody in the world was to be held responsible for their ill deeds but myself. My theology was very dubious at this time, and my faith frequently went down below low-water mark. My parishioners were exceedingly faithful in pointing out the beams in my eyes. If ever a woman had incentives to reform in the advice of friends, then I had; not a day passed but I was admonished in some way. Miss Splitwood said I dressed too much. A minister's wife ought to set a better example before the younglings of her flock. I laid her admonition to heart, and took the trimming off my bonnet, and wore it with nothing but the cape. Then Mrs. Hale called to tell me I was a disgrace to the parish, wearing such a dreadful bonnet. People would think I was of the Quaker persuasion. So I put the trimming on again. Then old Mrs. Stanley met me in the street, and said so much blue ribbon was unbecoming the wife of a preacher of the gospel. So I laid the blue aside, and appeared in brown. Aunt Sally Lane called ha next day before breakfast to know who of my folks was dead—she had noticed that my bonnet was trimmed in mourning. If I called on a few of our parish, they said I was gadding, and pitied "poor Mr. Morrison, dreadfully!" If I said at home, I was "too stuck up to visit poor folks."

Just as surely as the supply in my larder ran low I would have an influx of company, and the air of Brookborough was peculiarly favorable to the growth of appetite. All the straggling ministers, tract agents, beggars, and vagabonds came to the parsonage; and we were obliged to entertain them, because, Eugene said, by thus doing we might entertain angels unawares. In endeavoring to obey this command, I gave shelter to a man who called himself a colporteur, and who proved his right to wear rings by stealing a dozen napkin-rings and a butter knife, given me by my sister. But I did not intend to write my own personal history—I was going to give you a glimpse of an Illinois wedding. One fine day in the early winter, my husband received a summons to Burke's settlement, to unite a couple in the bonds of wedlock. It was especially requested that his wife should accompany him, and we should be expected to remain all night, and partake of the festivities. It was twenty miles to the settlement, and we reached the log-house of Burke, the father of the expectant bride, about noon. A dozen tow-haired children were at the door, waiting our arrival. They telegraphed the news instantly.

"Marm! marm! here's the Elder and his woman! They're nothing but folks! She's got a man's hat on, and a turkey wing in the front of it; and his nose is just like dad's—crooked as a cow-horn squash!"

Alas for Mr. Morrison's aquiline nose, of which he was a little vain!

"Sam!" called a shrill female voice from the interior of the cabin, "run out and grab the rooster, and I'll clap him into the pot! Sal, you quit that churn and sweep the floor. Kick that corn dodger under the bed. Bill, you wipe the taller out of that chair for the minister's wife and be spry about it."

Father remarks were cut short by our entrance. Mrs. Burke, in calico short gown, blue petticoat, and bare feet, came forward—wiping her face on her apron.

"How do you do, Elder! how d'ye do marm. Must excuse my head—maint had no chance to comb it since last week. Work must be did you know. Powerful sharp air, maint it? Shoo, there! Bill, drive that turkey out of the bread trough! Sal, take the lady's things. Set right up to the fire, marm. Hands cold? Well, just run 'em in Bill's hair—we keep it long a purpose."

Bill presented his shaggy head, but I declined with an involuntary shudder.

"Lawk, if she aint actilly shivering!" cried Mrs. Burke—"bring in some more wood. Here, marm, take this hot corn into yer lap—it's almost as good as a soapstone."

A fateful squall announced the execution of the rooster, and shortly afterward he was bouncing about in a four-pail kettle hung over the fire. Sal returned to her chura, but the extraordinary visitors must have made her careless, for she upset the concern and butter and buttermilk went swimming over the floor.

"Grab the ladle, Bill!" cried Mrs. Burke, "and help dip it up. Take keer, don't put that snarl of hair in. Strange how folks will be nasty. Dick, do keep your feet out of the buttermilk—it won't be fit for the pigs to eat when the butter's gathered. Drive that hen out, quick—she's picked up a pound of butter already. There, Sal, do try a churn a little more keerful. If you are a gwine to be spliced ter-morrer, you needn't run crazy about it."

"I'd advise you to dry up!" remarked the bride elect, thumping away at the churn.

By the time I had got fairly warmed, dinner was ready; and you may be sure I did not injure myself by overeating. Night came on early, and after a social chat, about the event of the morrow, I signified my desire to retire. Sal lighted a pitch knot, and began climbing a ladder in one corner of the room—I hesitated.

"Come on! Don't be afeared," cried she. "Sam, and Bill, and Dick, and all the rest of ye, duck yer heads while the Elder's wife goes up. Look out for the loose boards, marm; and mind, or you'll smash your brains out against that beam. Take keer of the hole where the chimney comes through, and—"

Her warning came too late. I caught my foot in the end of a board—stumbled, and fell headlong through what appeared to be interminable space; but it was only to the room I had just left, where I was saved from destruction by Bill, who caught me in his arms and set me on my feet, remarking, coolly:

"What made you come that way? We ginerally use the ladder."

I was duly commiserated, and at last got to bed. The less said about that night the better. Bill and Dick, and four others, slept in the same room with us, and made the air vocal with their snoring. I fell asleep, and dreamed I was just being fired from the muzzle of a Columbiad, and was awakened by Mr. Morrison, who informed me that it was morning. The marriage was to take place before breakfast, and Sally was already clad in her bridal robes when I descended the ladder. She was magnificent in a green calico gown, a white apron and red strings, blue stockings, a yellow necktie, and white cotton gloves. Her reddish hair was fastened in a pug behind, and well adorned with the tail-feathers of the defunct rooster before mentioned. When it was announced that Lem Lord, the groom, was coming, Sally dived behind a coverlet, which had been hung across one corner of the room to conceal sundry pots and kettles, and refused to come forth. Mr. Lord lifted one corner of the curtain and peeped in, but quickly retreated with a pan following close behind, and a few sharp words from Sally, advising him to mind his own business. Lemuel was dressed in blue, with bright buttons. The entire suit had been made for his grandfather on a similar occasion. His hair was well greased with tallow, and his huge feet encased in sheep-skin pumps. Very soon the company began to gather, and in half an hour the room was filled.

"Now, Elder," cried the bridegroom, "drive ahead? I want it done up short. I'm able to pay for the job—do yer best! Come, Father Burke, trot out yer gal!"

But Sally refused to be trotted. She would be married where she was or not at all. We argued and coaxed, but she was firm; and it was finally concluded to let her have her own way. Mr. Morrison stood up—the happy couple joined hands through a rent in the coverlet, and the ceremony proceeded. Just as Mr. Morrison was asking Lemuel "Will you have this woman, etc.," down came the coverlet, enveloping bride, and pastor, and filling the house with dust. Dick had been up in the loft, and cut the string which held it. Mr. Morrison crawled out, looking decidedly sheepish; and Sally was obliged to be married openly. To the momentous question, Lemuel responded, "To be sure—what else did I come here for?" and Sally replied "Yaas, if you must know."

"Salute your bride," said Mr. Morrison, when all was over.

"I'm reddy to do anything reasonable, Elder," said Lemuel, "but skin me if I know about that air. Just show me how, and I'll do it, if it kills me."

My husband drew back nervously; but Sally advanced, threw her arms around his neck, and gave him a kiss that made the very windows clatter.

"I vum if I don't do ditto!" cried Lemuel, and hastily taking a huge bite from a piece of maple sugar, which he drew from his pocket, he made a dash at me—smashed my collar, broke my watch guard into a dozen pieces, tore my hair down, and succeeded in planting a kiss on my nose, greatly to the delight of the company. Then he turned to my husband.

"Now, Elder, what's the damage? Don't be afeared to speak."

"Whatever you please," said Mr. Morrison.

Lemuel produced a piece of fur from his pocket.

"There, Elder," said he, "there's a musk-rat's skin; and out in the shed is two heads of cabbage, and you're welcome to the hull of it."

My husband bowed his thanks—the young people went to dancing. Mrs. Burke went to getting breakfast; and, at my earnest request, Mr. Morrison got our horse, and we bade them adieu. I never could have lived through another meal in that house. I have since heard that Mr. Lord said if he had seen the Elder's wife before she was married, Sally might have gone to the dickens.

Alas! "It might have been!"—Gleason's Home Circle.

SATURDAY, MARCH 18, 1876.

The House.

Returns from every Representative district in the State elect 210 republicans and 177 democrats to the House. Republican majority 33. Last year the House consisted of 191 republicans and 182 democrats. Republican majority 9. Republican net gain this year 24. The democrats will have five less members and the republicans 19 more than last year.

Among the prominent republicans elected are Gen. Gilman Marston of Exeter, Gen. Aaron F. Stevens and O. C. Moore, Esq., of Nashua, Hon. Charles P. Sanborn of Concord, Speaker of the present House, Hon. N. G. Ordway of Warner, Col. William H. Sise and Joseph W. Hildreth, Esq., Ass't Superintendent of the Concord Railroad, of Portsmouth, Hon. John W. Noyes of Chester, Capt. Ora P. Patten of Kingston, Geo. C. Gordon, Esq., of Salem, Chas. H. Sawyer, Esq., of Dover, Dr. Albert H. Hayes of Alton, William M. Weed, Esq., of Sandwich, Hon. Oliver Pillsbury, Hon. Moses Humphrey and Horace A. Brown, Esq., of Concord, Col. George C. Gilmore, Silas C. Clatur, Esq., Hon. David Cross, Col. E. M. Topliff and Hon. William P. Newell of Manchester, Edward Gustine, Esq., of Keene, Hon. Levi W. Barton of Newport, Wyman Pattee, Esq., of Enfield, Augustus A. Woolson, Esq., of Lisbon, Adams Twitchell, Esq., of Milan, Wm. S. Pillsbury, Esq., of Londonderry and J. Mahlon Bickford, Esq., of Newcastle.

The democrats have chosen Hon. Harry Bingham and Geo. A. Bingham, Esq., of Littleton, Hon. John G. Sinclair of Bethlehem, Hon. Albert R. Hatch of Portsmouth, Hon. John M. Weare of Seabrook, Hon. Warren F. Daniell of Franklin, and Frank Hiland, Esq., of Manchester. The democracy are largely over-matched in ability.

That $100,000.

The political value of the New Hampshire election, as it may influence that for the Presidency next November, according to a fair estimate, is somewhere about one hundred thousand dollars—People.

Which is just the sum named by an influential democrat of Concord as having been raised by democratic leaders of New York and other States and sent into New Hampshire last week for election purpose. These two estimates, coming from different democratic sources, are evidently correct. And now the Tilden crowd are very desirous to know whether it was all "judiciously" expended or "stuck" on its way to the democratic voters who were so anxious to absorb it!

News and Notes.

In India, Mr. Bond has captured two of the wild dwarfs living in the hill jungles of the Western Galtz, of whom no trace had ever before been found. They live mainly upon nuts and honey, and are but little over four feet high.

The British naval ship Challenger has been taking soundings for temperature in the Chinese sea, and a barrier has been found, which, rising to within nine hundred feet of its surface, cuts it off from the Pacific.

Smalley, of the New York Tribune, is altogether too innocent a man for this locality. Our advice to Reid is to keep Smalley in doors as much as possible. Such goodness is in danger of spoiling. Having become acquainted with Smalley, we have lost all faith in the old adage, so often quoted at the funerals of infants—"The truly good die young."—Monitor.

The election of a second representative in Henniker was a great farce. No republican voted, and a great many democrats refused to sustain the farce by voting. The only ground upon which the democrats based the right to send two representatives was the importation of twenty wood choppers from Manchester on the night preceding election, to be counted as ratable polls. That second representative will not sit long in the State House, next June, you bet!

The vote of Concord for Mayor was—Pillsbury, republican, 1819, Knowlton, citizens' candidate, 1387, scattering 13. Pillsbury's majority 419. Four republican and three democratic aldermen, and ten republican and four democratic councilmen were elected.

We notice that those assistants democrats, the "independent" newspapers, now place NEW HAMPSHIRE in the list of States sure to vote for Blaine and Bristow, or Bristow and some one else, next November. "Coming events cast their shadows before."

The British ship Greta, from San Francisco Nov. 25, arrived at Liverpool March 16. She took in a portion of the crew of the British ship Great Britain, from Dobay Jan. 22, abandoned. Eleven of the crew were drowned and four died from exposure.

"The annual spring auction in New Hampshire closes to-night, and the goods will be delivered to-morrow. The bidding has been spirited, and it is understood that about a thousand surplus votes have been knocked down to the republicans."

Mr. George H. Pendleton, of Ohio, has testified before the Clymer committee in Washington, as to the procurement by him of one hundred and forty thousand dollars, or eight or ten thousand more, from government, at the instance of the Kentucky Central Railroad. The first thing which strikes one, is, that although the transaction took place, say five years ago, Mr. Pendleton is not clear as to the amount, within eight or ten thousand dollars. Nor does he propose to refer to any books, either his own, or those of the railroad, the President of which he was, nor those which as administrator he was bound to keep, in order to attain greater exactness. The transaction, then, was of such a character that nobody considered it worth while to be particular in regard to the moderate sum of ten thousand dollars. The railroad had made a claim upon government which had been rejected. Mr. Pendleton was President of the road; was administrator on the estate of a man who had died owning, roundly, three-fifths of the road, and leaving two children his minor heirs. Mr. Geo. H. Pendleton, as claim agent, made a bargain with Mr. Geo. H. Pendleton, President of the road, and administrator, to undertake the collection of the claim for the modest honorarium of fifty per cent. He obtained the money from government, and took his fee.

A correspondent of that excellent paper, the Providence Journal, writes as follows from Washington: "The republicans are in high glee over the result of the New Hampshire election, and attribute it mainly to the very thorough and effective canvass made, and to the bad record of the democratic nominee for Governor." In justice to the defeated candidate the word "political" should have been inserted between "bad" and "record," for Daniel Marcy, aside from his objectionable politics, is neither a bad citizen nor a bad man. When the late returns were coming in on election night, showing an overwhelming victory for the republicans, the jubilant crowd that filled the CHRONICLE counting-room had no word of exultation to express over the defeat of the citizen, though rejoicing with exceeding great joy over the total rout of the Bourbon State Rights politician.

—At a recent sale of antiquities, an auctioneer held up a helmit with this historical allusion: "This, ladies and gentlemen, is a helmet of Romulus, the Roman founder; but whether he was a brass or iron founder I cannot tell."

—Tennessee, like Massachusetts, has a law on its statute books which prohibits a man from marrying the daughter of his deceased wife; but a farmer living near Memphis did it; he was indicted, tried, convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary, but Gov. Porter has promptly pardoned him out.

THE SUCCESSFUL PHYSICIAN.

The is probably no man to whom the community owes so much as to the honest, fair-spoken physician, who does his actual duty both to himself and to his patients. Really skillful physicians are not so numerous that their virtues need no mention, and hence the advertisement of Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, may well claim the reader's attention. Dr. Pierce is a type of a class of men who obtain success by careful and well-directed effort, not attempting too much, or creating false ideas as to ability. The only reliable physician in these days of complicated disorders and high-pressure living is the "Specialist," the man who understands his one branch of the business. Such in his line is Dr. Pierce. For the benefit of his readers he has written a "Common Sense Medical Adviser," which is well worth reading by those who need such a work. With strict business honor, high professional skill, reasonable fees, and a large corps of competent assistants, Dr. Pierce will doubtless make his name familiar as "household words."

The Only Remedy.

Those who suffer from foul breath are open to the charge of carelessness. It is an offence that can be specedily abated, as a single bottle of the fragrant SOZODONT will unmistakably accomplish the work. No toilet table should be without it. It will preserve and keep the teeth white, and the breath pure and sweet.

The Only Way to Conquer Dyspepsia.

It is perfectly preposterous to introduce pepsin and other artificial solvents into the stomach in the expectation that they will assist digestion by acting on the food itself. They will not. Nor is it possible thus to overcome dyspepsia. The only way to conquer that disorder, and prevent the numerous diseases and disabilities which it assuredly provokes, is to renew the activity of gastric action by strengthening the stomach. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters eradicates the most inveterate forms of indigestion by restoring vitality to the alimentary organs and those which are tributary to them. The liver, the bowels, the kidneys and the nerves, no less than the stomach, experience the invigorative effects of this standard tonic, which possesses alterative properties that greatly enhance its beneficial influence, and give a permanence to its effects which they would not otherwise possess.

DR. DUDLEY already has a fine and rapidly increasing practice in Salem, and consents to come here on trial for a year, (to be in Portsmouth three days of each week, and three days in Salem), at my earnest solicitation, backed by the free gift of my practice.

I could have sold my practice with a recommendation, for a large sum, but feeling the kindness and confidence with which I have been treated, I have chosen, nay, felt it impossible to do otherwise than sink private considerations of profit for the good of my patients.

If DR. DUDLEY is appreciated at his true worth by the people of Portsmouth, he can, through the confidence extended to him, be made to relinquish his practice in Salem, and settle here permanently. E. G. PIERCE, JR., P. M.

The Case of Officer Smith.

We have given considerable space to a report of the inquest, before Coroner J. E. Rider, into the circumstances attending the death of William Canty. From the evidence we gather that Canty was an unusually powerful man, was enough under the influence of intoxicating drink to be quarrelsome and ugly, resisted the police in the plain execution of their duty, attacked one officer and was unintentionally killed by another one, who acted in defence of his mate.

We refrained, for obvious reasons, from commenting on the case while it was under consideration by the Coroner; but the verdict having been rendered we can now speak without impropriety, and we do not hesitate to say that the verdict surprised us. Of the two principals in this unfortunate affair—Smith and Canty—we know nothing whatever except what we have learned from the evidence; and, nothing to the contrary having been shewn, we are bound to assume that both men were ordinarily good citizens, obeying the laws and abstaining from any infringement on the rights of others. But on the afternoon of election day both men were in unusual circumstances; Canty, a man who it appears was possessed of immense physical strength, was then apparently determined to have a fight with some one; and Smith, in the execution of his duty as a police officer, was assisting another officer to take him to the police station that he might no further infringe on the rights of law-observing citizens. On the way Canty broke loose from the officers and assaulted Smith's mate; and Smith, in defence of his mate, drew his billy and struck Canty several blows, from the effects of which he died next day. Several private citizens were within call of the police at the time Canty assailed Glazebrook, but were not called upon to aid. Such we believe is a brief, unprejudiced statement of the facts of the homicide.

But the coroner's jury brought in a verdict of murder against the officer. On what grounds? Not a particle of evidence, so far as we know, was introduced to show that Smith was actuated by anger, or that he intended to kill Canty, or to do anything more than defend his mate,—which in this case, we take it, was precisely the same as defending himself. A blow from a man of Canty's great strength would have been a serious if not fatal affair to the recipient; and that the safety of the public and the peace of the city imperatively demanded his being restrained at that time we think no one will dispute. The only question that arises in our mind is whether the officer acted rightly in depending upon himself and his club to quell the belligerence of the prisoner, or should have called upon private citizens for help; and while we cannot but regret that one man lost his life and another is placed in a most painful situation in consequence of the officer relying upon his own resources, we think he would not have been justified in calling upon outside aid. The police are paid to protect law observing citizens from law-breakers; citizens are not paid for protecting the police; and an officer who calls for help from citizens before he has tried all the means in his power to help himself, does not do his duty and has no business on the force. The officer's first duty is to protect the law-observing private citizen from outrage at all hazards, though he risk or even lose his life in so doing; his second duty is to protect himself; but it is no part of his duty to call upon private citizens to aid him in case of trouble until he becomes assured he cannot preserve the peace unaided.

This affair is a sad one to all concerned, but we cannot see that any blame should attach to the officers; and until such a showing is made we shall be obliged to do as we ever have done—give all the moral support we can to the police in the execution of their duty, and assume that they do execute their duty until proof to the contrary is offered.

Another Grand Temperance Rally.

The meeting of the Reform Club to be held at the Temple to-morrow (Sunday) evening, will doubtless be one of absorbing interest. The gentleman announced to speak, Mr. H. M. Bryant of Lewiston, Me., was a native of this State, educated for the ministry—learned to love the social glass while visiting his parishioners, fell from his high estate, and became an inebriate. The story of his down-fall, and his reclamation through the labors of J. C. Osgood is told with thrilling effect, and has led many a poor wanderer back to the paths of sobriety and the road to heaven. The small fee of five cents will be collected at the door to defray expenses. The doors will be open at 6.30.

Temperance.

NEWCASTLE, March 17.

Eds. Chronicle; The "tidal wave" of temperance is still rolling on, and the young men of Newcastle, not to be outdone by others, met in the town hall last evening, and organized as a Young Men's Reform Club. They were very enthusiastic, and seemed determined to do all in their power for the cause of temperance. They have at present a membership of fifty-one. The officers elected were as follows:

President, F. P. Locke; Vice President, N. P. Campbell; Secretary, R. A. Preble; Asst. Secretary, Willard Yeaton; Treasurer, H. M. Curtis; Chaplain, Conrad Push; Guardian, Robert Oliver. A MEMBER.

Well Done Portsmouth

To the republicans of old "Strawberry Bank," the home of Daniel Marcy, belongs a meed of praise as deserved as if they were the victors on the field of battle. Steadily they fought, step by step, every effort of the democracy to advance, and forced them back with the loss of two-thirds his majority of last year. They have a double satisfaction in knowing that the day of their redemption from a bondage that they have resisted to their utmost, and have borne with no feeling of patience or resignation, is nigh.—Concord Monitor.

Jottings.

There will not be quite as many wards to hold elections in, hereafter, in this city.

A snow storm—one of the old kind started in on Friday, and about a foot of fleecy whiteness fell.

Rev. Carlos Martyn will speak on Sunday afternoon in the North Church, on "The Bible Teaching with Regard to Water." All are invited.

The store of William Plaisted on Market street was broken into on Thursday night, and some cigars and a small amount of money taken.

The case against Joseph R. Curtis, charged with an aggravated assault with a brick on Holman Shannon, was heard by Judge Page on Friday and Curtis was discharged.

Mr. John Albee concluded on Wednesday a course of five lectures on English Poetry and Literature at Miss Morgan's Seminary, which critics pronounce learned and interesting, and worthy of repetition.

Officer Andrew J. Smith was arraigned before Judge Page on the charge of manslaughter, Friday, and waived an examination, submitting the evidence taken at the coroner's inquest to the judges of the Supreme Court to fix the amount of bail.

Investigations seem to be the order (or disorder) of the day. So while Congressman Frank Jones is investigating this Navy Yard, the Massachusetts Legislature is investigating his Eastern Railroad business.

Service of Praise at Mechanics' Hall on Sabbath evening at 4:15. "The ninety and nine," with other selections from the Moody & Sankey collection, will be given. The public are cordially invited. A collection will be taken at the close of the service, in aid of the Bow Mission.

We are informed that on Friday the naval investigating committee (of which Gen. Mills of Texas is chairman) were inquiring into the exact cost of the famous sloop-of-war Kearsarge, which sunk the Alabama. Whatever she may have cost, the loyal people of the Union think she paid for herself magnificently when she sent the pirate cruiser to the bottom.

The highest vote cast for any person for Representative, in this city at the late election, was cast in Ward Five for Col. Wm. H. Sise—349. William A. Peirce, Esq., for Railroad Commissioner, received 347 votes in the same ward. These were the highest votes cast for any person for any office in any ward.

At a business meeting of the Portsmouth Reform Club held Thursday evening in Mechanics Hall, the following were appointed Trustees of the fund of the club: Alfred W. Haven, William D. Fernald and William Kennedy. It was announced that not a single man of the club broke his pledge on election day.

The Woman's Temperance League will present a handsome flag to the first fishing vessel's crew (of not less than eight men) presenting themselves at the office of the Secretary of the Reform Club, corner Market and Ladd streets, after 10 o'clock A. M., Monday, and signing the pledge-book of the club. This is an official notice.

A notable and praiseworthy feature of the late campaign, with all its fiery partisanship on both sides, was the almost total absence of personalities concerning the candidates in the newspapers, "calling names" and making insinuations against the private characters of political opponents having been almost entirely ignored as political weapons by both parties. The respectability and unblemished reputations of the leading candidates must of course be largely credited for bringing about so desirable a result, but a more elevated tone of feeling among the people at large (who long since tired, in this State, of the Brick Pomeroy style of whang-banging,) also had much to do with it. Our neighbor, the Times, did indeed fiercely and recklessly call one prominent republican "a little cologne bottle!" but that was while it was enjoying the first flush of defeat, and under the circumstances may be forgiven.

—In Australia a party has journeyed across the western interior of Australia, finding during their six months of absence little but sand-hills.

Training for a Corpse.

A carpenter in Virginia City, Nevada newly raised to the dignity of "prophet" in the improved Order of Red Men, came near burning up his shop a night or two since. A friend and brother in the Order was lying very ill—at the point of death, as was thought. In case of his death there were certain ceremonies to be performed over the body while lying in the "wigwam" by the Prophet. Now, our Prophet had never undertaken the performance of these ceremonies, and he was not sure that he would be able to acquit himself creditably when he came to undertake them with the whole lodge standing about looking solemnly on. He thought he should like a little previous practice. With this in his mind he persuaded his partner, also a Red Man, to join him in a rehearsal and take the part of the corpse. The partner saw no harm in having a rehearsal, and thought it would really be a good thing for his friend, the Prophet. Accordingly a broad board was placed on two trestles, and the partner who was to be the corpse, stretched upon it at full length, closed his eyes and told the Prophet to proceed with the funeral ceremonies. The Prophet in full war paint and with a cow's tail stuck behind his ear, then began prancing about the remains. With some prompting from the corpse he got through with his mummeries in good shape. He then caught up a torch made of fat splinters and began a solemn dance around the decorous and appreciative corpse. When in the midst of the dance and a dolorous chant he suddenly discovered that in waving his torch he had left a trail of fire behind him in the shavings covering the floor, which completely encircled the sedate remains. The corpse took in the situation at the same moment as did the Prophet, and the two wound up the rehearsal in a very lively little fight to save their premises. Both had their hands and clothes badly scorched, and the partner swears that is it the "last time he will ever train for a corpse."

A Strange Story.

There is a story that an eminent microscopist had a bit of substance submitted to him to decide what it was. To an unaided eye it might be a morsel of skin which a baggage-smasher had knocked off the corner of a smoothly worn hair trunk. The savant appealed to his microscope. Entirely ignorant of this tiny bit of matter, except as he had taken counsel with his instrument, the wise man declared that it was the skin of a human being, and that, judging by the fine hair on it, it was from the so-called naked portion of the body, and, further, that it once belonged to a fair-complexioned person. The strange facts now made known to the man of science were these: That, a thousand years before, a Danish marauder had robbed an English church. In the spite of the old-fashioned piety the robber was flayed (let us hope he was killed first,) and the skin was nailed to the church door. Except as tradition or archæological lore had it, the affair had been forgotten for hundreds of years. Time, the great erodent, had long ago utterly removed the offensive thing. Still, however, the church door held to its marks of the great shame, for the broad-headed nails remained. Somebody extracted one, and underneath its flat head was this atomic remnant of that ancient Scandinavian malefactor's pelt—that fair-skinned robber from the North.—Prof. SAMUEL LOCKWOOD, in Harper's Magazine for April.

—In the Island of Dominica, a boiling lake two miles in circumference has been found on the top of a forest-covered mountain 2500 feet above the sea.

—Holland has begun the enormous task of draining the Zuider Zee. The water has to be drained from an area of 759 square miles, which will give the Netherlanders 485,775 acres of fertile land, and increase the extent of their territory nearly six per cent. An immense dyke is to be built at the bottom of the sea, rising twenty-six feet above it, and extending twenty-five miles. It is expected to cost $48,000,000.

—Colonel Finnegan was a Florida planter, wealthy and hospitable. Toward the poor he was always kind, and even the shiftless he would not turn coldly away. A man who had often been the subject of his bounty was named Jake Hartruff. Jake was a squatter in the woods, where he had a log cabin, and a small clearing. Upon this land he sometimes raised corn, and with his gun he captured game. Of the game he ate the flesh, and the skins he traded for whiskey. Long before the winter was over he was sure to be out of corn, in which emergency he would bring his bag to the Colonel for a supply, which was generally furnished. Once upon a time Jake came with his bag very early in the season—in fact winter had just set in. "Why, how's this, Jake?" demanded Finnegan. "Seems to me you are rather early in your call for corn." "Well, Colonel, fact is my crop failed this yer season." "Failed! How is that? I thought it had been an uncommonly good season for corn." "Yaas, I s'pose it has, Colonel. But—y'see—I forgot to plant."

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "trash and sensational." He looks back on his youth with regret that there were not books enough to guide the children's taste to "healthy reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser."

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is now flooding the land, we confess, we should hardly be able to define for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than the most vicious of the dime novels, because, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have explain, only dizzies and debauches the intellect, calms for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be spared and Control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press no one can know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually polluted as at its source, so we have a right to attribute much of the influence of these papers, designed by cyclists and eager children, to their influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds are shaped by their hands."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as beautiful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits "ST NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says:"—in

That threatens the children, some strong, virtuously wholesome, really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and a common sphere for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST NICHOLAS, CHRISTNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be found. It is one for side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to D ec., '76) for $5.00.

Or, for $3.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the price of which is 7.50. Or for $6.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the net price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by no means not only for boys, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid serials, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 5,000 book pages costing $25.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876 sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

GEO. R. ROWELL & CO., 41 PARK ROW, NEW YORK.

Ten years ago Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. established their advertising agency in New York City. Five years ago they absorbed the business conducted by Mr. John Hooper, who was the first to go into this kind of enterprise. Now they have the satisfaction of controlling the most extensive and complete advertising connection which has never been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. They have succeeded in working down a complex business into so thoroughly a systematic method that no change in the newspaper system of America can escape notice, while the widest information upon all topics interesting to advertisers is placed readily at the disposal of the public.

Notices of the Press.

The Bazar is edited with a combination of tact and talent that we seldom find in any journal; and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—Boston Traveller.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household—to the children by its bright and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in endless variety, to the provident matron in its patterns for the children's clothing, to the paterfamilias by its useful designs for embroidered slippers and luxurious dressing-gowns. In the reading matter, The Bazar is uniformly of great excellence. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the lively gallantry of its editor.—N. Y. Evening Post.

In its way there is nothing like it. Fresh and trustworthy as a fashion guide, its short and racy stories, its poetry and squibs, are all invigorating to the mind.—Chicago Evening Journal.

MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and the most astonishing testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, as Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and thought I would lay by, when I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefitted by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report as well and hearty. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed find $1.00 for two packages.

SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills yesterday, and thank you for your orders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good relief I have received from using. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can say that anything. In one of the testimonials enclosed they speak of the Pills being as good; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this place find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism and Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor, and have tried all the doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I send you this April day for a large box of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as much as anybody. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would think of no other medicine. I feel so thankful, I think the most prove a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane---Health much Better at 64 than 44---Neuralgia and Kidney Trouble Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have been Neuralgic, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

Hundreds of others have sent in unsolicited testimonials of the efficacy of these Pills. Among them are:

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. Eddy has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. TOM PAINE.

Among the Centennial events there is one that should not be forgotten, yet will not gladly be remembered, because it is associated with a name which is as generally distasteful as any in our history. In the winter of a hundred years ago was published the famous pamphlet, Common-Sense, which crystallized into fixed purpose the wishes and hopes for independence which filled the colonial mind. The author was Thomas Paine—a very conspicuous figure in his time, but generally known to us as Tom Paine, the infidel. One little boy whom the Easy Chair well knew heard his name first upon a raw, wintry day in a New England town, when his attention was attracted by the firing of guns, and he asked what they were for. The reply was in substance that some disreputable people were celebrating Tom Paine's birthday. The tone implied that he was a dreadful reprobate. But surely Tom Paine had done some good service. He wrote Common-Sense, and published it in the dark hour of the Revolution. It was a wholly unselfish service, for he took out no copyright; and even in those days, among a colonial population of three millions only, poor and in the midst of exhausting war, there were a hundred thousand copies of the pamphlet sold. Washington, Franklin, Adams, Jefferson, hailed him as a public benefactor. But among later Americans his name was always mentioned with horror and disdain. It is agreed that no single cause was more effective in producing the Declaration of Independence than his Common-Sense. But sixteen years ago, when a portrait of Paine was offered to the city of Philadelphia, to be hung in the hall where the Declaration was adopted and signed, it was declined. A likeness of Tom Paine, the infidel, must not hang among the most august shades of the fathers. Yet the religious views of "Tom Paine" were essentially those of "Tom Jefferson," whose name will be saluted as among the most illustrious of this illustrious year.

The feeling about Paine in the beginning of the century was largely political. When Jefferson was President, he invited Paine to come to this country from France, where he had narrowly escaped the guillotine, and he arrived in October, 1802. His friends gave him public dinners. His opponents said that Tom Paine and Tom Jefferson ought to dangle from the same gallows. For even in that golden age of the republic, to which so many sighing imaginations revert from the corruption of this age of brass and iron upon which we have fallen, there was some warmth of party feeling and expression. When Paine came to New York he stopped at the old City Hotel, on Broadway, just North of Trinity Church. And the inquisitive little Laurie Todd, or Grant Thorburn, heard one day that the great sinner was standing at the door of the hotel, and he ran out with some friends to see him. But Mr. Paine had gone to his room. The Scotchman was not to be foiled, and he asked a servant who was sweeping the hall if Mr. Paine was at home. Hearing that he was, Thorburn pushed on, and was shown into a large room where the table was set for breakfast. One gentleman was writing, another reading the newspaper, and at the farther end of the room stood a long, lank, coarse-looking figure warming his hind-quarters before the fire. The intruder asked for Mr. Paine. The figure by the fire replied that his name was Paine. Thorburn put out his hand, which Paine took, and the little Scotchman said that he he had called from mere curiosity. Mr. Paine replied that he was very glad to satisfy it. Upon which Thorburn made a bow "like a goose ducking his head under water," walked out, and shut the door, while all the gentlemen in the room burst into a laugh, which he heard all the way to the door. He did not care; he had seen the great man. But he had to pay for the pleasure. The great city was a small town then, and the story of the interview grew as it was repeated. Thorburn was clerk of the Scotch Presbyterian church, in Cedar street, and if he had hobnobbed with Voltaire—as Voltaire was then generally esteemed—or had sworn eternal friendship with David Hume, he could not have struck his brethren with greater horror. The Kirk Session took alarm. A special meeting was called, and Grant Thorburn was suspended from psalm-singing for three months because he had shaken hands with Thomas Paine.

Doubtless Paine has been very harshly treated. His honesty cannot be doubted. His political views were those of the men of his time whom we most reverence, and his religious opinions did not differ from those of many men whom we most highly honor. He was not an infidel in the ordinary sense, for his Age of Reason was written to oppose atheism. His misfortune was that he had no tact, and the very vigor and simplicity of mind and style which made Common-Sense and The Rights of Man such efficient political pamphlets, made his religious treatise, the Age of Reason, fatal to his reputation. In the first he trenchantly expressed a great and powerful public opinion. In the last he came into collision with it, and it crushed him.—Editor's Easy Chair, in Harper's Magazine for April.

Daily Chronicle.

MONDAY, MARCH 20, 1876.

To Whom The Honor.

The magnificent victory of last week was not won without an effort on the part of the republican leaders. Hon. E. H. Rollins, the veteran campaigner, who has no equal in New Hampshire as an organizer and leader, declares that the campaign just closed was by far the hardest fought of any of the political engagements in which he has participated since commencing active political management in the Spring of 1855, not excepting the memorable contests of 1868 and 1872. For the past eight months, Mr. Rollins has devoted a large share of his time toward organizing victory, displaying an energy and foresight that revealed the weakest spots in the enemy's position and made every blow effective. If any feeling of gratitude for the splendid victory is uppermost in republican hearts to-day it is due him for his zealous, persistent and untiring efforts to accomplish the grand result.

The same is true of Hon. Daniel Hall, whose efficiency as chairman of the republican State committee has been repeatedly proven in the past three years. Mr. Hall, though desirous to retire from the management of the campaign, at the earnest solicitation of Gov. Cheney, Mr. Rollins and other prominent republicans, consented to remain, sacrificing his business interests to a large extent, entering into the canvass with determination and putting into the work his best efforts. Had he not been possessed of more than ordinary powers of endurance, Mr. Hall must have succumbed before the responsibilities and demands of the position before the close of the campaign, which required his constant attention fully eighteen hours per day. The large majority on the State ticket and the thorough work revealed by the completeness of the victory must be especially satisfactory. The republican party has high honors reserved for men of such talent and fine ability as Mr. Hall is possessed of and has displayed, and we shall feel that until conferred upon him the party owes him a debt that it should make haste to cancel.

For many years the popular and genial Secretary of the committee, Hon. Benj. F. Prescott, has done most faithful service, having particularly in charge of late the return of thousands of absent voters. Mr. Prescott's services were indispensable, although performed without display. His friends are legion and intend to show their appreciation at their earliest possible opportunity. Messrs. James A. Wood and George C. Gilmore, members of the executive committee of which Mr. Rollins is chairman, did valiant and sturdy service for the good cause, realizing fully that eternal vigilance alone would bring success. Col. L. H. Carrell and Frank S. Dodge, Esq., of Concord, were active in securing the great majority which that city rolled up, and were in constant attendance at headquarters.

We cannot conclude this deserved recognition of services without congratulating republicans everywhere on the nominations with which they went before the people. It is safe to say that no such contest could have been made with any other than our esteemed Chief Magistrate, Person C. Cheney, at the head of the ticket. Governor Cheney unites an integrity of character, a spotless reputation, and ability of such high order, with such a capacity for leadership, that gave him the full confidence and esteem of his political associates, and the respect of all opposed to him. There was ample opportunity for a display of courage in the contest waged, and not one of his friends ever had reason to complain of any neglect of duty on his part. He comes out of his second candidature for the gubernatorial office more popular than ever, and with an untarnished record. Messrs. Hall, Rollins and Cheney had abundant faith from first to last that a grand republican victory was in the immediate future, and the result justifies their most sanguine expectations. Gen. Natt Head and Geo. E. Todd, Esq., cheated of their just rights by an Executive who must now in his retirement hang his head with shame, were most available candidates, and made such vigorous onslaughts into the democratic ranks as to put success beyond a doubt many days before the close of the campaign.

A vast deal of work was done in circulating tens of thousands of documents in every town in the State. This was done by a corps of willing assistants at Concord and at Washington. The Concord Monitor, the Manchester Mirror, the Exeter News-Letter and other republican papers kept the democracy always on the defensive and were always alert and vigorous. Added to all the thorough work done by the State committee, the candidates and the press, was the personal indignation which every republican voter in the State felt over the Senate steal of last year and the impudence of Ben. Hill, Jeff Davis and other unrepentant rebels; the remembrance of the acts of violence and direct fraud at the polls in Manchester and Portsmouth last year; and the repeated indignities offered students and all intelligent voters by the disfranchising act of 1874. Every republican seemed anxious to poll the last vote possible to secure a triumph that should be lasting in its effects. No wonder the democracy are astonished!

Money.

The Concord Patriot is excessively mournful because the $100,000 which the democracy expended in the recent campaign went for naught; and now says: "Let us stop the use of money for buying democrats to hold them. * * * The whole system of electioneering in this State is damnable, demoralizing, injurious to the people and a disgrace to the State. It is all money, money, money." Chastisement is very liable to bring humiliation to the wicked. 'Twas money which elected the editor of the Patriot to the legislature from Hopkinton only two years ago. 'Twas money that bought Barrington to send two democratic representatives to the legislature only one year ago. 'Twas the expenditure of $35,000 and the perpetration of the most glaring frauds that gave Frank Jones a plurality of about 250 votes for Congressman the same year. 'Twas money and fraud that elected Sam. N. Bell to Congress from the second district at the same time. 'Twas money that the democracy expected when they nominated Hon. Daniel Marcy for Governor. 'Twas money that John G. Sinclair relied on to purchase a Senatorial seat in the Congress of the United States. Money cannot always win, and the surprise is so great to the democratic managers, that they bewail their fate with a solemnity that is ridiculous beyond measure. Did their followers rake in all the pile?

Democratic Astonishment.

The Boston Post, funny paper, which predicted a democratic majority of one thousand in New Hampshire, and came not within 4500 votes of the actual result, now says the "sting of defeat is disregarded in astonishment at the manner in which the republican managers have overdone the thing." Bless your soul, Post, the republican managers went in to annihilate the rebel and rowdy element in New Hampshire politics, which had disgraced the State at home and abroad by unblushing fraud and bribery, and had trampled on the sacred rights of the people to elect their own officers. The contemptible betrayal of a people by a tool of the democratic party, named Weston, gave the republican managers, followed by a majority of the people of the State, an opportunity to sit down on the democracy, which in State convention assembled endorsed usurpation. Just such an opportunity was desired, and if an elephant had trodden on the democracy they could not have been more lifeless to-day. Boston's intensely "funny" democratic sheet thought Weston's wickedness of last year was evidence of exceeding "smartness," just as some of the same ilk boasted of James Fisk's "smartness" in robbing on a large scale. But, Post, thinking it all over, how do you think James A. Weston feels, about now? Don't you think he hates himself and despises his own meanness? And how, think you, do Edmund L. Cushing, William S. Ladd and Isaac W. Smith enjoy the election returns? And how is your own general, political, New Hampshire health, Mr. Post?

News and Notes.

Town officers of Sandown for 1876: Moderator, John S. Kelley, r.; Town Clerk, Amos S. Clark, d.; Representative, Amos S. Clark, d.; Selectmen, George F. Griffin, d., Samuel D. Fellows, d., Ebenezer Hoyt 2d, r.; Town Treasurer, Robert Sanborn, r.; Superintendent School Committee, Sarah M. Mills.

Henry Astor, one of the rich Astors of New York, has just been convicted of an assault on a four-year-old girl, and the jury awarded her $20,000 damages. The assault came about by Astor's asking the girl if she had ever seen him drunk, to which she replied, "yes, when you came up from New York." He then struck her in the back, knocking her out of her chair. She is now 13 years old, is a cripple for life, her back bone is curved aside to the hips, and she can get about only on all fours.

Gen. Natt Head's majority for Senator in the second district is 306. The vote is: For Natt Head 4,078; Dana Sargent 3730; Scattering 42. Last year Priest had 3834; Head 3,771; scattering 102. Majority against Head 165. Gen. Head's gain this year 471.

Returns from every town in the State except Eaton and Randolph give Cheney 41,668, Marcy 37,975, Kendall 412, scattering 8. Cheney's plurality 3693. Cheney's majority 3281. The two towns remaining to be heard from gave Cheney 51 and Roberts 149, last year.

The Marlborough (Mass.) almshouse assault case, in which a Catholic priest and a local officer were arrested for assaulting the matron of the almshouse while attempting to enter the room of a sick pauper, was tried in the Superior Court at Cambridge, before Judge Dewey. The jury returned a verdict of guilty, against both priest and officers. The case will go to the Superior Court.

It was a Concord man who spent an hour trying to open a postal card!

Spare The Birds.

The fashionable world is not entirely without feeling. Among the Spring announcements is one apparently showing that the dictates of humanity have overcome in this instance the feminine proclivity for gay adornment. It is decreed we are told that birds, feathers, and wings shall not adorn Spring bonnets in the lavish style displayed in the fashions of the last Winter. We fear, however, that humanity is not the only motive that has led to this result, for there is danger of an entire extermination of the species of birds that furnish the fashionable trimmings so greatly in demand. The slaughter of these helpless victims to the dictates of fashion has been carried on at a wholesale rate that seems almost beyond the bounds of belief.

At a single sale in London, of birds' feathers imported from India for that purpose, feathers of herons and egrets were sold that must have caused the destruction of at least ten thousand birds. At the same sale, nearly sixteen thousand humming birds from South America were disposed of, as well as parrots, kingfishers, trogons, tantagers, and many other bright-colored birds by the thousands. Most of them are killed at breeding time, as their feathers are then most beautiful and valuable, and nothing but a speedy and radical change will save these favorite feathered tribes from utter destruction. Such a sale as we have described is not the occurrence of a whole season, but takes place as often as once a week.

Miss Burdett-Coutts has made many and earnest appeals for the protection of these feathered members of the animal kingdom. Many who sympathize in her views have supported her plea, and now the good seed seems to have taken root. It will Spring up and bear abundant fruit, if every true-hearted woman will resolve to discountenance, for the present, at least, a fashion that causes the destruction of lives full of innocent happiness, and a source of pure enjoyment to the benevolent and cultivated members of the human family. But if it is true that fashion has taken the matter in her own hands, there will be no need of further anxiety, for she is an autocrat whose word is law. If she raises her sceptre, the birds will live.

—An Irishman soliloquized: "What a waste of money to be buying mate when you know the half of it is bone, while you can spend it for whiskey that hasn't a bone in it."

—The Indians at Niagara Falls are jealous because Spotted Tail and his party are going to set up tents at the Centennial in Philadelphia, and say that if they come any nearer than that, they will be "afther getting themselves inter a divil av a row, so they will, be jabbers."

THE SUCCESSFUL PHYSICIAN.

The is probably no man to whom the community owe so much as to the honest, fair-spoken physician, who does his actual duty both to himself and to his patients. Really skillful physicians are not so numerous that their virtues need no mention, and hence the advertisement of Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, may well claim the reader's attention. Dr. Pierce is a type of a class of men who obtain success by careful and well-directed effort, not attempting too much, or creating false ideas as to ability. The only reliable physician in these days of complicated disorders and high-pressure living is the "Specialist," the man who understands his one branch of the business. Such is his line is Dr. Pierce. For the benefit of his readers he has written a "Common Sense Medical Adviser," which is well worth reading by those who need such a work. With strict business honor, high professional skill, reasonable fees, and a large corps of competent assistants, Dr. Pierce will doubtless make his name familiar as "household words."

The Only Remedy.

Those who suffer from foul breath are open to the charge of carelessness. It will preserve and keep the teeth white, and the breath pure and sweet.

The Only Way to Conquer Dyspepsia.

It is perfectly preposterous to introduce pepsin and other acid solvents into the stomach in the expectation that they will assist digestion by acting on the food itself. They will not. Nor is it possible thus to overcome dyspepsia. The only way to conquer that disorder, and prevent the numerous diseases and disabilities which it assuredly provokes, is to renew the activity of gastric action by strengthening the stomach. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters eradicates the most inveterate forms of indigestion by restoring vitality to the alimentary organs and those which are tributary to them. The liver, the bowels, kidneys and the nerves, no less than the stomach, experience the invigorative effects of that standard tonic, which possesses alterative properties that greatly enhance its beneficial influence, and give a permanence to its effects which they would not otherwise possess.

TO MY PATIENTS!

DR. ALBION M. DUDLEY,

NOW OF SALEM, MASS.,

TO SUCCEED ME MARCH 13th,

Will be fully entitled to the respect and confidence of the citizens of Portsmouth. I can unreservedly recommend him, not only as a gentleman in the true meaning of the term, but as a well read, skillful and conscientious

Dental Practitioner.

DR. DUDLEY already has a fine and rapidly increasing practice in Salem, and consents to come here on trial for a year, (to be in Portsmouth three days of each week, and three days in Salem), at my earnest solicitation, backed by the free gift of my practice.

I could have sold my practice with a recommendation, for a large sum, but feeling the kindness and confidence with which I have been treated, I have chosen, nay, felt it impossible to do otherwise than sink private consideration of profit for the good of my patients.

If DR. DUDLEY is appreciated at his true worth by the people of Portsmouth, he can, through the confidence existing in him, be made to relinquish his practice in Salem, and settle here permanently. That such may be the result of the year of trial here is the earnest wish of his friend and the friend of Portsmouth. A. P. STEVENS.

N. B.—I shall take great pleasure in recommending Dr. D. to such of my patients as my limited time here will permit, and also to make engagements for him with any who may wish suggestion or advice from me. A. P. S.

Jottings.

The dry goods stores now close at seven o'clock on every evening except Saturdays.

Mr. Oliver L. Locke died of small pox on Friday. Mr. Jackson Hodgdon of Greenland was taken ill with the same disease on the same day.

Barnabee will appear here with his splendid concert troupe on the 26th, coming from the East. He is to present Mrs. H. E. H. Carter, Miss Annie C. Holbrook, Persis Bell and other equally notable talent, in a programme of great excellence.

Steamer "Perkiomer" (steam collier No. 10) arrived at Concord Railroad wharf on Saturday, with 1250 tons of coal.

Another horse epidemic has developed itself here, quite a number of animals having been taken by it. It seems to be an affection of the kidneys, and first manifests itself in a disinclination and lack of power on the part of the sick animal to back when in harness, the horse soon becoming so weak as to be unable to stand. The horse men are wholly at fault to account for it. No horses have as yet died with it, we believe.

After the miserable exhibition made by the present Superior Court of Judicature last June there is no republican in the State who will not rejoice that its power is nearly spent. It is thought the old system of one (Supreme) Court will be revived on the meeting of the legislature next June, with Hon. Charles Doe as Chief Justice and Messrs. Stanley and Foster among his associates. We hear Messrs. Daniel Hall, A. P. Carpenter and J. S. H. Frink named for Associate Judges.

TALE OF A NOMAD.

Vagrancy has existed for centuries both on this continent and throughout the civilized world. A judge, eminent in the profession of the law, who recently read an essay on "the pests of society" before the American Antiquarian Society, spoke of the tramps as a dangerous class, but not so dangerous as certain others designated by him. Many persons take to a nomadic life from the love of it and make a regular profession of it. This class is, however, small in number. Many take to tramping in search of work and abandon it when opportunity offers. Of late vagrancy has been much on the increase, and the matter has more than once been called to the attention of the legislatures of this and other States. The standing excuse of all tramps is that they are in search of employment, but when work is given them they are shy of it, unless the occupation is agreeable and at the same time remunerative. Tramps as a general rule are not deficient in intellect, and an extensive contact with the world has sharpened their wits. The life of a professional tramp must be one of vicissitude, and it is strange that any human being should enjoy it. It can be only explained on the ground that acquired habits of life are fully as binding as acquired appetites.

A tramp recently applied for lodging at the police station in this city. His face was weather-beaten and he was clad in the most dilapidated garments possible to imagine. All his earthly possessions were carried in an old handkerchief, a silk bandana, and consisted of an old shirt, a pair of stockings, and some rags. And concealed in the bundle were the remnants of a ham sandwich. He appeared to be a man past the prime of life, and freely admitted to the officers that he was a tramp, and has been so for some years. He has been at the police station before, but not for a year. He gave a most remarkable account of his wanderings. At first, he was loth to do so, but after a reason had been given and a slight pecuniary recompense offered he narrated the following story:

"I was born in Scotland,—no matter where. My father was a baker and I learned from him that business. When about twelve years of age, my mother died and in a couple of years my father married another woman, with whom I had difficulty. I went to sea at the age of fourteen and worked, helping the cook. I did not like sea life, and in Mexico left the ship and wandered into Texas in search of work. While in Texas, I worked for a man who had a kraal of cattle, doing odd chores and assisting in cooking. I soon got tired of this life and worked my way on a vessel to New York. While in that city I became acquainted with the stevedores and used to assist in loading and unloading vessels. When in New York, I acquired drinking habits and soon run got the best of me. I was stripped (out of money) and started out on a tramp to Montreal. It was in the winter season; I used to walk about twenty-five miles a day. While passing through the country I slept in barns. Usually a barn in the country, is open. If the door is locked, one can get in at a window and if a barn is entirely secure, I pass on to the next one. The hardest time a tramp has is in large cities, where they are known, but in the country, I can always get enough to eat. When people ask me questions, sometimes I tell the truth and sometimes lie. I sometimes have a companion with me and then I always do the begging and he the watching. The tramp up the Hudson to Montreal was a beautiful one. I followed the river up most of the time, but sometimes the railroad track. I was thoroughly stripped when I started out and my shoes were so worn I had to tie them up with strings. I got another pair, stopping and begging them of an old cobbler. I reached Troy dead broke and there worked unloading lumber and earned a dollar. I started for the nearest rum shop and the money was gone in a hurry. I got to Montreal, did not like the place, and started back to New York. When in Vermont, I was arrested and shoved as a vagrant for a year to the House of Correction in Rutland, where I remained serving out my sentence. I reached Albany and changed my mind about going to New York and started West. While in Cleveland the war broke out and I enlisted and got $50 as bounty and then deserted. All through the war I enlisted and was rich, making sometimes $1500 at a time. I paid frequently during the war to the guard officer $10 for a pint of whiskey. At last they caught me and I found myself near Richmond. I wounded myself and was taken to a hospital from which I escaped. I have tramped all over the country and a tramp is a tramp and there is not much difference in them. I have got so I can work at most anything. I learned shoemaking at Sing Sing and turn my hand to anything. I worked on the canals in New York. I helped build the bridge over the Hudson and have helped in building various railroads.

"The fact is I can't stay long in one place—I get uneasy.

"I used to play it sometimes on the Young Men's Christian Association, but I am afraid to go to them now, as they found me out and in one instance had me shoved.

"I never sleep at police stations, except in cities. In Boston and New York they give a man soup. I do not know as I can tell you any more. A tramp is a tramp."

The question of vagrancy has been agitated in the past, and laws have been enacted at various times both in this country and in Great Britain, for its suppression. In Massachusetts, recently, a law was enacted by which the Overseers of the Poor can detain a tramp to work till 11 o'clock in the morning, as a compensation for his night's lodging.

A curious law was enacted by the legislature of New Hampshire when that State was a province. It was passed in the year 1715, "anno regni Regis Georgii." It is entitled "An act for suppressing and punishing of Rogues and Vagabonds." Among the classes enumerated for punishment are rogues, vagabonds, beggars, drunkards, persons using any subtle craft, juggling or feigning themselves to have knowledge in physiognomy, palmistry, or pretending they can tell destinies, or such as neglect their callings and misspend what they earn. The enactment further states that such persons shall be punished by putting fetters upon them and by moderate whipping, not exceeding ten stripes at once, which shall be inflicted when they enter the House of Correction and from time to time in case they be stubborn. The plan of obliging them to work on the roads, if enforced would probably prove efficacious after a time.

Obed's Story.

"Five years ago, when I jest come ter Truckee, a-minin' was pretty nigh played out; but the woods round wuz full of b'ars, so I took ter huntin'em. It's a mighty onsartin' bizness, but I've been pretty lucky; I haint lost no b'ars yit, nor haint got 'chawed up,' ez most b'ar-hunters do afore they've be'n at it ez long ez me.

"I got me a couple of bull-purps to start with, but I soon found out thet blooded dorgs warn't no account in a b'ar-hunt. You see they close right in with a b'ar, and the konsiquens is, they don't last no time. Mongrels is what yer want in a b'ar-hunt; no account dorgs is the ones to worry a b'ar powerful; snappin' and snarlin' and bitin in the rear is more'n a b'ar can stan' by considerable. You see it confuses 'em so, that they naturally take to a tree, and then you hev got 'em. Why, Squire, the hardest fight I ever had with a black b'ar was right here, and the biggest one I ever killed I shot on the crotch er that beech thar" (pointing to a large tree close at hand). "I'll tell yer about it ef yer like, ez soon ez I light my pipe."

The pipe being lighted, Obed commenced as follows:

"It was a mornin' in November. I hadn't slep' much all night, and along jest afore daylight I heerd Pete yelp.

"I knowed from the sound thet he waz on ther track o' somethin', so I got up and dressed and went out ter see what it waz. Putty soon I heerd him ag'in down in these woods, so I took old Kaintuck and started.

"Jest after daylight, I struck a b'ar trail in thet same corn-field we come through this afternoon: I see plenty of places, too, where he'd helped himself to ther corn. I follard the track till I got well inter these woods, and then waited for Pete ter speak again. In a little while I heerd him yelp, and I know'd by the sound he'd got the b'ar treed, an' he'd stay by it till I got thar. I stepped along putty lively, though I did n't keer to hurry much, and I got ter jest about where you're sittin' afore I seed the dorgs. There old Pete waz, a-standin' straight up on his hind-legs, with his forepaws braced agin' the tree, lookin' at the b'ar, and ev'ry few minutes yellin' 'Obed!' ez plain ez anybody could say it.

"Well, Squire, that waz the crossest-lookin' b'ar I ever seed, an' I knowed thet I should hev trouble with him ez soon ez I set eyes on him; 'cause, yer see, ther dorgs had got him riled cl'ar through. He waz so mad, he did n't seem ter take no notice o' me, so I crep' round ter whar I could git a fair shot. Yer see, in shootin' a b'ar, ef yer can put a bullet right in behind the forre-shoulder, ten ter one one shot's 'nuff. So I crep' round till I got jest the position I wanted, and then I drew old Kaintuck on him.

"He kinder looked round at me when I fired, and then settled down ter thet big limb thar, as though he waz detarmined to stick thar. So I fired once more; the critter jest give a low growl, and hugged it all the closer.

"I hed to fire ag'in afore he dropped, and ez quick as he struck the ground the dorgs made for him; but, bless yer, quicker'n I hev took ter tell yer, three of them dorgs waz dead. Pete waz the only live one left. I never see a b'ar thet could handle his paws as thet one did; they made me think of that wind-mill down in the Merced Valley, more'n ennything I ever did see afore.

"Pete knowed better'ern ter tackle thet critter; he jest sot and watched every motion—ez knowin' ez enny man would hev done; and ef he seed the b'ar look toward where he waz a-sittin', he'd 'kl-yl' like all possest, and put inter the woods. Wal, I seed I couldn't do nothin' with ther dorg, so I made up my mind to go for the critter myself. I drawed my knife and started toward him; but afore I got within six feet of him, he riz up an' hit me a lick with one of his paws, thet knocked me more'n ten feet, and sent my knife whar I never hev seen it ter this day. Nor I haint never found out how he done it either, for it was did so awful quick. When I come to, the b'ar lay thar dead. I hunted for my knife awhile, an' then went back ter the settlement, an' got some of the boys ter come out an' help me carry the critter home, for it was the biggest black b'ar ever killed in Truckee. My head didn't get over akin' for a month arter thet, though I never should hev got him enuyway, ef it badn't a be'n fur Pete;—an' ter think that a dorg thet knowed ez much ez Pete should hev be'n and gone an got kicked ter death by a mule at last! Thet's what beats me; it do, sure," and Obed shook his head as though he indeed failed to comprehend how it could possibly be. After some further conversation upon bears, Obed replenished our camp-fire for the night, and we both turned in.—Samuel W. Cozzen, St. Nicholas for April.

—Party dresses are to be cut very low in the neck—to the ragged edge of modesty, —The portion of the body which most requires protection against cold and wind, is that between the shoulder blades behind, as it is at this point the lungs are attached to the body, and the blood is easily chilled.

—A Michigan clergyman wrote to a lottery agent, "I do not approve of lotteries; I regard them as no better than gambling schemes. My son bought ticket No. 5 in your drawing, but if it drew anything don't send the money to him—send it to me. The clergyman will probably feel relieved to learn that the ticket didn't draw anything.

—Many years ago when David Crockett was a member of Congress, and had returned to his constituents after his first session, a "nation" of them surrounded him one day, and began to interrogate him about Washington. "What time do they dine at Washington, colonel?" asked one. "Why," said he, "common people, such as you here, get their dinners at one o'clock, but the gentry and big uns dine at three. As for the Representatives, we dine at four; and the aristocracy and the Senate don't get their victuals till five." "Well, when does the President fodder?" "Old Hickory?" exclaimed the colonel, attempting to appoint a time in accordance with the dignity of the station, "Old Hickory? Well he don't dine till next day!"

Daily Chronicle.

—A North Carolina negro thought he could cut-run a locomotive on the Air Line Road, and when he picked himself up, after being thrown twenty feet and landing on his head, he said: "Yer don't ketch this yer chile fooin' dat agin. It's a right smart wonder I didn't tear dese britches clean off."

—While we commonplace folk are living our jog-trot lives, glad of even an occasional kettledrum to break their monotony; careful and troubled about dinners and clothes; quite comfortable in our minds because we are not as other men, and especially jubilant in that we are not thieves, of high or low degree; in other parts of the world stirring people are having adventures and discovering things. In New Mexico the Wheeler exploring party have found the remains of a town called Cristone, which could be reached only by a partly ruined stone stairway, with no trace of cisterns or water supply. They judge from the remains of pottery that the number of buildings to the square mile must have been as great as now in the rural districts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey. The existing Indians can tell nothing of its extinct inhabitants. One ruined town was found in Aztlan which had eight houses, mostly in rows and squares. It is believed by the Indians to have been sacked by the Spaniards, and that the inhabitants threw themselves from the precipices in despair. A curious incident in connection with the removal of a skeleton which was found lying near the walls, was the accidental shooting and death of the topographer of the party, three days after he had removed the skeleton, contrary to the advice of the Indians, who warned him that violent death or ill fortune would result from disturbing the dead. The Indians say that the town was built in the reign of Montezuma. The explorations of the past year tend to show that the pre-historic American lived here as far back as the tertiary period; that he made instruments for grinding corn, weaving, and house building.

Ten years ago Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. established their advertising agency in New York City. Five years ago they absorbed the business conducted by Mr. John Hooper, who was the first to go into this kind of enterprise. Now they have the satisfaction of controlling the most extensive and complete advertising connection which has never been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. They have succeeded in working down a complex business into so thoroughly a systematic method that no change in the newspaper system of America can escape notice, while the widest information upon all topics interesting to advertisers is placed readily at the disposal of the public.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brilliant dressing in the public libraries are "vapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the matter of reading much more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "We more deplore than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

Rev. C. S. Robinson, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '73, to Dec., '75) for $3.50.

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of each of the volumes being $4.00. Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children in the market.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 5,000 book pages costing $20.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876 sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

Is the ultima thule o Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the luxurious climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the source of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration now drawing to a close. The course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great issues to be swept away, and many problems to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to be a year of trial, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely in to politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are hopes that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued support of all who desire a fearless discussion of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan necessities or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion, all through the American conflict, and it will rejoice whenever those principles are victorious under the old banner. But it can never be the servant of a party, nor consciously, it may be, approve what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it endeavors to set forth the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics it will still try to show the intelligent men, whom the country knows and can trust; to secure hard money, Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the best interests compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it hopes to hasten the time when it can cry for the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that both parties find themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward their best men, and practice some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have thus within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end in the methods which have proved most commended in its popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost candor with judicial fairness; will keep its columns free from personal wranglings; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its successes provoke from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.

In these ways it hopes to make such a journal a desirable visitor in their families. THE TRIBUNE will continue a continuance of its favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the year 1871 alone the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by its direct working ness and the most lavish expenditure to procure the freshest intelligence, the most complete reports, the most interesting letters and essays, and the ablest work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

American Babies.

To the credit of mankind it may be observed says Porte Crayon, that this arrogant and unlimited empire of babyhood has not been submitted to tamely and without partial effort to control or modify its oppressive authority. The noble red man ties his new born chief to a board, bound hand and foot, not so much to keep him out of mischief as to inure him to that stoicism in suffering and limited sphere of action which belong to his future career, and also to afford his esteemed mother the needful recreation of heeing her row in the cornfield. Your tradition ridden European swaddles his nascent subject, body and mind, in the bands of conformity, that he may learn to play his part civilly, without jostling or astonishing his fellows in the crowded marts and thoroughfares of despotism. In America, where "no pent-up Utica contracts our powers," our little regulators are allowed to go it sprawling, acquiring even in babyhood those invaluable lessons of self-control, self-reliance and self-helpfulness which aid to make the coming man the [illegible] of himself and the terror of the world. In comparing results we may further observe that the most carefully swaddled baby, when he grows up, and occasionally breaks loose for a season, through inexperience and a blind resentment of his former unnatural suppression, becomes the most dangerous and frightful mischief maker both in society and government; while our sprawling freeman, if he has the luck to survive the risks of his infantile career, subsides into self-reliant conservation, with discretion and experience enough to manage his affairs creditably thereafter. It is true that when our pet babies fall into fits from surfeiting or set the house on fire in their wanton frolics, we feebly but temporarily regret the regime of swaddling clothes; but when our "party" carries an election triumphantly we are reassured of the future of the republic, and shout the praises of freedom with renovated zeal.

Indian Customs.

A newspaper correspondent with the Choctaws writes: The Choctaw Indians occupy an area of about two hundred miles square in the southeast portion of the Indian Territory, and number about seventeen thousand souls, representing "full bloods, half breeds, and whites who have married into Indian families, thus entitling them to citizenship.

The Choctaws have from one to four murders every week. Just as I am writing on this subject, information has reached us that four Indians, two male and two female, have been found in a small prairie, shot dead, within four miles of a station on the railroad. Occasionally, however, a murderer is arrested, and after conviction and sentence, Sixty days are given for preparation. On the appointed day, after the death warrant is read, the prisoner is marched out into the court yard, and there his coat is taken off and he is blindfolded; then a small black spot about an inch in diameter is made on his white shirt directly over the heart, and when all is ready a deputy sheriff is stationed on either side, and, with a firm grip, they extend his hands and arms to about the height of his breast. Then the sheriff, with a loaded rifle, steps up to within ten paces, and the culprit is shot. The moment the gun is fired a wad of cotton, previously prepared, is used to plug up the wound, so that the hemorrhage is all internal; the corpse is then turned over to those whose duty it is to have it buried.

In the service in one of their churches recently, where the congregation was composed of Indians and whites, the preaching was in both languages by the white minister officiating, and interpreted by a full blood. Many of the Indian men entered church wearing their revolvers and knives, and kept them on during service. The singing was all done by those dusky people, who are full of music, and seemed to take special delight in this part of the worship.

—An unsalable picture—A bank account overdrawn.

—"That's going too far," as the Boston man said when his wife ran away to San Francisco with another man.

—What was once the famous "Island No. 10," in the Mississippi river, is now a very small patch of ground, and that will soon dissolve.

—The Spanish army has 77 generals, 180 lieutenant-generals, and 325 major-generals. There are also 3000 brigadier-generals and several privates.

—An old gentleman, who was always bragging how folks used to work in his younger days, one day challenged his two sons to pitch up a load of hay as fast as he could load it. The challenge was accepted, and the hay wagon driven around, and the trial commenced. For some time the old man held his own very creditably, calling out "More hay, more hay!" Thicker and faster it came; the old man was nearly covered; and still he kept crying, "More hay, more hay!" At length, struggling to keep on top of the ill-arranged heap, it began first to roll, then to slide, and at last off it went from the wagon and the old man with it. "What are you down here for?" at once cried the boys. "I came down after more hay," answered the old man.

Election Explanations.

The Concord Patriot, reviewing the election and the causes of the crushing democratic defeat, says:

"No man should be put in nomination unless his record is a good one, politically. The voters want men whom they can trust on the questions which have divided the people during the last sixteen years. This is so, and it is of no use to wink this fact out of sight. While the people desire a union of the North and of the South; while they desire peace and prosperity to all; while they welcome back into a fraternal embrace those recently engaged in rebellion; yet they are cautious and require some kind of a security that the leaders in the secession movement shall not be placed in the high positions of the national government, at present."

This is a point blank shot at the war-record of the democratic candidate for governor; and is just in the line of argument against Mr. Marcy's election adopted by the republican press and speakers from the time he was nominated until he was defeated.

Another point in which (according to the Patriot) the republicans had a great advantage is that "the people read the year round and the republicans take pains to circulate their newspapers and to get them into the hands of all the voters." Then the republicans "work all the year round and are not troubled much with regard to how they win, but go in to win anyway. They will use the temperance cause; they will talk about the Bible in the schools; yes, they make the church walk up to do their bidding; all, or nearly all, of the ministers are bitter republican partizans and are constantly at work in a quiet way to destroy the democratic party which the clergy regard with not much affection." We do not feel inclined to quarrel with the Patriot for classing the press, the temperance cause and the churches as aids to the republican party.

As to the improper use of money, of which so much (and so much extravagant nonsense) has been said, the Patriot discourses as follows: "Can it be that the people care but little for the good name of the State, or have they become so demoralized that five, ten, fifteen or twenty dollars is the price demanded by many for their votes? We hope not and shall be sorry when made to believe it." Yet further on in the same article it advises the democratic leaders to "take one-quarter of the money spent for the benefit of sharpers and bummers and use it to pay for and to circulate sound doctrines and sound principles;" and to "stop the use of money for buying democrats to hold them." It also says the system of electioneering in this State "is all money, money, money," and that "both parties are alike guilty in this particular, though the iniquitous system of bribery was first inaugurated by the republicans." Now the republicans say bribery was first resorted to by the democrats, and we believe it; also, that for every dollar put out by the republicans in the recent campaign the democrats put out two, and that also we believe. A prominent democrat of Dover, whose name we have once given, boasted three weeks before the election that such would be the case, and the New York Commercial Advertiser plainly charged Gov. Tilden with acting in concert with Tammany in raising money and sending it into this State,—money which it seems was "spent for the benefit of sharpers and bummers" and for "buying democrats to hold them." But recriminations are of no use; that there has been bribery is certain, but that there has been half so much of it on either side as some credulous newspaper correspondents assert we do not for a moment believe. Vigorous legislation should however be adopted to prevent it, and if it is not done this year the republican party will justly have to bear the blame. Two attempts to legislate on this matter have been defeated by the democrats.—In 1874, when both branches of the legislature were democratic, and again last year. In 1874 a bill to secure purity of elections passed the House, but was amended by the Senate; the House refused to concur in the amendments, (without which the bill would have been worthless,) and a conference committee was appointed, all democrats; but no agreement could be reached and the measure was consequently lost. Last year the bill reappeared; the republican House struck out the useless and clumsy sections which the democratic Senate struck out the year before, and added an amendment to punish repeating and fraudulent voting; and the bill as amended received every republican vote on motion to suspend the rules and pass it, one hundred and one democrats voting in the negative and defeating the motion. Which party has hitherto been most interested in trying to secure purity of elections we leave to be gathered from the above.

News and Notes.

A terrible railway disaster occurred Friday on the Basil Railway, France. A train from Mulhausen to Strasbourg fell through a bridge over the river and was completely wrecked. Over fifty passengers were killed and many others injured.

Mr. Lilly, who secured a cadet appointment from Congressman Hayes without disclosing that he had received money for procuring it, testifies that he has secured the appointment of other cadets and pocketed the whole amount of the money paid. In one case only did he divide, and that was with a member of the Thirty-Ninth Congress, to whom he paid six hundred dollars. This member was a democrat from Pennsylvania.

A great eruption of Mount Vesuvius is in progress. The scene as observed from a distance is grand in the extreme. Vivid flashes of light followed by heavy discharges of vari-colored matter alternate in regular succession. A terrible rumbling of the earth, followed by shocks, is felt at a distance of fifty miles, and showers of heated lava course down the mountain sides. The eruption threatens to be one of the most violent for many years.

A schooner was seen to sink, six miles south of Barnegat light on Saturday night. She had been in collision with a brig the night before. Her crew were taken off by a steamer, but her name is not given.

The vessel sunk off Barnegat was the brig Frank Clark, 297 tons, of Damariscotta, Me., run down by the schooner Adelaide J. Alcott, of New York. The captain and his wife, and the first mate, were drowned.

The car house, a strong building on the tip top of Mt. Washington, was blown over in the late storm. The force of the wind is described as a hurricane. The car house was the building which the Signal Service party occupied the first and second season of their winter sojourn on the mountain.

A sad disaster has occurred on the coast of Cornwall, England. The French steamer Isabel, from Rochelle to Bristol, was caught in a violent gale and wrecked on the coast. Thirty persons were drowned. Numerous disasters at sea are reported as the result of the heavy gales.

It is estimated that at least 12,000 persons have signed the pledges since the beginning of the temperance revival in New Hampshire.

People who are starved to death become idiotic toward the last, because there is not nourishment enough in the blood to feed the brain, to keep up its activities." The sentence quoted is from a Boston paper, and just now it is evident that the editors of several democratic papers are starving to death.—N. O. Republican.

The meanest highwaymen heard of lately are two fellows who knocked down a printer, Mr. P. H. Hamnill, on Chelsea Bridge, Friday night, and took $1.25 from him.

The people of New Hampshire are loyal and the most reading people in the Union. They know the Representative men as no other State knows them, and when they were asked to vote for such men as Marcy, whose Congressional record was a stain upon his loyalty and patriotism, and when they had read Ben Hill's insane utterances, it was no longer a doubt how they would vote.—Haverhill Gazette.

You may talk about one side being as corrupt as the other, and about both sides buying and selling with equal facility, but no man who is familiar with New Hampshire will deny that as a whole the republican party is overwhelmingly superior in the personal character of its members to the democratic party. A stranger might go into any rural town-meeting in New Hampshire and poll the house by the smell of the breath and other personal characteristics of the voters, and not find one rummy in ten on the wrong side.—Lowell Courier.

The democrats in the rest of the State were so anxious about Laconia that they forgot to go to town meeting.—Laconia Democrat.

Not the whole truth. They knew the Laconia democrats were paying high prices for votes, and concluded to stay away from the polls until they received their usual amount of greenbacks for their votes.

The spirit of the ex-Confederates of the House is well illustrated in the devotion with which Mr. L. Q. C. Lamar, chairman of the Pacific Railroad Committee, clings to his namesake, L. Q. C. Washington, who is clerk of that committee, despite the latter's late outrageous insult to Hon. Martin I. Townsend of New York. That committee and the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions were jointly entitled to one clerk, and Washington was appointed to the position. After the latter's gross abuse of Mr. Townsend, Mr. Hunton, the chairman, though a democrat, insisted upon his removal; but Mr. Lamar objected so strenuously that Mr. Hunton was compelled to yield. He however, secured a new clerk for his committee, while Lamar retained the services of the foul-mouthed wretch who disgraces the name of Washington. So to please the smooth-tongued Lamar and his rebel friend, the country is compelled to support two officers where one is all-sufficient. Yet this is a reform House!

The revised edition of that very valuable, comprehensive and ably conducted publication, Zell's Popular Encyclopedia and Universal Dictionary, is meeting with the highest favor. With it hundreds of books of reference can be dispensed with, for it is a library of useful knowledge and information in thousands of fields. The subscription price of the numbers is so small that the work is obtainable by every family. The periodical outlay of a little sum, which would be probably wasted every day, will secure in the end a work which will be found the source of deep good in the family. We can heartily commend the work to our readers' attention. Horace King, General Agent, Hartford, Conn.

Gentle Woman.

Those who witnessed the animated spectacle say that the scene at the Opera House, directly after the opening of the doors for the matinee on Wednesday, was the most impressive exhibition of woman's force of character ever witnessed in this quarter of the distracted world. There were at least four hundred ladies, and they were crowded up against the entrance and on the stairways like sardines in a box while they struggled and watched and grew feverishly impatient for the first chance to rush wildly into the auditorium. Mr. McKenna accordingly effected unusual precautions in preparing for the rush which he knew would come when the doors were opened. Those familiar with the Opera House interior will recollect the square inclosure through which visitors pass to the theatre after entering the other door. Well, against the wooden fence around this inclosure Mc stationed eighteen men, with instructions to brace firmly against it. The eighteen being well braced, and all being solidly fixed, Mc gave the signal to open the doors. With a rush, a roar and a sweep like the irresistible whirlwind the ladies moved into the small space of that enclosure. Like the waves of an angry sea, they bore down upon the noble eighteen, and lo! in a trice, the noble eighteen were not. They were cut down in a flash, along with the frail fence, and over their prostrate bodies, the screaming, shouting women rushed into the auditorium, as if life had but one mission, one purpose, one ambition, and that to provide each woman with a front seat. The youths whose business it was to take tickets took no tickets just then, for they went down in the general wreck. McKenna would have said something appropriate to the occasion, but unhappily he was also wrecked, absolutely lying on the floor and women stepping all over him, as if he were a Brussels carpet, instead of a nobby young theatrical manager. As the ladies rushed along in that sweeping tide, they recognized the fact that the ticket-takers were a trifle off, and so throwing their tickets to the four winds, they gave the atmosphere the picturesque appearance of being principally composed of bits of flying pasteboard. Such a time was never before seen on this continent, we venture to say.—New Orleans Times.

—The young men who tried to imitate the gentle sex at the leap year party in Washington made a great many ridiculous blunders. One of them warned his partner against squeezing his hand, and she called him a big booby and no girl at all.

—Captain Bogardus, the champion wing shot of America, came over here to challenge any man to shoot against him at pigeons. He polished off the crack shots of this country in a manner worthy of praise; but after one of these great matches his opponent bet him fifty pounds he did not kill the next bird. The champion took the bet, the trap was pulled, but no blue rock rose to take its flight. A pigeon there was in the trap, but it was a dead one. The Captain paid his fifty pounds with a grimly amused air, as he soliloquized, "This is English fair play. And this is what the old country has come to."—London Dramatic News.

THE SUCCESSFUL PHYSICIAN.

The is probably no man to whom the community owe so much as to the honest, fair-spoken physician, who does his actual duty both to himself and to his patients. Really skillful physicians are not so numerous that their virtues need no mention, and hence the advertisement of Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, may well claim the reader's attention. Dr. Pierce is a type of a class of men who obtain success by careful and well-directed effort, not attempting too much, or creating false ideas as to ability. The only reliable physician in these days of complicated disorders and high-pressure living is the "Specialist," the man who unremitting has one branch of the business. Such in his line is Dr. Pierce. For the benefit of his readers he has written a "Common Sense Medical Adviser," which is well worth reading by those who need such a work. With strict business honor, high professional skill, reasonable fees, and a large corps of competent assistants, Dr. Pierce will doubtless make his name familiar as "household words."

The Only Remedy.

Those who suffer from foul breath are open to the charge of carelessness. The Only Way to Conquer Dyspepsia.

It is perfectly preposterous to introduce pepsin and other artificial nutriments into the stomach in the expectation that they will assist digestion by acting on the food itself. They will not. Nor is it possible thus to overcome dyspepsia. The only way to conquer that disorder, and prevent the numerous diseases and disabilities which it assuredly provokes, is to renew the activity of gastric action by strengthening the stomach. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters eradicates the most inveterate forms of indigestion by restoring vitality to the alimentary organs and those which are tributary to them. The liver, the bowels, the kidneys and the nerves, no less than the stomach, feel the invigorative effects of this standard tonic, which possesses alterative properties that greatly enhance its beneficial influence, and give a permanence to its effects which they would not otherwise possess.

TO MY PATIENTS!

DR. ALBION M. DUDLEY,

NOW OF SALEM, MASS.,

TO SUCCEED ME MARCH 13th,

Will be fully entitled to the respect and confidence of the citizens of Portsmouth. I can unreservedly recommend him, not only as a gentleman in the true meaning of the term, but as a well read, skillful and conscientious

Dental Practitioner.

DR. DUDLEY already has a fine and rapidly increasing practice in Salem, and consents to come here on trial for a year, (to be in Portsmouth three days of each week, and three days in Salem); at my earnest solicitation, backed by the free gift of my practice.

I could have sold my practice with a recommendation, for a large sum, but feeling the kindness and confidence with which I have been treated, I have chosen, say, felt it impossible to do otherwise than sink private consideration of profit for the good of my patients.

If DR. DUDLEY is appreciated at his true worth by the people of Portsmouth, he can, through the confidence extended to him, be made to relinquish his practice in Salem, and settle here permanently. That such may be the result of his year of trial here is the devout wish of his friend and the friend of Portsmouth. A. E. STEVENS.

N. B.—I shall take great pleasure in presenting Dr. D. to such of my patients as my limited time here will permit, and also to make engagements for him with any who may wish suggestion or advice from me. A. F. S.

A Decisive Remedy.

The following extract from the town records shows how much fooling the people of Portsmouth would stand three-quarters of a century ago when they thought their rights were disregarded by individuals. Boyd's creek was the name of what is now the North Mill pond, and the proprietor, a man of considerable importance in those days, lived in what is now known as the Raynes house.

Voted—That unless the Bridge over Boyd's Creek be repaired by the Proprietor thereof, That the Selectmen cause the Same to be done & notify the Proprietor of his having forfeited his right to use of the Waters of Said Creek, And Cause the Flood Gates to be removed at Town meeting octo. 24 1803.

A Suggestion.

A friend of ours, formerly a resident of Portsmouth and who is interested in military affairs, has suggested that "there is as much capital in our city for a Veteran Military Association as in any other city in New Hampshire. Why not organize one, when we have such men of military experience, both as citizen soldiers and those who have seen active service during the war of the rebellion? I refer to Gen. Josiah G. Hadley, Major Alfred J. Hill, Capt. George W. Towle, Major Daniel J. Vaughan, Capts. Wm. O., John and Andrew J. Sides, Capt. John W. Dame, Capt. James W. Lefavour, Col. Andrew J. Beck, Capt. Henry F. Wendel, Col. Wm. H. Sise, Messrs. Nathaniel D. Miller, Francis W. Ham, Moses Yeaton and a host of others who were officers, commissioned and non-commissioned, and privates, whose war record we may be proud of. A uniform which would be very appropriate and of nominal cost, would be a black suit, (which almost every one has,) white belts and shoulder-straps, sabres and black chapeau, with such a plume as might be designated. A large number of the above-named gentlemen were officers of the old and honored Portsmouth Artillery, Rockingham Guards and Portsmouth Greys, organizations we refer to with pride. Let the Centennial be celebrated by organizing a Veteran Military Association."

Old Ladies' Home.

For fifty years, and nobody knows how much longer, the charitably disposed citizens of Portsmouth have been talking of building a home for aged people. Now it wishes were horses, poor people might not only ride, but have as good homes as they desire; but alas! the poor are always with us, and are likely to be,—and many respectable old people need some public or charitable provision for their declining years. To supply this, a prime lot of land has been purchased on South street, corner of Broad street, and presented for the site of an Old Ladies' Home.—of which Mr. William A. Loyne, our voluntary City Missionary, is to be the constructor and manager. There have also already been several other donations toward the erection of a building, etc. The following well-known and responsible ladies and gentlemen have been selected as Trustees of the institution and have accepted the trust:

Mrs. Richabod Goodwin,	Wm. Simes,
Miss E. H. Pearson,	Chas. E. Myers,
Mrs. A. H. Hill,	James Moses,
Mrs. John Stavers,	C. H. Mendum,
Mrs. E. S. Rider,	E. B. Goodall,
Mrs. G. W. Pendexter,	J. T. French,
Mrs. F. W. Miller,	G. W. Butler,
Mrs. —— Davis,	John S. Rand,
Mrs. J. P. Morse,	M. Bufford,
Mrs. W. H. Alden,	Wm. A. Loyne.

A meeting will soon be held for choice of a president, treasurer and clerk of the Board of Trustees, and the incorporation of the same.

Jottings.

The new schooner Mary S. Hontvet, now building at Fernald's shipyard, will be launched about the 23d. She is to be employed in fishing, and commanded by Capt. John Hontvet. She is built entirely of New Hampshire materials, the joiner work being done by Mr. Joseph Marden, and the calking by Mr. Jesse Wilson. She is seventy-five feet on the keel, and measures 116 tons. She is owned by Portsmouth parties, including her captain.

Messrs. Brown, Riley & Co., of Boston, through our columns to-day offer a choice line of bonds to investors, and also give notice of their readiness to furnish information and pay highest prices to holders of defaulted railroad bonds.

The speakers at the Reform Club meeting next Sunday evening will be Mr. John H. Treat, President of the Club, and Messrs. James Marden, Ransom B. Crook, Samuel Taylor, Benjamin Powell and John H. Webber, members.

Meeting of the Board of Trade at the Common Council room on this Tuesday evening at half-past seven o'clock.

Commodore George H. Preble has been detailed to special duty in this city in collecting material for a history of the navy yard since its organization.

A dispatch from this city to the Boston Post says: "Much to general surprise the Naval Investigating Committee closed its labors here on Saturday afternoon, having been in session but three days, and interviewing in that time less than a dozen witnesses, a majority of whom were naval officers. The investigators have confined their attention chiefly to irregularities which they expected to find in contracts and open purchases of material since 1868. Among the latest witnesses examined was the junior member of the late firm of Trickey & Jewett, whose evidence was confined exclusively to the contracts of Naval Constructor Hichborn, who was summoned to appear before the Board by Speaker Kerr, and who was on the stand Friday from 10 A. M. till 6 P. M. Paymaster Clark was examined the same evening for two hours at the Rockingham House. Both were closely questioned, but as far as known nothing of a damaging nature was gleaned by their testimony. The last witnesses subpœnaed by Acting Sergeant-at-Arms Rowe, of this city, were Chief Engineer David B. Macomb and Naval Constructor Wilson, their examination being comparatively short and generally unimportant, the witnesses being strictly confined to answering previously prepared questions."

Passed Assistant Paymaster Stephen Rand has reported his return home, having been detached from the Kearsarge, Asiatic squadron, and been ordered to settle his accounts.

Schooner Gen. Taylor, Furlong, of Newburyport, while trying to enter this harbor on Friday, struck a rock, which knocked a hole in her bottom and she sunk. She was in ballast. Efforts will be made to raise her.

Officer Smith's bail was on Monday fixed at $1500.

Pretty Book Agent's Gossip.

The card was a delicate pink Bristol board, and on it was the name in neat type, "Laura Langley." Down in one corner were the lines in little letters, agent for "America Illustrated and the Graves of the Presidents." She was a book-agent. She had deep black eyes, large and round, heavy brows, long silken lashes, a wealth of raven hair and nature's tints on her cheeks looked like rose in the snow. When she spoke her red lips parted and showed pretty white teeth. She had a little face and a little round neck; her figure was petite, and her hands small and very interesting. She had the gayest kind of a Cashmere shawl thrown loosely over her shoulders, and when she spoke her eyes seemed to draw three lines under her words, meaning that they should be spelled in the largest kind of capitals. She did not waste a moment after entering the Eagle editorial rooms, but clamped her book right down on the desk, commenced turning over the leaves, and in a wink her little tongue was prattling away the merits and beauties of the book at the rate of speed of a limited mail-train.

"Will you answer me a few questions if a book is purchased?" asked the reporter.

"Yes, if they are of a proper character and do not take up too much time."

"It's a bargain. Then to business. You sell principally to gentlemen, don't you?"

"To gentlemen almost entirely. Gentlemen sell to ladies. An attractive young lady can do very much more with a gentleman than a gentleman can. The funny part of it is, the gentlemen think we do not know them. Many of them put on their sweetest smiles, talk their prettiest, seem wonderfully interested in our histories, ask a hundred questions not at all concerning the book, and seem to think that we are to give them a sweet reply all the time. Oh, we understand our customers, you may rely on it."

"Then the people generally take you as common property, do they?

"Well, you may say they do. The moment we enter any place on business, that moment the gentleman thinks he has a perfect right to say almost anything he pleases that is respectful, and the wider he can divert attention from the subject of book-buying, the better he seems to be pleased. I have no doubt but what bookselling by subscription is really one of the most trying occupations for young ladies to engage in. You must learn, first, never to seem affronted; second, to consider every gentleman a wit and a scholar; third, that he is handsome, and that you feel kindly toward him in particular; you must smile when he smiles and answer all sorts of nonsensical questions, always, however, remembering to be a business woman of the world, respectable, and willing to go to the very outermost limits of decency, to the very borders of racy, worldly dialogue—dialogue that has the smack of the French salon, the piquancy of the grisette, the sparkle of Houssaye, the inferences of Sterne, and all the elements of a talk that is not vulgar or coarse, nor yet chaste, elegant or strictly refined."

"Do you know any ladies who dropped by the wayside in this business."

"Oh, yes. It is like all other occupations, black sheep in every flock. I knew four beautiful young ladies who were canvassing a city in New York State at one time. All four were induced to go to Cuba with four adventurers. They are now leading very fast lives in Havana. There! I have not spoken this much to a gentleman since I'm in this business, and I guess I shall have to go."

The young lady handed the reporter a pen and told him where to write his name on the list with the other subscribers. After that had been done, she looked around for more reporters to conquer, and, finding none at the time, she arranged a flower in her hair, gave her jaunty little hat a touch to one side, folded her books in a paper, and with a pleasant "good day," she softly stepped out of the sanctum.

Depression of Ocean Freights.

At no period during the present generation of business men, probably, has the ocean freighting business been in so depressed and altogether unsatisfactory a condition as it is to-day. The rates of freight to Europe have frequently been lower than those now current, but that was before steam had deprived sails of good return business. The great majority of vessels which now go to Europe are obliged to return in ballast, so that the outward freight must necessarily cover the expenses of the round voyage; and at current rates the managers of American and Provincial vessels are obliged to figure exceeding close to prevent a loss; but the European trade is at least in no worse condition than the other branches. Indeed, the West India and coastwise trades were never before so depressed as they are to-day. As an evidence of this, we have only to mention the fact that vessels have been taken for the North side of Cuba and back at $4 and $4.50 per hogshead for the round, and in at least one or two instances the hitherto unheard-of rate of $3.50 has been accepted for cargoes of 600 hogsheads. There is not only no profit in such business, but it is extremely doubtful if the vessels can escape loss, however economically they may be managed. When it is remembered that $6 and $7 per hogshead was considered only moderately remunerative during the cheap times before the war, the present utterly demoralized condition of this branch of the carrying trade becomes at once apparent. The rates outward to the several West India islands are about on a par with the out and home business. The coastwise trade, too, partakes of the general depression, coal and lumber freights being cheaper than ever before, colliers having this week accepted 70 and 75 cents per ton hence to Boston—and one at 60 cents against $3 and $3.25 within the last two or three years, while the rates from the Georgia yellow pine ports to New York are down to $5 and $5.50, and from Florida to $6 and $7.50. It is almost unnecessary to say that this depression in freights is a consequence of the prostrate condition of commerce the world over, since there cannot, in the very nature of things, be a relaxation of industrial and commercial affairs without seriously interfering with the business of common carriers. A substantial revival of trade and commerce must, therefore, take precedence of any very marked revival of the shipping interests. Ship-owners, however, have the poor consolation that matters cannot possibly be worse than they now are. Meanwhile, ship building, which received something of an impulse from the good business of 1872-3, is again rapidly falling into decay, even though the cost of constructing wooden ships has fallen to about the figures current in ante-bellum times.—New York Shipping List.

—A highly respectable and wealthy farmer in Connecticut gives the following as his own experience: "When I first came here to settle about forty years ago, I told my wife I wanted to be rich. She said she did not want to be rich—all she wanted was enough to make her comfortable. I went to work and cleared up my land. I've worked hard ever since, and get rich—as rich as I want to be. Most of my children have settled about me, and they have all got farms—and my wife ain't comfortable yet."

—A large river has been discovered in New Guinea which is thought to be navigable for over one hundred miles.

—In Canon City, Col., a man can't take a couple of broken chairs to the cabinet-shop for repairs without hearing such impatientness as, "Hit you with a chair, did she?"

—A romantic young girl of Christian County, Kentucky, clipped off her brown curls, dressed in boy's clothes, and clandestinely started for the Black Hills on foot. On the first night out that Indian tornado found her on a mud road, and rolled her around for about a quarter of a mile. She returned home.

—In the zoological gallery of Dr. Cunningham, at Carthage, Mo., may be seen the greatest native American wonder extant—a snake twenty-seven feet, eight inches in length, and seventeen inches in circumference, resembling in many particulars the tiger python of Africa. When taken it weighed 300 pounds.

—A professor, a teacher of German, was once very much disturbed by an unruly benchful of juniors. At last, in his despair, he exclaimed, "That bench will leave the room and will stay outside." Whereupon the young rascals carried out the bench and left it outside, and blandly returned to other seats. "No, no," said the professor, "I do not mean that, I mean the young men will go out and the bench will return." So the young men brought back the bench and sat on it, as though this was all that could reasonably be expected of them.

—The story has recently come to light that some years ago one of the king of Prussia's soldiers stole out of a Catholic church the jewels that adorned a Madonna. He owned possession, but denied the theft, saying that the Madonna had given them to him. The king, therefore, sent for some Romish priests, and asked them if there were anything impossible for a Madonna. They were shocked at the question, and affirmed her omnipotence. "In that case," replied the king, "I cannot condemn the soldier, but I will do something else. I will forbid him ever to receive any more presents from a Madonna."

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "worse than worthless." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have explains, stimulates and debauchs the intellect, unfits for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to this source we can only guess or at most know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must in time amount to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says:—In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be made, and it is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $5.00.

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, at the list price of which is $7.00. Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $14.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five spicy, did series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 4,000 book pages costing $80.00!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876 and postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon called upon the agent for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefited by the use. Some of them were so astonishing,. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 5, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills recommended in the Manchester Mirror, and concluded to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, Jr.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I know to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can say anything. In one of my testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months together to do any work, and at times even the poor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine and doctors' bills, and have concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist, and thought I would try just what I needed, and I rest to you last April for a package of Pills. I have taken about a dozen and I am a new person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at my rapid gain, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your Pills. I told her I would take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think the world is a blessing to thousands, and who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00; please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Rockdale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

WAR CLAIMS.

The famous French spoliation claims, which have so long been hair-looms in many New England families, are in a fair way to be overshadowed in romantic interest by the war claims now coming up to Congress from all parts of the country. Naturally, the greater part of these are from the South, where the fight was the thickest. Encouraged by the audacity of these, however, a large number of Northern claimants have prepared their "papers," and are now anxiously waiting to see what Congress will do for them. Thus, the First National Bank of St. Albans, Vt., asks for twenty-eight thousand dollars to cover losses incurred by the "St. Albans raid" of 1864. With admirable assurance, a Californian demands one hundred and twenty-two thousand dollars for the use and damage of a wharf at San Diego "by the army," in 1861. If "the Army," had entirely consumed his wharf, this man's bill would be an immodcrate one. Then, there are claims in which the damage is direct, but ths responsibility of the United States is merely constructive. These usually come from the South, and one peculiarity of this class is that the claimants do not pretend to have been loyal to the United States Government during the rebellion. For example:

One Harrison Gill avers that he owned twelve cottages at Olympia, Springs, Ky., and that Confederate troops, under Gen. Humphrey Marshall, burned them down because they had been used for hospital and camp purposes by the Union forces. Therefore, he wants reimbursement to the amount of seventy-seven hundred dollars. Tarrance Kirby, of Tennessee, prays for one hundred and fifty dollars to pay him for a certain bay mare taken from him by Lieut. Broderson, of the One Hundred and Sixth Ohio. If the Lieutenant yet has that mare, perhaps he would be willing to send it to the Senate, where Mr. Kirby is, and thus enable that body to square accounts. The Army seems to have been in the practice of taking all sorts of things when in the South. Thus Dr. J. J. Gibson, of Corinth, Miss., claims nineteen hundred dollars for personal property, including obstetrical instruments, "taken for the use of the Army;" and Christopher Stucke asks two thousand dollars for property destroyed at Port Barrow, to give range to the artillery of a fort. Among the objects so destroyed were one hundred and fifty chickens, valued at seventy-five dollars, a chicken-coop, valued at twenty, and a keg of grease worth twelve dollars. It must be evident to the meanest comprehension that one hundred and fifty chickens, of the long-legged or Shanghai variety, chasing grasshoppers across an artillery range, would baffle the artillerists and prolong the war. Yet Senator Cockrell, himself an Ex-Confederate soldier, actually reported that Stucke's keg of grease, chickens and coop were left undefensele by the laws of war.

Gen. Gideon J. Pillow's mules constitute a branch of this fruitful subject which is unique and separate. These animals, which the General says were so fine that they commanded popular attention when seen on the road, were two hundred and thirty-five in number. They were seized and put into the Quartermaster's service, in 1862, when Gen. Curtis took possession of the country about Helena, Ark. No libel, or other judicial proceedings, were ever had against these noble beasts. While General Pillow was away from home, fighting for the Confederacy, they were simply seized —"gobbled" is the military phrase, we believe. The war over, the General, with a pardon in his pocket, set out in search of his mules. He found them, and applied for their restoration; and, after waiting until his application had ground its way through several departments of the Government, he was relieved to find that there was no law of the Government under which the mules could have been forfeited. Unhappily, however, it also appears that there was no law of the Government under which the mules could be restored. Therefore, he appeals to Congress. And while he is about it, Gen. Pillow desires to mention another little matter. While he was in command at Memphis, then a Confederate stronghold, he established works "to manufacture and alter guns, and to fabricate sabres." Without coal, these works were useless, and he makes an argument to show how imperative was the necessity which compelled him to seize a considerable quantity of that fuel, belonging to a citizen of Pittsburg. After the war, while General Pillow was hunting up his lost mules, he was called into court to defend himself against a suit brought by the Pittsburg coal owner. His defence was that he, Pillow, represented in 1861 the sovereign State of Tennessee, and that that State, which had been recognized as a belligerent, was responsible for the coal. The court did not take this view of the case. No court—and it has gone from one to another—can be induced to see it in that light. Consequently, the Gen. has applied to the Tennessee legislature for redress. It is hardly necessary to say that that body does not pretend that Tennessee ever was a belligerent, or that the State is responsible for fuel used in Confederate workshops during the war. Two Governors of Tennessee, says the General, have been severally applied to, but, though they treated Pillow with courtesy, they "proposed no action for relief." Bereft of his mules, and with "a judgment ranging from fifty thousand to one hundred thousand dollars" hanging over him, the General pleads that as he is "the only Major General of the regular army who served in the Mexican war who still survives," a magnanimous and generous country should do something for him.

Now this is a good case. It is better than many which come before Congress. For example, the widow of a steamboat owner wants $10,000, because, as she says, her husband destroyed his vessel to prevent its load of ammunition from reaching Van Dorn when he was about to fight the battle of Pea Ridge. It is certainly a much more striking proposition to pay Pillow for mules taken to haul Union supplies, which he would have used to haul Confederate supplies, than to pay for the destruction of property which might have fallen into rebel hands. If Congress pays for Christopher Stucke's tall chickens which interfered with Union gun-ranges at Port Barrow, shall it not reimburse "the only surviving Major General of the regular Army who served in Mexico" for coal used for the fabrication of sabres for the Confederacy, and which he now has to pay for?

The Mud Throwers.

The New York Tribune—certainly no friend to the administration or the republican party,—in a recent issue says:

"It is not difficult to understand why the exposure campaign has failed to produce the expected result. It has been fought too recklessly. The Washington offices of the democratic newspaper have been converted into scandal bureaus, where every wild and improbable story of corruption has been picked up, and expanded, and embelished, and then sent forth for the good of the party. There has been little or no discrimination in the use of material. False charges and true, fact and suspicion, rumors and affidavits, have been treated with equal consideration. Because the Secretary of War has been detected in taking a bribe, it is confidently alleged that the whole department is a nest of corruption, and some of the party organs have even called upon the entire Cabinet to resign. Every morning we have been warned to look for a fresh explosion before night; the Secretary of the Navy was to be caught levying blackmail; the President was to be found in the real-estate pool; all the best known ladies in the White House circle were to be detected selling offices and pushing fradulent claims. Few of these evil predictions have been fulfilled, and the failure has injured the party which made them in two ways; first, it has brought on the usual reaction which follows a hasty and unreasonable excitement of popular feeling; and secondly, it has given birth to a suspicion in many cases that the democrats are not pressing the investigations properly because they have come upon the traces of democratic Congressmen in the promised scandals."

The last cock-and-bull stories were about Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Boutwell, and Secretary Bristow. Concerning Mr. Boutwell we had the extremely silly story that he in 1872, when Secretary of the Treasury, requested a contribution of $60,000 from Henry Clews to carry the election in Pennsylvania, promising secret information by which he could reimburse himself in the Stock Exchange.—a most ridiculous and malicious falsehood, of course known to be such by its authors, and promptly proved to be such by Messrs. Clews and Boutwell. This story was traced to that model reformer, Tilden, of New York. Secretary Bristow was charged with corrupt practices in a mule case in which he was engaged against the government, before taking office; but the "mule fraud" didn't live a day, as there was no fraud or underhand proceeding anywhere in the case, as was easily proved in an hour.

The democratic investigations, so far, have resulted in the ruin of a man who was never a prominent republican, and the disgrace of his wife; in the ruin of a prominent democratic leader's presidential aspirations,—for Pendleton is "gone up" as a presidential candidate—went up on the Kentucky Central Railroad; and in convincing the public that Clymer, the democratic chairman of the investigating committee, who felt so badly when exposing Belknap's guilt in the House at just the right time (it was hoped) to influence the New Hampshire election, is very decidedly not anxious to have Pendleton's conduct or his own too impertinently inquired into. The Traveller's Washington correspondent, on the 18th, asserted that Mr. Clymer knew the story about the payment of $30,000 to Mrs. Bowers by Pendleton, through other persons, full two week ago, and yet failed to try and ascertain the facts; and the same authority, on Monday, referring to Marsh's return, said "Pendleton's friends especially seem ill at case, and they well know that if Marsh goes on the stand he will swear a clear case against 'Gentleman George.'"

The miserable trimming and indecision of the democratic war-investigating committee are having their legitimate effect; people not only believe the leaders of that committee no better than they should be, but begin to disbelieve the extremity of Belknap's guilt even in spite of his confession. The Traveller's Washington dispatch says: "The present week will undoubtedly be an exciting one in the Belknap matter. There is marked reaction in public opinion here regarding Belknap's guilt, and a growing impression that the Ex-Secretary is the victim of a gigantic conspiracy on the part of Clymer and his democratic associates, all of which will come out in due time. Ten days ago not one in ten believed Belknap innocent; now, not one in five believes him guilty of taking the money sent by Marsh, as knowing from what source it came." So much has been promised and so little brought out by these democratic committees, and so utterly reckless have the democratic papers been in making the most outrageous charges without a particle of proof to support them, that a real discovery of corruption would now need strong corroborating evidence before anybody would believe a discovery had been made. In their zeal they overloaded the gun, and it has kicked.

Didn't Know 'Em.

A special correspondent writing from New York, under date of March 20, says: Four democratic voters at the recent New Hampshire election passed through this city on Friday last, en route for Baltimore. On reaching Jersey City they presented at the office of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company certificates for return passage from the Democratic State Central Committee of New Hampshire. They were immediately informed that the aforesaid committee had no credit with the company. After being convinced that they were among the first victims of repudiation, and expressing in strong idiom their opinion of democratic tendencies and democratic managers, they concluded to adopt the cheap method of paying as they went and each contributed $4.20 as the price of wisdom and better citizenship hereafter. Democratic committees have been famous for depleting their treasuries, but we should have supposed with all their experience in the past and under the ordinary impulses of humanity, they would have left $16.80 for those trusting and faithful followers, if they ever expected to use them again—; but alas! had we so supposed, we should have been mistaken.

News and Notes.

Charleston, S. C., had a $500,000 fire on Monday.

Cutting down the President's salary to really less than half the value of money paid to Washington, Adams, or Jefferson, when the nation was poor, feeble, and undeveloped, is small business. Either the Senators have acted the part of demagogues, or they are afraid of the clamor of demagogues.—Chicago Tribune.

It is the ancient Allen now—him of the fog horn voice, and dry-nurse of the Ohio rag-baby—who is called to account in court by a suit, the allegations of which, if proved, will send him to join George Pendleton. The suit is brought in the United States Court to eject Allen from his famous farm at Fruit Hill, on the ground that he became possessed of it by causing the will of his father-in-law, ex-Governor Duncan McArthur of Ohio, to be set aside in fraud of the rights of minor heirs, whereby the property went to Allen's wife.—Chicago Tribune.

Lorenzo P. Dunklee, member-elect of the Nashua common council from ward two, had his right hand blown off by the explosion of an old charge he was taking out of a rock, Monday afternoon. Mr. Dunklee's face was filled with powder, and he will probably lose the sight of one eye. His brother-in-law, who was working with him, was badly burned and had the fingers of one hand torn to shreds.

The barn of James H. Blake, foreman of the jury in the La Page trial, was set on fire Saturday night, and with his house burned to the ground. It is supposed to have been set by some of La Page's friends.

Samuel H. Stevens, a prominent citizen and formerly a member of the Bar, died suddenly Sunday night of heart disease, at his house on State street, Concord. He was seventy-three years old and leaves a family.

To-day, Wednesday, Mr. and Mrs. Marsh are expected to arrive in Washington. It is to be said first of all that their return is due to the action of President Grant. Whatever may result, it has been the government which has brought them back, and to this extent the evidence goes that it is desirous of ascertaining the truth and the whole truth in regard to any corruption as to which they can testify. In the meantime rumors of all sorts, and implicating officials in both parties are rife.

Roberts, ex-President of Liberia, died at Monrovia, the 25th of February, and was buried with military honors the next day.

It is feared that the British ship Lake St. Clair, from New York, January 19th, for Glasgow, and the British barque Walten, from New York, January 20th, for London, have been lost with all on board.

It is estimated that the Turkish losses in Herzegovina during the insurrection have been not less than 35,000 men.

Mr. Peters, of Mendon, Vt., an old man of 84 years, fell dead in his dooryard on Monday of last week, after a vain effort to separate his son and another man who were engaged in a drunken quarrel. Over excitement was doubtless the cause.

Martin Kane, of Bellows Falls, Vt., who jumped from the train on the Cheshire Railroad while returning from Walpole, in this State, on election day, died on Saturday evening from the injuries he received.

Before the Police Court at Manchester, Monday, Charles H. Vinal, Charles Williams and George Fenton, Boston parties, were bound over to the Circuit Court in the sum of $500 each, on the charge of being pickpockets.

The Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts has overruled the exceptions in the case of Thomas W. Piper, convicted of the murder of Mabel H. Young in the belfry of the Warren avenue Baptist church in Boston, and judgment is to be pronounced on the verdict.

The Elmville woolen mill, near Providence, R. I., was burned on Saturday night. Loss $200,000. Four tenements were also burned. One hundred and twenty persons are thrown out of employment. One fireman was badly injured.

The democratic papers have had a vast deal to say about "the administration" having driven Marsh to Canada by ordering his prosecution,—which was never ordered; on the contrary, when the House takes steps to have Marsh promised immunity if he will come back and testify, it comes out that "the administration" has already done it, a week before being asked. Clymer, Pendleton & Co. are the parties who don't want Marsh to return.

That wonderfully preserved and persistent old lady, Mrs. Myra Clark Gaines, has gained a point in her suit which involves the title to property in New Orleans valued at one million dollars. The Supreme Court of the United States on Monday rendered a decision reversing the order of the Court below, by which she was defeated.

"Perley" telegraphed to the Boston Journal, Sunday night: It is reported to-night that evidence will be here in a day or two, showing that a prominent democratic Senator secured his election by purchasing his competitor for democratic support, who handsomely withdrew and gave him a clear field. This will lead to a new class of investigations, which will show that the democratic party is not very pure after all.

Memphis, Tenn., had the heaviest snowstorm on record, Monday. Ten inches of snow fell.

A schooner went ashore on Sandy Hook, Monday afternoon. One man was seen in the rigging, and a life boat started for the wreck at about dark. The fate of the crew and the schooner's name are unknown.

THE SUCCESSFUL PHYSICIAN.

This is probably no man to whom the community owe so much as to the honest, fair-spoken physician, who does his actual duty both to himself and to his patients. Really skillful physicians are not so numerous that their virtues need no mention, and hence the advertisement of Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, may well claim the reader's attention. Dr. Pierce is a type of a class of men who obtain success by careful and well-directed effort, not attempting too much, or creating false ideas as to ability. The only reliable physician in these days of complicated disorders and high-pressure living is the "Specialist," the man who understands his one branch of the business. Such in his line is Dr. Pierce. For the benefit of his readers he has written a "Common Sense Medical Adviser," which is well worth reading by those who need such a work. With strict business honor, high professional skill, reasonable fees, and a large corps of competent assistants, Dr. Pierce will doubtless make his name familiar as "household words."

The Only Remedy.

Those who suffer from foul breath are open to the charge of carelessness. It will preserve and keep the teeth white, and the breath pure and sweet.

The Only Way to Conquer Dyspepsia.

It is perfectly preposterous to introduce pepsin and other artificial solvents into the stomach in the expectation that they will assist digestion by acting on the food itself. They will not. Nor is it possible thus to overcome dyspepsia. The only way to conquer that disorder, and prevent the numerous diseases and disabilities which it assuredly provokes, is to renew the activity of gastric action by strengthening the stomach. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters eradicates the most inveterate forms of indigestion by restoring vitality to the alimentary organs and those which are tributary to them. The liver, the bowels, the kidneys and the nerves, no less than the stomach, experience the invigorative effects of that standard tonic, which possesses alterative properties that greatly enhance its beneficial influence, and give a permanence to its effects which they would not otherwise possess.

DR. DUDLEY already has a fine and rapidly increasing practice in Salem, and consents to come here on trial for a year, (to be in Portsmouth three days of each week, and three days in Salem), at my earnest solicitation, backed by the free gift of my practice.

I could have sold my practice with a recommendation, for a large sum, but feeling the kindness and confidence with which I have been treated, I have chosen, nay, felt it impossible to do otherwise than sink private consideration of profit for the good of my patients.

If DR. DUDLEY is appreciated at his true worth by the people of Portsmouth, he can, through the confidence extended to him, be made to relinquish his practice in Salem, and settle here permanently. Wrecks---Lives Lost:

At about 2 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, a brig went ashore on the sea side of Gerrish's island, and all hands except the mate were lost, he being rescued in a very exhausted condition by a Mr. Seawards of Kittery Point, at low tide, by which time the vessel was nearly broken up and her cargo of rum and molasses scattered along the beach. Our informant did not learn the brig's name. Just before the brig struck, her mate noticed an unknown schooner near by, standing to the eastward in the endeavor to keep off shore; but with the wind and sea then going she could not possibly have gone far, and as nothing has been seen or heard of her since there is grave reason to fear she too is lost.

Six schooners laying at anchor in the lower harbor were driven ashore, and scattered along from Fort McClary to Clark's island. How badly they are damaged could not be learned. One schooner cut away her masts to keep from going ashore, but went ashore after all on Clark's island, where she remained at nightfall in a very precarious situation, and will possibly be a total loss, she being heavily loaded. The sea in the lower harbor was very heavy.

The Line Gale.

A heavy fall of snow commenced at about 8 o'clock Monday evening, and kept at it until four o'clock next morning, when it turned to a heavy rain, the wind blowing a furious gale throughout. Not long after noon on Friday the wind fell to a moderate breeze and the rain held up, but the walking still remained execrable, and there was neither sleighing nor wheeling in the streets. We have not heard of any great damage done by the gale in this city; plenty of limbs were twisted from shade trees about the city, a portion of the battlement-roof on the Concord depot was blown down, and the roof of Mr. Geo. Wendell's new blacksmith shop on Bow street was somewhat damaged; some zinc was torn from the ridgepole of the North Church, chimneys knocked off Ward's distillery at Christian Shore and a dwelling on Bridge street, and other roofs and chimneys in different parts of the city slightly damaged.

Got 'Em.

Charles H. Vinal, Charles Williams and Charles H. Fenton, three professional thieves who were around this city about the first of February and closely watched by the police, have at last come to grief. Vinal and Williams were arraigned at Manchester on Monday, on the charge of picking the pocket of Moses Sawyer, a Quaker of North Weare, at the depot in this city on the 11th day of February, and were held in the sum of five hundred dollars each for their appearance at the Circuit Court to be holden at Exeter on the second Tuesday of April, and in default of bail were committed to jail. Fenton was held in the same sum for an attempt to rob Mrs. Norris of Manchester.

A Busy Place.

The steam saw and planing mill of Mr. Daniel Mason on Green street, near the Eastern depot in this city, is usually a noisy and busy scene of industry, the like of which does not exist elsewhere within a dozen miles of us. Here are rotary, circular and jig saws, three planing machines, a patent shingle sawing machine, turning lathes, etc.,—affording good facilities for transforming a forest into lumber for most of the needs of a city, from the making of a box up to the building of a house. A great accommodation for farmers and others in this vicinity owning wood lots, is the large and powerful rotary saw, for sawing out timber or boards; and although the lack of snow the present winter has not been favorable for moving logs, quite an amount of business has been done in the way of getting out house frames and boarding, and a goodly pile of logs yet remain ready for the teeth of the insatiable saw. A chance call at the mill found several teams unloading logs or reloading the same after being squared into timber or sliced into boards; while some of the workmen were running the saws, others bundling shingles, getting out window sashes, etc. The more such industry and enterprise among us, the better for all.

Jottings.

Barnabee comes on Saturday next, March 25, bringing with him Miss Persis Bell, the talented young lady violinist, and other popular artists. See advertisement.

Mr. W. W. Henderson is selling off at auction the goods in his store, Nos. 3 and 6 Daniel street. He is going to Connecticut to go into business there, and will keep up the auction until every article is disposed of.

John R. Poor, Esq., proprietor of the major part of Star island, at the Shoals, sends Mr. Levi W. Downs to represent him in the New Hampshire legislature this year. The town officers are—moderator, John R. Poor; town clerk, John A. Poor; selectmen, Reuben Puffer (John R. Poor's boss,) —Dame (John R. Poor's blacksmith,) D. E. Poor. There is never any trouble over the Star island checklist, the proprietor, his sons and workmen filling all the offices and casting nearly all the votes. The vote of the town at the last election was, democratic, 12; republican, 0; democratic majority, 12.

We have received the April number of the Folio, which contains besides the usual amount of miscellaneous and musical reading matter, nine selections of music, among which are those famous revival songs of Moody and Sankey, "Ninety and Nine," "Hold the Fort" and "I am so glad that Jesus loves me," either of which is worth the price of the number. The Folio is published by White, Smith & Co., 516 Washington street, Boston.

Mr. W. W. Jackson, who has spoken in the interest of temperance at Kittery Point, Newcastle and other places in this vicinity, on Wednesday evening lectured upon temperance before the Reform Club of East Gloucester, Mass. About twenty persons signed the pledge.

Our respected fellow-citizen, Dr. A. P. Stevens, left for California on Tuesday, in search of a climate where he can regain his health. Luck go with him.

The Eastern Railroad investigation by the Massachusetts legislature has developed an over-issue of Portsmouth, Great Falls & Conway Railroad bonds to the amount of $33,000. These bonds are held by a gentleman of this city as a pledge for something.

"Do you think the proposed Home for Old Ladies will be built?" enquired one interested and well-wishing friend, of another, a day or two since. "Yes, indeed I do," was the reply. "Who is going to furnish the money?" "O, the Lord and Mr. Loyne," was the answer; "don't you believe they can do it?" The inquirer, being a Christian believer, could not doubt the success of such a combination. Mr. Loyne was somehow reported to be dead in the Boston papers the other day; but he is really about the liveliest man in town—and long may he wave, but never waver in his good efforts.

At the annual town meeting in Kittery, holden on Monday, the republican ticket was elected as follows: Town clerk, Dennis M. Shapleigh; selectmen, assessors, and overseers of the poor, Samuel Fernald, James R. Philbrick, Jesse E. Frisbee; town agent, Moses A. Safford; superintending school committee, James H. Rowell; town treasurer, Daniel A. Hill; health officer, Mark F. Wentworth; auditors, John Wentworth, Edward F. Safford, William M. Otis; constables, Daniel H. Nason, Joseph C. Remick, John E. Tobey, Charles H. Tucker, John H. Lambert.

The town of York on Monday chose the following-named persons as officers for the ensuing year: clerk, Nathaniel G. Marshall; selectmen and assessors, James A. Bragdon,, Josiah D. Bragdon, Almon H. Merron; treasurer, collector of taxes, and constable, George F. Plaisted; agent, Josiah D. Bragdon; overseers of poor, Theodore Weare, Jr., Eastman Hutchins, Samuel Sedgley; supt. sch. com., Henry Stetson; auditor, G. W. S. Putnam.

Victor Hugo's Devil-Fish.

The octopus or poulpe is a cephalopod mollusk, having a round purse-like body, and eight arms united at the base by a web, by opening and shutting which it swims backward, after the manner of the jelly-fishes. Each arm has a double alternate series of suckers, by which they seize their prey, and moor themselves to submarine objects. They are solitary, active, and voracious, seeking their food chiefly at night. They are the polypi of Homer and Aristotle. The common poulpe of the European seas has a body about as large as the clenched fist, with the arms expanding three or four feet. In tropical America they grow very large; one was found dead on the beach at Nassau, Bahamas, ten feet long, each arm measuring more than five feet, and estimated to weigh about 250 lbs; and they were believed to exist there even larger than this. In cold waters they are small, and not to be feared by man; but in the tropics, as on the coast of Brazil, the large species are very powerful and dangerous. The common poulpe of the French coast has given rise to the mythical "devil-fish" introduced by Victor Hugo in the "Toilers of the Sea." The novelist has mixed up polypi and poulpe, misled by the name given by Aristotle, and thus manufacturing an impossible creature. —Appleton's American Cyclopedia.

—Many a lady in Washington has come to want—come to want diamond earrings.

—Howard M. Dow has published a new song called "I cannot always trace the way." It should be a temperance piece.

—The chaplain of a workhouse in the suburbs of London has resigned because the inmates of the house were "forever singing the Moody and Sankey hymns."

—"Do they ring two bells for school?" asked a gentleman of his ten year-old daughter, who attends a select institution for young ladies. "No papa," she replied, "they ring one bell twice."

—The "Cabinet ladies" had quite a discussion when Senator Christiancy married the Treasury clerk, whether they ought to recognize her, and Mrs. Belknap was especially bent on an edict of exclusion. But Mrs. Fish and the other wives of Cabinet Ministers have called on Mrs. Christiancy, and she doesn't care about receiving a visit from Mrs. Belknap.

—Lamenting the corrupting extravagance of the times, the St. Louis Globe says: There is no proper-minded American who does not reject with scorn a ten-cent cigar or a fifteen-cent drink of whisky, proudly buying the same cigar out of another box for fifteen cents, and paying twenty cents for the same whisky in another bottle. No wonder the bar-keepers wear faces as grave as those of so many Roman augurs.

—At the Tom Thumb entertainment recently, several children from three to ten years of age, were called to the platform to stand by the side of Miss Minnie Warren, a young lady of twenty-six. All of the children were taller than the little lady, who received her baby friends most graciously, and who on parting with them kissed the girls kindly, and offered to kiss the boys. The first boy took the kiss rather shyly, and the bad boys in the audience laughed. The merriment demoralized the ether boys on the stage, and they rebelled. The manager said to a ten-year old boy, "What is the matter, sir? Did you never kiss a lady?" The boy, who may yet be a clergyman, turned scarlet, and actually denied that he had ever done such a thing in his life, and was ungallant enough to turn from Miss Minnie, and run to his mother.—N. O. Republican.

—In Father Hogan's sermon at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, on a recent Sunday morning, on the duty of faithfully observing the sacrament of confession, he narrated the incident of a woman who was confessing to a priest on her deathbed. A companion of the priest stood apart in the room while the confession was being heard. Suddenly this companion saw a black hand pressing the throat of the woman. He did not relate the incident to the confessor until both left the house. The priest returned, but the woman was dead. Her spirit afterward appeared and informed him that she had concealed one sin at confession during her whole life, hoping to tell it at the last moment. When that time came the devil got the better of her and she was unable to comply with her good intention. The result followed that she was condemned to eternal punishment.

Hell Gate.

Very considerable interest is felt in the Governmental procedure at Hell Gate, and in the great explosion looked for on or about the 4th of July. As previously described, the whole of the rock roofing underneath the body of water is honeycombed with holes, in which are driven wooden plugs, to be replaced at the proper time by explosive filled cans. As soon as the great work of placing in each of these 6,000 drill holes its charge of ten pounds of the explosive already described has been completed, and the battery wires are attached, the water from the river will be let into the shaft to fill the entire works, and the charges will be fired, whether that time comes on the 4th of July or any other day. Delays in such operations are very dangerous, for various reasons. Very probably, if no unforeseen accident occurs, the explosion will take place in June, but nobody need lie awake at nights dreading its coming as a surprise, for two or three weeks' notice will be given of the time set for it.

No little curiosity and even apprehension exists in the public mind respecting the effect of the explosion of such an enormous mass of nitro-glycerine. Some experiments made with a view of ascertaining something of the probabilities of such an event encourage the belief that the results on the adjacent shores, and even upon vessels in the water at a little distance from the explosion, will not be serious. The largest charge of nitro-glycerine fired in this vicinity, and probably one of the largest ever exploded, was used in the demolition of the obstruction known as Wey's reef, about a year and a half ago. Three hundred pounds were set off at once on that occasion. Houses on the line of stratification of the rock, as much as two and even three hundred yards distant, were considerably shaken, and a great commotion was caused in the water. But it is not thought that the firing of the 60,000 pounds will do much if any more.

All explosive expend themselves in the line of least resistance, and this in the instance now under consideration, will be toward the surface of the river. All the galleries being tamped with water, and the rock beneath them being solid to an indefinite depth, the line of least resistance will be through about six feet of rock, on an average, with a superimposed mass of water, averaging about thirteen feet in depth over the works at high tide. Technically, the shock is proportional to the cube of the line of least resistance. Stones will, without doubt, be hurled out of the water at a distance of one or two hundred feet, but the greatest force exerted will be upward, and the area over which they will spread will not be great.—N. Y. Star.

—A California hunter who went ten miles to where game was plenty, and then found that he had brought a box of pills instead of percussion caps, returned home in disgust.

—In the olden days, at the time Miss Patterson married Prince Jerome Bonaparte, a gentleman who was at the wedding said, "All the clothes she had on I could have put into my waistcoat pocket."

READING FOR CHILDREN

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that the schools of the country are "rapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

on this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debauches the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commanding a wider circle of resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for the young cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $5.00.

Or, for $4.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is $7.00. Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid serials, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 6,000 book pages costing $30.00!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876 sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

Ten years ago Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. established their advertising agency in New York City. Five years ago they absorbed the business conducted by Mr. John Hooper, who was the first to go into this kind of enterprise. Now they have the satisfaction of controlling the most extensive and complete advertising connection which has never been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. They have succeeded in working down a complex business into so thoroughly a systematic method that no change in the newspaper system of America can escape notice, while the widest information upon all topics interesting to advertisers is placed readily at the disposal of the public.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household—to the children by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in endless variety, to the provident matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its tasteful designs for embroidered slippers and innumerous dressing-gowns. MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 5, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past I have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefitted by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages.

SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. It has taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials one said they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 10, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer the rest of my life. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Congregationalist. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I took them I could not walk like a person. Can sleep well nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, but think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend she shall take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane---Health much Better at 64 than 44---Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. Truly, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the luxury trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration now drawing to a close. Its course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are not wanting signs that the days of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are hopes that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim on the great Exhibition at Philadelphia, which will alone be worth the subscription price. They will be appropriately called

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent, and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

Daily Chronicle.

THURSDAY, MARCH 23, 1876.

Blaine and Bristow.

When first Ex-Speaker Blaine made his successful onslaught on the amnesty bill and threw the confederates in the National House of Representatives into disorder, confusion and dismay, we expressed the conviction that New Hampshire republicans had the best of reasons for thanking him for forcing the democratic leaders to reveal their most inward feelings, disguised as they had been under a torrent of centennial "gush" that was demoralizing in the extreme to the liberties of the country and the ascendancy of straightforward and manly loyalty in the councils of the Nation. The campaign just closed, so conclusive in its results and so exhaustive in its canvass of debate, strengthens our opinions and reveals the utter weakness of the democracy when as incisive leadership lays bare its hidden intentions, anticipations and desires. Following the grand victory of the 14th of March, several republican papers in this State have deemed it proper to present their views of the Presidential candidacy, naming Secretary Bristow as their choice. If any excuse were needed, this alone would be sufficient cause for a full discussion of the question.

To-day, the two most prominent candidates before the people for the republican nomination are Messrs. Blaine and Bristow, and in New Hampshire while there seems to be a predominant feeling favoring the former, it is safe to say that the second choice of the friends of Mr. Blaine is Mr. Bristow, and the second choice of the Bristow men is Mr. Blaine. New Hampshire has been the first battle ground of the Centennial year, and the victory is a most signal one, far-reaching in its effects, and having a significance beyond the ordinary triumphs of former years. The republican position on State issues was well defined and too impregnable to be forced by the democracy, but with the desperate attempts of the latter to hold the vantage ground that the carelessness and indifference of republicans gave them in 1874, the result would have been more than doubtful without the additional question which through the instrumentality of Mr. Blaine became most opportunely an element of consideration and discussion. The revelations of the Congressional debates awoke the republicans to the magnitude of the danger threatening a restoration of impenitent rebels to power. On the stump and in the press, republican orators and writers made it a telling issue, bringing back to their ranks hitherto faltering associates who had for one cause and another held aloof from active campaign duty, and securing quite a large percentage of democrats who had not followed their party into the rebel camp in 1861 and were not inclined to do so fifteen years later.

So potent were the words of republican speakers on the national issues involved that large and enthusiastic audiences greeted them in every instance, and the most radical appeals were the most readily applauded. The danger to republican institutions in this country has been in a feeling of security that was founded on concealment of the animus of that portion of the democratic party which controls its organization. Ex-Speaker Blaine was in a position to expose it, and wielding the scalpel most dexterously laid every pulsation of the disturbing element open to mortal vision. If there is a republican in the Nation who does not thank him for it, that republican does not reside in New Hampshire. It was a mistaken position for him to assume, or it was a most fortunate one—and the result has shown that by no means was it a mistake. New Hampshire has most emphatically settled all doubts in the matter.

Our friends who through the newspapers advocate the candidacy of Secretary Bristow forget that he has no claim to superiority in the fact that he executes his duty. The Secretary's prominence comes from the fact that he is a member of the Cabinet, and has vigorously pursued the prosecution of rogues. That is well. It is just the business he was selected and expected to perform. Contrasted with the public record of Mr. Blaine, extending over a score of years, there is nothing of superiority of purpose, of ability or of capacity to claim for Mr. Bristow. His enthusiastic advocates exclaim with relish: "He is faithful, tried and true, and is no politician." Granted. But it occurs to us to reply that Gen. Grant is no politician, and the chief mistakes of his administration have been from this cause alone. A public man who is not bred in the school of politics cannot expect to become all at once a statesman. A thorough knowledge of the politics of the country is but an acquaintance with the necessities and desires of the people. Mr. Blaine certainly has struck the popular chord by his course in Congress. No one doubts his ability and faithfulness. There are elements in his composition which inspire admiration, for his courage and keenness of perception. With a thorough and intimate acquaintance with the views of prominent men in every section of New Hampshire, we unhesitatingly declare that no man can arouse more enthusiasm at this time in the State than the Ex-Speaker. New England has had in training for the Presidency a candidate who has been capable in every emergency, and who has steadily arisen to the front rank while the shadow of forgetfulness has settled down over every rival who has in the past disputed his leadership on the floor of Congress. Indomitable perseverance and a record unimpeachable have brought him into the front rank of Presidential candidates, and New England should have pride enough to appear in solid front at the National convention next June and present his name for the Presidency. There is no question but that a large majority of the delegates will do so, nor, should Secretary Bristow be the nominee, that an enthusiastic support would be given the vigorous Secretary by those who now prefer the Ex-Speaker. As the country extends its growth of population West, the opportunities for a President from the East will grow less; and now that so eligible a candidate as Mr. Blaine is named, the great importance of an undivided support from his friends and neighbors cannot be overestimated. That he is not the choice of an element existing in a few localities, and of which the Springfield Republican and Boston Herald are the exponents and representatives, is far more to his credit. Their advocacy of Secretary Bristow would cease and they would oppose him with the same alacrity displayed at present in his support, could they but rejuvenate Charles Francis Adams or some classical antediluvian of elegance of manner, scholarly attainments and little practical experience who would make an unapproachable figure-head of the Republic—only this and nothing more.

Mr. Blaine has performed his whole duty in an extended public service as old as the party he leads. With him success would be alike a duty and a foregone conclusion. He has no superior as an organizer of victory, and the tact and boldness with which he has wrested the leadership from the democratic majority on the floor of the House is proof of his great power and unerring sagacity. We believe the ticket which would command the most enthusiastic support in the Presidential campaign to be BLAINE & BRISTOW, and there is nothing detrimental to the dignity or self-respect of the noble Secretary of the Treasury in his acceptance of the second position, which Henry Wilson not only filled but sought, after a score of years' service honorable from the commencement to the close.

What Do They Fear?

The strange conduct of Heister Clymer is lending every assistance in his power to speed the flight of the witness Marsh to Canada, before firing off the Belknap gun in the House, has not yet been satisfactorily explained by the democrats; neither do they offer any satisfactory reason for the sudden loss of interest in investigations by the Clymer committee, as soon as Belknap was exposed. The republicans find no difficulty in accounting for all the queer performances of the democratic investigators; they simply say that Clymer is as thorough and unscrupulous a partisan and demagogue now as he was copperhead and secession sympathizer during the war, and that he and his committee dropped the Belknap enquiry just where they wanted the public to drop it—before they uncovered the tracks of the trusted leaders of the democratic party, and showed that those loud howlers about purity and honesty are only hen-roost robbers after all.

That Clymer and his pals had some special reason for hurrying Marsh away as soon as he had told all they wanted him to tell, no one has doubted; and this belief harmed the democracy so much that the party leaders in Washington at first tried hard to make out that "the administration" drove Marsh away, and when that subterfuge failed they howled that "the administration" would at least take good care he didn't come back. But "the administration" was all the while working to get him back, and finally with success, and now the democrats are trying to "hedge" against the effect of any disclosures he may make. The Boston Post's Washington correspondent on Tuesday, the 21st, said: "Suspicions that Marsh has been tampered with in Belknap's interest have recently sprung up. The elaborate manner in which arrangements for his return were made, the fact that he was visited by three or four different messengers from the Attorney-General, and other incidents of the last week, are regarded as evidences that he was possibly being prepared, as it were, for his reappearance."

We have already quoted from the Traveller's Washington correspondent to the effect that few people in that city now believe Belknap as guilty as he was charged with being and as he acknowledged himself to be; and the Post's dispatch shows that the democrats in Washington dread to have Marsh speak, and want it understood beforehand that whatever he may say derogatory to the democracy will be owing to his having been "tampered with." Why they should be in such terror over his return we cannot clearly see; he cannot hurt Clymer's reputation as a skillful political trickster, his reputation in that line having been ruined by the lubberly manner in which he bungled the Belknap matter; he cannot hurt Clymer's reputation as a "reformer," for no one ever supposed the coffee-pot hero anything but a swindle and a fraud, in that line; he cannot damage George H. Pendleton's good name, for he can't find it to damage; and we do not imagine he can make things look much better for Belknap, though he may be able to hit some of Belknap's pursuers pretty hard. What can be the matter? Is there a mine under some as-yet-unsuspected democratic leader, which the democrats are afraid Marsh will fire?

News and Notes.

Gen. B. F. Butler and B. G. Jayne (the special treasury agent who got so much notoriety in the molety investigation—are after Geo. H. Pendleton, on the Kentucky Railroad business.

A masked gang of burglars in New Jersey attacked a house on Sunday night in Guttenberg and stole $500 in property. They went to Judge Peyster's house, but he opened on them with a revolver and wounded one of them. They visited David Mansey's house afterwards and met a similar reception, one of them being very seriously wounded, but was carried off by his brother robbers. A part of the same gang visited the house of an old hermit named Ross, when he emptied a shot gun among them, wounding one very badly, but they escaped before the old man could reload, showing tracks of blood among the rocks for a long distance. Augustus Lortz, a witness against some members of this gang, was in attendance on Sunday night upon the celebration of St. Joseph's Day at Dobb's Ferry. While viewing the proceedings one McLain, brother of an arrested burglar, deliberately fired at Lortz from behind a tree, but missed him, and fatally wounded a young girl. McLain escaped.

Gen. Butler has been before the House committee in the Pendleton case, and testified that while investigating a private legal claim he came across evidence, through B. G. Jayne, which will show up Pendleton, who with the assistance of two women disposed of $148,500 divided into three sums, at the time the Kentucky Central Railroad claim was allowed.

The new city governments of Manchester and Concord were sworn in on the 21st.

Treasurer New's resignation, to take effect April 1st, is in the hands of the President.

S. W. Carter, aged 26 years, committed suicide at Manchester on the 21st, in an unoccupied room in Stark Block, by hanging. He was a native of Hillsboro, but had been working recently in Haverhill, Mass. Ill health and hereditary taint are the supposed causes. He leaves a wife.

Solon Bridgman, sixteen years old, of Belchertown, Mass., died of hydrophobia on the 20th. The rabid dog which bit him (seven weeks ago) also bit Edward Chamberlain and Dwight Thayer of South Amherst, a fifteen-year-old girl in Belchertown, and several dogs. One of the bitten dogs is known to have gone mad, and the girl and Mr. Thayer are both sick. The night before Bridgman died it took three men to hold him.

—The proprietor of a rope-walk says that what makes it hard on rope makers is that at least fifty men die daily of natural causes who ought to be hanged.

—Daniel Drew's assets show $150 worth of watch and chain for time, and only $130 worth of Bibles and hymn books for eternity.

—"I never complained of my state but once," said an old man, "when my feet were bare and I had no money to buy shoes; but I met a man without feet, and became contented."

—"Why did Pharaoh kill the boy-babies of the Hebrews, and not the girls?" asked a teacher of her class of girls recently. "Because boys are so much worse than girls," was the very prompt reply of a little maid.

TO MY PATIENTS!

DR. ALBION M. DUDLEY,

NOW OF SALEM, MASS.,

TO SUCCEED ME MARCH 13th,

Will be fully entitled to the respect and confidence of the citizens of Portsmouth. I can unreservedly recommend him, not only as a gentleman in the true meaning of the term, but as a well read, skillful and conscientious

Dental Practitioner.

DR. DUDLEY already has a fine and rapidly increasing practice in Salem, and consents to come here on trial for a year, (to be in Portsmouth three days of each week, and three days in Salem), at my earnest solicitation, backed by the free gift of my practice.

I could have sold my practice with a recommendation, for a large sum, but feeling the kindness and confidence with which I have been treated, I have chosen, nay, felt it impossible to do otherwise than sink private consideration of profit for the good of my patients.

If DR. DUDLEY is appreciated at his true worth by the people of Portsmouth, he can, through the confidence extended to him, be made to relinquish his practice in Salem, and settle here permanently. That such may be the result of his year of trial here is the devout wish of his friend and the friend of Portsmouth. A. P. STEVENS.

N. B.—I shall take great pleasure in presenting Dr. D. to such of my patients as my limited time hereafter will permit, and also to make engagements for him with any who may wish suggestion or advice from me. A. P. S.

The Gale.

The brig previously reported as having been wrecked on Gerrish's island was the Hattie Eaton, Capt. James F. Cook, from the West Indies, bound for Portland with a load of rum and molasses. She was owned by Boston parties, and valued at $9000. The cargo was insured. Six men were lost, only the mate (who hails from Middleboro', Mass.,) being saved, and he was insensible when rescued.

A correspondent at Kittery Point, writing on the 22d, informs us that the Hattie Eaton was from Cienfuegas for Boston, with 525 hhds. sugar and molasses. The mate's name is William O. L. Baron. Brig and cargo are a total loss. The bodies of the captain and one seaman had been recovered when our correspondent wrote.

The schooner which was seen near the brig just before the latter struck was in distress at that time, and could not possibly have hung off shore many minutes after she was lost sight of; if she did not founder she probably struck on some of the outlying rocks off Gerrish's island, and in either case there is but faint hope that any of her crew could have escaped.

The following particulars concerning the damage to vessels in the harbor have come to hand:

Schooner Governor, a coasting vessel, belonging in Sedgewick, Me., was driven from her anchorage toward the rocks, taking two anchors along with her; a third anchor was let go but failed to bring the vessel up, and as a last resort her masts were cut away, the anchors then holding and enabling the schooner to ride out the rest of the gale in a perilous situation near the shore. She was brought up to town on Wednesday.

Fishing schooner Kitty Clark, of Eastham, Mass., was blown ashore in Kittery cove, but was not injured and will come off all right.

Coasting schooner Fairfield, of Eden, Me., is ashore in Pepperell's cove, with her side stove in and badly damaged.

Fishing schooner Gen. Taylor, of Newburyport, before reported as having been bilged and sunk by striking a rock while attempting to enter the harbor on Friday, was raised and brought in before the gale commenced, and now lies back of the navy yard, near the bridge, badly damaged and with one side stove in.

Fishing schooner Celia, wrecked some time ago on "Lunging" island, at the Shoals, and afterward raised and towed in, now lies on Badger's island flats in a rather dilapidated condition. We believe she is to be repaired.

A Circulating Library.

It may be a matter of interest, to those interested in the moral and intellectual welfare of a class of people who seldom are seen on the street or in places where useful reading matter can usually be obtained, to know that we have a circulating library, changed semi-weekly in various parts of the city, and other places. We have at the present time about one hundred volumes of various kinds, but all healthy in matter, which have been kindly given by interested friends in the city. Among the places and persons supplied with books, are the jail, almshouse, marine barracks, county farm at Brentwood, a number of fishermen, and also some thirty families in the city. Thus the missionary is brought before the people most in need of pastoral aid. Will those of our friends who have suitable books laid away rusting on the library shelves, please remember how useful those very books might be made in many of the homes in our city, where books are seldom seen? Many have back numbers of magazines, also religious and secular papers, that would be very acceptable. Any one desiring to aid in this great work will find a ready market at the Missionary Home, 19 Hill street.

WM. A LOYNE,
Voluntary city Missionary.

Jottings.

Chas. A. Mendum, Esq., of the firm of Mendum, Whidden & Co., manufacturers and dealers in furniture at Boston, has sent to Mr. Loyne, the faithful missionary, a communication offering as a contribution to the "Old Ladies' Home," $100 in furniture.

Col. Dillon of Manchester, commander of the first regiment of State militia, Col. Clough of New London, commander of the second regiment, and Capt. Patten of Manchester, Judge Advocate, have been appointed a commission by Governor Cheney to investigate and settle the troubles of the Portsmouth Artillery Company, their decision to be final. They have indicated their willingness to adjudicate in the case and will commence the examination in a few days.

The republicans have but one thing to regret in the recent election, and that is that James A. Weston was not the gubernatorial candidate of the democracy. They did so want to sit down on James!

At the session of the law term of the Superior Court, held on the 21st at Concord, an opinion was rendered sustaining the constitutionality of the act empowering cities and towns to loan their credit to railroad enterprises. Portsmouth is interested to the extent of the $300,000 voted to the P. & D. R. R.

The "doubtful" Senatorial districts at the recent election foot up 1000 majority in round numbers for the republican nominees, viz: James W. Johnson's 11th, 100; George E. Todd's, 2d, 200; Natt Head's, 4th, 300; Thos. Leavitt's, 1st, 400.

The republicans of this Congressional district polled a majority of 1200 at the recent election—wholly a gain—prohibition vote being 199. They will increase that majority next November to 2000. The majority against Marcy in the district is 1600, being rather more than Frank Jones even can overcome.

John Banks and Charles McGrath were arraigned before Judge Page, Wednesday, on a charge of stealing $400 from the money drawer of Roberts' saloon on Vaughan Street. Banks was discharged. McGrath was held in $600 for his appearance at the Circuit Court at Exeter in April.

The Reform Club meeting at the Temple this evening will be addressed by members of the Club and by President Mike Murphy of the Eliot Reform Club. A fee of five cents will be collected at the door.

The Gale.

The great storm of the 21st was a continuation of that which devastated a great portion of the West and South West two days before. Disasters at sea and on the coast were numerous. Trains were delayed on nearly all the railroads by snow and flood. On the Old Colony, the Newport morning train was thrown off the track at Tiverton, R. I., by a wash-out, there being about 150 passengers. The cars were smashed badly, and an employe had a leg broken by a rail coming through a car floor. The train on the New London and Northern Railroad, due at Norwich at 10:30, from Palmer, ran off the track near the Norwich Woollen Mills, turning the cars over, leaving the engine on the track, owing to a wash-out caused by the severe storm. No one was injured except with a few bruises.

The storm in Swampscott was the severest on the coast since Minot's Ledge Light was carried away in 1851, and the oldest fishermen cannot recollect when so much injury was done to the fishing vessels. Four jiggers went ashore in the storm. The schooner Flight broke her moorings in the morning, and went ashore on Phillips Point and went to pieces. The only things saved were the spars and sails.

Schooner M. M. Weaver, of Long Island, went to pieces two miles from Sandy Hook light, Monday night, and all hands were lost.

Barkentine Hattie S. Jackson went ashore on Spring Point ledge, near Portland, early Tuesday morning; crew saved. A large three-masted schooner went on Trundy's Reef, near Cape Elizabeth—a very bad place; fate of crew not stated. Schooner H. Atwood was totally lost on Toddy Rocks in Massachusetts Bay; crew saved. A large number of vessels are reported ashore all along the coast.

Schooner Charles E. Jackson, from Philadelphia for Boston, with 340 tons of coal, was driven ashore on Marblehead Neck. The crew had a very narrow escape, reaching the shore by crawling along the bowsprit and jumping upon some rocks near which the vessel struck. Captain Wiggin remained till the last one, and as he was going by the same means as the crew, the vessel swung round and he was obliged to climb into the rigging and there remain for four hours before he was rescued.

At Portland, the spire of the Free Street Baptist Church was shaken from its foundation, and houses along the Maine coast were reft of roofs and chimneys, in several cases.

In Lebanon, an unfinished boarding-house on Jefferson Hill, belonging to Benjamin Tuttle, was blown down.

At Augusta, Me., a brick schoolhouse was unroofed and the belfry of the Sprague cotton factory was blown down, dismounting the bell and damaging the roof. Jonathan Laten, aged fifty years, while attempting to shut a barn door was thrown down violently, fracturing his skull so that he died in two hours. A woman had an arm broken by the sudden closing of a door by the wind.

The larger part of the Old Orchard House, erecting at Orchard Beach, Me., was demolished at noon. It is a complete wreck. Loss heavy. This house was to have been completed early in June, and was to be the largest Summer hotel east of Long Branch.

Thirty feet of the roof of the Profile House, at Franconia Mountains were blown off. The parlor doors were blown in, and there were three inches of snow in the parlor. The carriage house, 100 feet long, was blown down and the barn unroofed.

—The wages of sin have not been reduced along with other wages.

—They tell a story in New York of a man who was late to dinner, and on his arrival, was accused of having three hands, one of them being a little behind hand.

—A prudent mother of wealth and respectability, residing in Chicago, has brought up her accomplished and beautiful daughters to do washing and ironing. When questioned as to the cause of this somewhat unusual proceeding, the prudent matron replied: "Oh, it is always well to be prepared for any contingency. Perhaps some of the poor children may marry an Italian count."

Unlimited Remedial Resources.

People sometimes suppose that Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines represent the entire extent of his resources for curing disease. This is an error. Experience proved that while the Golden Medical Discovery, Favorite Prescription, Pleasant Purgative Pellets, Compound Extract of Smart-Weed, and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, would, if faithfully used, cure a large variety of chronic complaints, there would be here and there a case which, from its severity, or from its complication with other disorders, would resist their action. These exceptional cases required a thorough examination into their symptoms, to ascertain the exact nature and extent of the diseases under which the patient was labouring, and the use of specific remedies to meet and overcome the same. This led to the establishment of the World's Dispensary, at Buffalo, N. Y, with its Faculty of Physicians and Surgeons, each of whom is skilled in the treatment of chronic disorders in general and those belonging to his own special department in particular. To one is assigned diseases of the throat and lungs; to another, diseases of the kidneys and urogenital organs; to another, diseases of the digestive system; to another, diseases of the nervous system; and to another, diseases of the eye and ear. Thus the highest degree of perfection in medicine and surgery is attained. The establishment of this institution enables the Doctor to meet a long-felt want in the treatment of the more severe chronic affections. By a careful consideration of the symptoms as given in writing, he successfully treats thousands of cases at their homes. Others visit the Dispensary in person. The amplest resources for the treatment of lingering affections are thus placed at the disposal of every patient, and those on whom the proprietary medicines do not have the desired effect can procure a more thorough and efficient course by a personal application to the proprietor of the World's Dispensary.

The hardest cough yields readily to Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam, and the patient soon finds himself permanently cured. Sold by druggists everywhere.

Extra Liability to Malarial Infection.

Persons whose blood is thin, digestion weak and liver sluggish, are extra liable to the attacks of malarial disease. The most trifling exposure may, under such conditions, infect a system which, if healthy, would resist the miasmatic taint. The only was to secure immunity from malaria in localities where it is prevalent, is to tone and regulate the system by improving weakened digestion, enriching the blood, and giving a wholesome impetus to biliary secretion. These results are accomplished by nothing so effectively as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which long experience has proved to be the most reliable safeguard against fever and ague and kindred disorders, as well as the best remedy for them. The Bitters are, moreover, an excellent invigorant of the organs of urination, and an active depurent, eliminating from the blood those acrid impurities which originate rheumatic ailments.

Daily Chronicle.

—A man always feels put out when he is taken in.

—"Madam," cynically observed a gentleman to a leader of fashionable society of Washington, "woman doesn't seem to be as much of a 'clinging vine' as she once was." "That's because of the extreme insecurity of the manly oak," she replied.

—Maggie Mitchell was recently interviewed by a reporter, who attempting to arrive at her approximate age by asking how long she had been upon the stage? "Ever since I can remember," she responded, diplomatically.

—"Economy, my dear, economy," said she. "It's all right for you to have plants and all that, but there is reason in all things and there isn't a particle of sense in paying fifty cents for a flower pot when there are a dozen empty cigar boxes about the house," and taking the last "Havana" from another box, he handed her the box to put an oleander in, lighted his cigar and went out.

—A gentleman one evening was seated near a lovely woman, when the company around him were proposing conundrums to each other. Turning to his companion, he said, "Why is a lady unlike a mirror?" She "gave it up." "Because," said the rude fellow, "a mirror reflects without speaking, but a lady speaks without reflecting." "And why are you unlike a mirror?" asked the lady. He could not tell. "Because a mirror is smooth and polished, and you are rough and unpolished."

—Another case of marrying a coachman is reported. It took place last August, but only just found its way into the papers. The bride is a daughter of a wealthy resident of Stamford, Conn.,—handsome, intelligent and admired by many of the society beaux of that place. The husband is a young Englishman who has been groom and coachman for the young lady's father about two years, unusually intelligent for his occupation, and liked exceedingly by all the family, and, it seems, especially by the daughter. The courtship took place by daylight, almost exclusively during the drives to the railway station, to receive the indulgent papa. They were married in Stamford by a Methodist clergyman, but the parents were not advised of the occurrence until a short time ago. Though the marriage has been made public, the papa has removed his daughter to New York, and has concealed her from her husband so effectually that he is unable to find her whereabouts.

—"Do I look like an octagon?" asked Mrs. Partington as she sat at breakfast recently at the Grand Central, Oakland, with the Chronicle before her, and George, the beaming and genial exponent of gastronomic science, pouring her Mocha. "Do I look like an Octagon?" placing her finger smilingly on the paragraph fixing her age at seventy-seven. "An octagon, indeed!" she continued, not severely, a smile wreathing her lips as the odor of the coffee exhaled, and her spectacles were dewy with the rising vapor from her cup; "they will, perhaps, make me a centurian next and a relict of antipathy, but this is the year for such, and perhaps I should be grateful for it, as age is honorable and I might find a place at the great National Imposition. Yet it is best not to assume years any more than virtues, and I shall be content if I am never older than I am now. This coffee is very flagrant, George," and as she spoke she gazed into the cup, seeing therein her good looks reflected which sixty years had not impaired, while George beamed down upon her with radiant satisfaction.—San Francisco Chronicle.

READING FOR FALL DAYS.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of "selling" books they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse picture cannot then that which is spread before the children of this country it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or the pen to describe. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to those calamitous leaves of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, designed by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says:"In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome and really attractive magazine is required to place them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $5.00.

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is $7.00. Or, for $6.50 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain, in more than 1,000 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal to contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 6,000 book pages costing $30.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876 sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the grand concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which promise to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration now in power to a close fit. In the course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fail to place or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great issues to be adjusted, and many questions to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to make a great stir, and there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter deeply into politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there can be no doubt that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently expects to be as useful to its friends as the present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued regard of all old readers, and for the adhesion of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan necessities or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old fervor the old Republican principles of which it was the champion through the American crisis of 1860-65. It will rejoice whenever those principles are victorious under the old banners. But it can never be the servant of politicians or conventions. It must approve or what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it desires to set forth the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to find out what men whom the country knows and can trust; to secure hard money, Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the forces of the splendid, hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and is earnestly striving to hold up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One reason of the policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by what others may do, has been that both parties have found themselves forced to abandon some of the worst practices of the old caucus system to put forward the best men, and to profit by some of the reforms they preach. It may fairly be claimed that conscientious and independent voters have time within two or three years gradually forced both parties up to a somewhat higher plane, and we may hope that the Centennial year will witness still greater improvement.

THE TRIBUNE will continue to labor for this end with the means which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost candor with political fairness; will keep up column after column from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable writer in their homes, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1872 and 1873 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest attention and the most lavish expenditure to procure the freshest intelligence, the most complete reports, the most interesting letters and essays, and the ablest work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors are hundreds of the most eminent men in the country.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES FOR COUGHS AND COLDS.

A COUGH, COLD, OR SORE THROAT REQUIRES IMMEDIATE ATTENTION, and should be checked. If allowed to continue, Irritation of the Lungs A PERMANENT Throat Affection

Or an incurable lung disease is often the result.

Brown's Bronchial Troches,

Having a direct influence on the parts, give immediate relief. For Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Consumption and Throat Diseases, TROCHES are used with always good success.

THE REMARKABLE PROPERTIES OF

Brown's Bronchial Troches,

have been thoroughly tested since first introduced. The demand for them has steadily increased and purely upon their own merits.

ASTHMA or PHTHISIS.—A spasmodic affection of the bronchial tubes, which are covered with a dry, tenacious phlegm. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" will, in some cases give immediate relief. If of long standing, persevere with them—they will alleviate in time.

CATARRH.—A form of CHRONIC THROAT DISEASE con-sisting in inflamation, which begins behind and a little above the palate, and extend up into the nose.—"Brown's Bronchial Troches" have proved efficacious in this troublesome complaint.

SINGERS and PUBLIC SPEAKERS will find Troches useful in clearing the voice when taken before Singing or Speaking, and relieving the throat after an unusual exertion of the vocal organs.

OWING to the good reputation and popularity of the Troches, many worthless and cheap imitations are offered.

MRS. HOPGOOD'S HOUSEKEEPING.

Mrs. Hopgood prided herself on being the best of housekeepers. She was one of those rapid housewives who pursue an atom of dust as a hunter might pursue a stag. No bold natured fly ever dared to buzz within her dainty walls. No cat purred upon her hearth-stone. Plants were tabooed because their leaflets would fall. Canary-birds were ruthlessly excluded lest they should scatter seed. Sunshine was regarded as an arch enemy. "It brings flies, and fades the carpets," said Mrs. Hopgood. As for Mr. Hopgood and the children, they lived mostly in the kitchen.

"I can't have the boys' muddy boots tramping over the carpets, and the girls sewing in the parlor," said Mrs. Hopgood. "As for Hopgood, he don't care where he sits. One place is as good as another where he is concerned."

The Hopgood family also took their meals in the kitchen.

"I've got a dining-room as nice as anybody's," said Mrs. Hopgood, "with a real carved oak side-board, with a marble top, and silver polished till its better than any looking-glass; but where's the use of turning things all upside down, just for one's own family. Common crockery-ware and good bone-handled knives are just as good for every-day use."

"Mamma," said Elsie Hopgood, a cherry-cheeked girl of sixteen, "I should like to sit in the parlor sometimes. Mrs. Montfort and her daughter use theirs every evening, and it looks so pretty and pleasant there."

"Stuff and nonsense!" said Mrs. Hopgood, sharply. "I keep house myself after my own fashion, and I give others leave to do the same."

"But mamma," pleaded Elsie. "I was thinking how I should like to invite all the girls here some evening, and have tea, and afterward some little games. I've been asked out so many times, without ever responding, and I'm really ashamed to go."

"Then you had better stay at home." said Mrs. Hopgood, polishing vigorously away at the stem of her silver card-receiver. "I think I see myself, with all the young folks in town capering on my Brussels carpet, and cake crumbs, and melted cream daubed over everything."

Elsie made no answer, but her countenance quickly fell. "I wish mamma was like any one else," she said to herself, the tears obscuring her eyes. "I wish she was like Kate Prickett's mother, who lets her have company every Thursday evening. John Elton wants me to marry him. If I was married I could have a house of my own, and do just as I pleased."

"Mother," said Mr. Hopgood, a week or two afterward, with a troubled face, "is it true that our Elsie is out walking with John Elton, evening after evening? He is a worthless, dissipated fellow, and not a fit associate for any girl."

"Mercy upon us? I don't know," said Mrs. Hopgood, with a perturbed face. "I supposed she was with Kate Prickett or Clara Montfort. I'm a great deal too busy with pickling and housekeeping to run at a giddy girl's heels the whole time. But I'm going to commence cleaning to-morrow, and then I'll warrant I'll give her enough to do to keep her out of mischief."

"Mother," said Isaac Hopgood, gravely, "sometimes I think that if we made home a little more attractive to our children—"

"Oh, nonsense!" quickly interrupted his wife. "I suppose you'd like us to have tableaux, like Mrs. Montfort; or a magic lantern, like the little Mickfords. Our children haven't been brought up in that way."

Mr. Hopgood said no more. Mrs. Hopgood was, to use her own expression, "in the thick of the housecleaning," the next day, with the carpets rolled into heaps, the floors spattered with soapsuds, and her head tied up in a pocket-handkerchief when the door suddenly opened.

"Take care of my pan of soapsuds and soda!" cried she, shrilly. "Oh, it's you, is it, Ally!"

"Yes, mother, it's me," said Alexander, her eldest son, who had just gone into business as junior partner to his father. "I say, do leave off washing a minute and attend to me! Ryerson's in town—my old chum, you know—only for one day, and I have asked him to dinner."

"To dinner!" almost screamed Mrs. Hopgood, dropping her brush in her consternation; "Alexander Hopgood, are you crazy! Of course I can't have him to dinner. Just look at the confusion the house is in."

"Oh, he won't mind that, mother. Ryerson is a thoroughly good fellow. Just let him sit down to anything with the rest of us, any—"

"I shall do nothing of the sort, Alexander," said Mrs. Hopgood, severely, compressing her lips. "You know I do not approve of your inviting company at any time, still less at such a period as this. If you have been fool enough to ask him, you may get out of the scrape the best way you can."

"But, mother—"

"I don't want any more discussion on the subject," says Mrs. Hopgood dabbling away with the brush. Alexander went out, slamming the door.

"Well," quoth Alexander Hopgood, to himself, "If I can't ask a friend to my home, there's at least the alternative of inviting him to the hotel. I never did such a thing before, but I don't see how else I can manage."

So Alexander Hopgood entertained Mr. Ryerson at the hotel, and gave an unlimited order for iced champagne and dessert. And the upshot of all was that Alexander Hopgood was brought in at eleven o'clock at night by two of the waiters, hopelessly intoxicated.

"Don't be f-raid, mother," stuttered he, brandishing an empty bottle, as he became dimly conscious of her white, scared face bending over him. "Go on with your washing? It's a deal jollier at the hotel than it is at home. Freedom forever! Hoo-oo-ray!"

—The Indiana glass works has orders for 250,000 demijohns. Even if there were no almanacs one could tell by this that it was Presidential election year.

"Oh, what shall I do?" sobbed Mrs. Hopgood, when the waiters were once more out of the house and the roll of the cab wheels had died away. "To think—only to think that a son of mine should ever disgrace himself thus!"

"It's your own fault, mother," said Benny, the second son. "You wouldn't let Ally bring his friend here."

"Hold your tongue," sharply retorted Mrs. Hopgood, wincing beneath the prick of this home truth. "Call Elsie, I need her help."

"Oh! mother!" piped Fanny, the younger girl, running down stairs in frantic haste, "Elsie ain't here!"

"Not here?"

"No, mother; she hasn't been to bed at all—and there's a note on her table directed to you."

"Open it, mother," said Isaac Hopgood, huskily. "This is a sad night for our household. My God! has our home become so distasteful to our children that they fly from it like rats from a falling house?"

Elsie's note was short enough. It read:

"Dear Mother;—I am tired of living in the kitchen. I have run away with John Elton, and before you see me again I shall have entered upon a new future. ELSIE."

Mrs. Hopgood broke out into wild hysterical sobbings. Mr. Hopgood read the hurriedly scrawled paper with a face cold and set like steel.

"Run away with John Elton?" he repeated slowly. "Poor Elsie! then God help her. For he is as great a villain and scoundrel as ever lived; and she has sealed her own doom. Mother! mother! this comes of your housekeeping."

"It wasn't my fault, Isaac," sobbed Mrs. Hopgood, rocking herself backward and forward on a chair into which she had dropped.

"It was your fault," retorted her husband, almost savagely. "You made the very name of home a mockery to your children, and shut your soul inside of a scrubbing pail; and now you are reaping the bitter harvest."

Of course poor Alexander Hopgood was unable to lift his throbbing head from the pillow the next day, and his mother never left him till afternoon. When at last she came down stairs, the parlor blinds were thrown wide open, a flood of sunshine streaming in, the table neatly set in the pretty dining-room, and flowers on the table, and new books, games and puzzles scattered around. Mrs. Hopgood gazed around with a bewildered air. She hardly knew her own home.

"This is the way in which we must live henceforward, mother," said her husband cheerily. "Let in the light and sunshine; teach Ben and Fanny that 'home' is something more than an empty name, and try, in so far as we can, to retrieve the errors of our past life."

Mrs. Hopgood mutely bowed her head.

"I will try, husband," she answered.

Blaine Manages Matters.

The Boston Herald's Washington dispatch of the 22d says: "I am tired of seeing Blaine run the democratic party in this House," cried out an exasperated democrat on the floor this afternoon to those around him. The member had moved an adjournment in despair of getting his party out of Mr. Blaine's hands, and had been voted down. He then rushed for his hat and went home very mad. His chagrin was not to be wondered at, for Blaine had been running the House all the afternoon and driving the democrats hither and thither like a big dog worrying so many sheep. The subject before the House was the bill reported yesterday and passed by the House forbidding political assessments on Government employes. Mr. Blaine wanted to have the prohibition extend to members of Congress and Senators also, and to-day, on a reconsideration, got the floor and proceeded to 'run the House' in his usual fashion. He first made a political speech, aiming with his usual dexterity to draw out the Southern members. He worked in several allusions to State rights, and kept the debate going all the afternoon on a question upon which the House was substantially a unit. Finally a substitute bill was passed with an amendment so nearly like his own that he accepted it.

The galleries were as full as usual when there is an interesting debate in the House, and it must be admitted that although the subject was one which might have been disposed of in half an hour, and which needed no discussion, the debate was very interesting. It was really a wordy contest of the kind that results whenever the pot calls the kettle black. The member from Maine proved what everybody knew, that the democrats were guilty of all sorts of wicked practices when they were in power away back in Buchanan's time, and the democrats retorted on him at length that the republicans had gone a good deal further in the same road in which they were travelling when they went out of power. It was, in short, a prolonged tempest in a teapot, better worth listening to than taking part in. Mr. Brown of Kentucky replied to Mr. Blaine's suggestion as to the democratic party surrendering its State rights principles, and said that the substitute proposed by himself was not open to that criticism. Mr. Blaine referred to a distinguished democrat from Virginia as his authority for statements regarding elections in Virginia, and mentioned Gov. Henry A. Wise. Mr. Goode said they did not recognize him as a democrat in Virginia. Mr. Blaine—Very well. He certainly is not on our side. To use Gov. Wise's own words to me: 'The fraud was one which out-Kellogged Kellogg, which out-carpet-bagged the carpet-baggers and which out scallawaged the scallawags.' [Laughter.] Amendments were suggested by Messrs. Townsend of Pennsylvania, Hoar of Massachusetts and Reagan of Texas. Mr. Holman of Indiana asked Mr. Blaine whether he was ready to go the extent of interfering with the legislation of States as a mode of managing elections? and Mr. Blaine replied that the Government of the United States has a perfect right to prescribe the time, place and manner of holding elections for Representatives in Congress. Mr. Blaine expressed the belief that the colored voters in the South had not a fair chance of voting. It was not enough to destroy bribery outside so long as the spectre ghost of rascality stood within. He moved the previous question. The House refused to second the previous question—ayes, 73; nays, 91.

Mr. Goode remarked that as the gentleman had thought proper to go into his (Goode's) district he would tell him that at the Norfolk Navy Yard no man could get any employment without a recommendation from the republican executive committee. The debate was further continued by Messrs. Cox, Luttrell, Caulfield and Southard. Finally the House proceeded to vote on the bill and the various amendments. Mr. Townsend's amendment, providing that expenditures for election purposes allowed, the law of any State should not be construed as being affected by the act, was rejected. Mr. Blaine's amendment including Senators, Representatives and delegates in Congress in the provisions of the bill was agreed to—yeas, 128; nays, 88. Mr. Hoar's amendment, providing that nothing in the bill should prevent voluntary contributions for the purpose of circulating documents for the purpose of giving further information was rejected,—yeas, 91; nays, 119. Mr. Blaine's amendment to the substitute offered by Mr. Brown of Kentucky, being the same amendment as offered by Mr. Blaine to the original bill, and adoptod, was rejected—yeas, 102, nays, 107. The amendment, offered by Mr. Goode of Virginia to Mr. Brown's substitute, making it a misdemeanor for any person to use force, duress, menace, violence or bribery to influence the elections of President, Vice-President, Senator, Representative or Delegate in Congress, was adopted—yeas, 212, nays 3.

The amendment of Mr. Reagan, as a substitute for the first section of Mr. Brown's substitute, making it unlawful for any officer, postmaster, clerk, or employe of the United States, or for any Senator or member of Congress to solicit, ask, receive or accept any gift for election purposes, was rejected. Mr. Brown's substitute was then acted upon. The first section is that no officer or employe of the Government shall require or request, give to or receive from any other officer or employe of the same, or other person, directly or indirectly, any money or property or other thing of value for political purposes, and any such officer or employe who shall offend against the provisions of the act shall at once be dismissed from the service of the United States, and also be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof be fined not less than $500 nor more than $3000 and imprisoned not more than one year, at the discretion of the judge trying the case. The second section is the amendment offered by Mr. Goode of Virginia and adopted. The third section gives United States District Courts jurisdiction of the offences created by the act. The substitute was agreed to without the yeas and nays, and the bill as thus amended passed—yeas, 178; nays, 8.

News and Notes.

The President's son Fred and Senator Sherman's son were bankers in St. Louis. The firm is dissolved and Fred. Grant is ordered away to the army.

A thrill of new life is apparent in the grain and breadstuff export movement of this country within the last five or six days, and the heavy stocks on hand are beginning to move. The short supplies of wheat in the old countries, and the recent damage to growing crops in England, France, Germany, Austria and Belgium, gave a rise of five or six cents to Spring grades of American wheat last week, and the sales reached about 800,000 bushels, against a previous average daily sale of from 50,000 to 60,000 bushels.

Mr. Barnum has just secured an equestrian from Brazil, who is said to be the most daring, reckless and marvelous rider that ever mounted a bare backed horse. His feats on seven fiery steeds have astounded immense audiences in South America, and now, for a thousand dollars per week, he and his stud of Arabian chargers are to be transferred to the circus department of "Barnum's Great Centennial Academy of Object Teaching." We have also received a slight inkling of immense patriotic demonstrations which Mr. Barnum is to give daily in another department of his great show that will arouse the spirit of '76 to its highest pitch wherever his "Travelling World's Fair" unfolds its banners. We are promised a full programme soon of Mr. Barnum's plans for 1876. That they will be original and brilliant none can doubt, judging from the past. He declares that it far outstrips all his previous efforts, and that he intends to identify himself with this centennial year in a manner that shall be alike worthy of his country, of this grand anniversary, and of himself. He promises a regular old-fashioned Hail Columbia Yankee Doodle Fourth of July celebration every day, and expects to be crowned with the title "Centennial Barnum."

The selection of Boston instead of Worcester, as the place for the Massachusetts republican convention, is regarded as a point in favor of Mr. Blaine. Worcester, the scene of so many State conventions, has become ineligible since the recent conference there of thirty or forty gentlemen who were understood to be in favor of Bristow.

The New York republicans in State convention have passed resolutions favoring the nomination of Senator Conkling for President.

Caleb P. Marsh appeared before the House committee on the 22d and gave testimony implicating Ex-Secretary Belknap and his two wives in the Fort Sill bribery case.

Why is a store that don't advertise like Enoch Arden? Because it "sees no sale from day to day."

—The appointment of Judge Taft as Secretary of War sends another cold chill down Mr. Bowles' back. He gathers Adams' photograph in his clammy grasp and gazing sympathetically at it exclaims: "A sordid President may have no use for a real statesman, but if I ever forget you, kill me and bury me among my cabbages."—Brooklyn Argus.

—An innocent method of destroying cockroaches is to place a bowl or basin containing a little molasses on the floor at night. A bit of wood, resting one end on the floor and the other on the edge of the vessel, serves as a bridge to conduct the insects to the sweet depost. Once in the trap its slippery sides prevent retreat, and thus cockroaches may be caught by the thousand.

Unlimited Remedial Resources.

People sometimes suppose that Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines represent the entire extent of his resources for curing disease. This is an error. Experience proved that while the Golden Medical Discovery, Favorite Prescription, Pleasant Purgative Pellets, Compound Extract of Smart-Weed, and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, would, if faithfully used, cure a large variety of chronic complaints, there would be here and there a case which, from its severity, or from its complication with other disorders, would resist their action. These exceptional cases required a thorough examination into their symptoms, to ascertain the exact nature and extent of the diseases under which the patient was laboring, and the use of specific remedies to meet and overcome the same. This led to the establishment of the World's Dispensary, at Buffalo, N. Y, with its Faculty of Physicians and Surgeons, each of whom is skilled in the treatment of chronic disorders in general and those belonging to his own special department in particular. To one is assigned diseases of the throat and lungs; to another, diseases of the kidneys and urogenital organs; to another, diseases of the digestive system; to another, diseases of the nervous system; and to another, diseases of the eye and ear. Thus the highest degree of perfection in medicine and surgery is attained. The establishment of this institution enables the Doctor to meet a long-felt want in the treatment of the more severe chronic affections. By a careful consideration of the symptoms as given in writing, he successfully treats thousands of cases at their homes. Others visit the Dispensary in person. The ample resources for the treatment of lingering affections are thus placed at the disposal of every patient, and those on whom the proprietary medicines do not have the desired effect can procure a more thorough and efficient course by a personal application to the proprietor of the World's Dispensary.

The hardest cough yields readilo to Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam, and the patient soon finds himself permanently cured. Sold by druggists everywhere.

Extra Liability to Malarial Infection.

Persons whose blood is thin, digestion weak and liver sluggish, are extra liable to the attacks of malarial disease. The most trifling exposure may, under such conditions, infect a system which, if healthy, would resist the miasmatic taint. The only was to secure immunity from malaria in localities where it is prevalent, is to tone and regulate the system by improving weakened digestion, enriching the blood, and giving a wholesome impetus to biliary secretion. These results are accomplished by nothing so effectively as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which long experience has proved to be the most reliable safeguard against fever and ague and kindred disorders, as well as the best remedy for them. The Bitters are, moreover, an excellent invigorant of the organs of urination, and an active depurent, eliminating from the blood those acrid impurities which originate rheumatic ailments.

TO MY PATIENTS!

DR. ALBION M. DUDLEY,
NOW OF SALEM, MASS.,
TO SUCCEED ME MARCH 13th,

Will be fully entitled to the respect and confidence of the citizens of Portsmouth. I can unreservedly recommend him, not only as a gentleman in the true meaning of the term, but as a well read, skillful and conscientious

Dental Practitioner.

DR. DUDLEY already has a fine and rapidly increasing practice in Salem, and consents to come here on trial for a year, (to be in Portsmouth three days of each week, and three days in Salem), at my earnest solicitation, backed by the free gift of my practice.

I could have sold my practice with a recommendation, for a large sum, but feeling the kindness and confidence with which I have been treated, I have chosen, nay, felt it impossible to do otherwise than sink private consideration of profit for the good of my patients.

If DR. DUDLEY is appreciated at his true worth by the people of Portsmouth, he can, through the confidence extended to him, be made to relinquish his practice in Salem, and settle here permanently. That such may be the result of his year of trial here, is the devout wish of his friend and the friend of Portsmouth. A. P. STEVENS.

N. B.—I shall take great pleasure in presenting Dr. D. to such of my patients as my limited time here will permit, and also to make engagements for him with any who may wish suggestion or advice from me. A. P. S.

The Gerrish Island Wreck.

The crew of the brig "Hattie Eaton," wrecked at Gerrish's Island, and drowned, were: James F. Cook, captain; William Fitzpatrick, 2d mate; Henry Hartmeyer of East Boston, steward—white men; Peter Botars, of Grenada, Jeremiah Stevens of St. Kitts, Joseph Alban and William Berens—negro seamen. First mate William O. LeBaron, of Middleboro', Mass., was saved in a very singular manner. He was in the forecastle, disabled with a dislocated shoulder, three of the crew being below frost-bitten. The captain, second mate and remainder of the crew were astern at the tiller, directing the brig toward the best locality in which to beach her.

Mr. Lorenzo B. Mitchell, who lives in the nearest house to the scene of the disaster, saw the vessel coming in and hastened to the beach to render any possible assistance. She came for the beach like a race horse, under lower topsail, reefed spanker and foretopmast staysail, with the wind well aft, and not swerving an inch from her direct course. She struck stem on between two rocks a little more than her length from shore; the captain sprang into the fore rigging and ran aloft to the topgallant mast, when he entwined himself in the rigging to prevent being jerked overboard, while the rest of the crew stuck to the deck. The heavy sea soon swung the vessel around so that her bow was out to sea and the stern toward the land, at the same time careening her so that her masts were nearly parallel with the water, bringing the captain close down to a ledge of rock not far from the shore. Mr. Mitchell, against the urgent entreaty of his wife, "watched a smoothing" and ran for the ledge, in the belief that he could help the man in the rigging; but on getting there he found he could not reach him by about eight feet! The poor fellow begged earnestly for aid for himself and his crew, but the the boiling surf cut off all help as absolutely as though the brig had been a mile at sea instead of but a few feet distant; and the doomed seaman, undoubtedly taking in the hopelessness of the situation, then gave Mr. Mitchell his name and the name of the vessel, told what port he sailed from and where he was bound, who were the vessel's owners, etc., and adjured Mr. Mitchell not to fail to write to his friends an account of his fate, if he should be lost. Suddenly a huge sea struck the wreck and rolled the mast under water, the captain going under with it, never to appear again as a living man. The same sea washed Mr. Mitchell from the ledge, but he was fortunate enough to scramble ashore, from whence he helplessly looked on and saw man after man swept from the wreck into the sea. One colored man stripped himself, plunged overboard and struggled desperately to reach the shore; but though he was a powerful swimmer, and swimming for his life, he was but as a feather in the surf, which repeatedly bore him close in to the rocks only to sweep him a hundred feet away in another moment, and at last dashed him against a rock with a force that must instantly have crushed out his life.

One man (the mate) was still alive, holding on near the foremast, the bow of the vessel being still intact and the after part much shattered; Messrs. Willie Williams, Samuel B. Bridges and Joseph Witham, who had hastened to the spot on being notified that a wreck had occurred, were with Mr. Mitchell, watching a chance to help, when the sea suddenly fell smooth. Holding each other by the hand the men boarded the wreck, and hurried over the broken timbers toward the bow, holding on for their lives as they went, the mate at the same moment starting to meet them. As they met the mate fell helpless in the rescuers' arms, and was hastily carried over the wreck to the shore, which had barely been reached when an enormous sea rolled over the vessel, crushing what was left of her (except the bow) like an egg-shell, The last chance to save the mate had been gallantly improved.

On the body of Capt. Cook a ring with a Masonic emblem was found, and a committee of Masons of this city took the remains in charge and forwarded them on Thursday to his family in East Boston. The face of the second mate was terribly bruised when it came ashore and one arm was broken. The body of one of the crew washed ashore on Thursday, naked. This is probably the one who stripped off his clothes and plunged into the sea.

The only survivor of the wreck is in snug quarters at the house of Mr. Mitchell under the hands of Dr. Wentworth. He has recovered consciousness and will probably be saved with care.

South Mill Pond.

A short and easy way (and the only way) to prevent the disagreeable stench from the old South Mill Pond, is to pass an ordinance that no privy shall set over the edge of the pond, or in any way drain into the pond; that all privies shall have large, deep vaults, well stoned up, and so arranged that they can be easily cleaned out, and the work is done. Let nothing be allowed to be put into the pond but water, and nine-tenths of stench from it will be annihilated. If the flood gates were entirely away, and privies were located on each side of the pond, we should have the same stench that we now have. F.

Elsworth Hodgdon of Greenland died on Thursday morning of malignant small pox. This was the only case in the town. He was a brother of William A. Hodgdon, Esq., Representative elect from Ward V, Portsmouth.. There are nine cases at Rye, all doing well.

Mr. A. Bixby has left at our office a copy of the NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, dated Thursday, October 7, 1756, it being Vol. 1, No. 1. This is a choice relic of the past, and what makes it all the more valuable is the fact that the GAZETTE is published at Portsmouth at the present time, and is the oldest newspaper in America. Quite a notable fact in these times of old curiosities and mementoes of the olden time.—Lebanon News.

A brilliant, beautiful and rare Mexican lily, having four large crimson flowers fully open upon one stalk, may be seen for a few days at the store of Joseph H. Foster, and bulbs of the same procured at one dollar each.

At a business meeting of the Reform Club on Wednesday evening a letter was read by President Treat from Rev. Carlos Martyn inviting the Club to attend the North Church on Sunday afternoon and listen to a discourse upon "Alcohol," and offering to reserve seats for all who would come. Of course, the invitation was promptly accepted and Mr. Martyn will not lack for hearers. A kind and sympathetic letter was likewise received from Rev. James DeNormandie, tendering the Reform Club the lease of the Union Rooms, and generously offering it the free use of the large library, games, etc., therein.

The sub-committee which came here to investigate matters at the navy yard seems to have confined its enquiries principally to the subject of implicating Chief Constructor Isaiah Hanscom, the head of the Construction department—with what success is yet unknown.

During the late gale a large amount of fish were thrown on the beaches by the sea, cat fish, flounders, sculpins and skates.

A sturgeon was caught on a trawl by Mr. William Robinson of the fishing schooner Harp, on Sunday.

On Saturday evening, April 1st, a lecture is to be delivered at the Temple by a talented and fascinating lady of this city, who will on that occasion make her public debut. We refer to the advent of Mrs. J. Horace Jenness, who proposes to speak on "Hygiene," for the benefit of the poor of the city, an announcement which is sufficient to call out a full house. The Unitarian quartette will be present and render some choice selections.—Times.

Reserved seats for Barnabee's concert can be secured at Dr. Preston's.

Mr. John M. Davis' farm which is to be sold at auction on Saturday, (see advertisement in this paper,) is said to be one of the best in the county. It has supported two families for ten years, and at the same time laid by over $10,000. It is close to the city, and very valuable for hay, pasturage and building lots. The payments can be made very easy.

The military commission to settle the affairs of the Artillery company will meet here on Tuesday, April 4th.

Gov. Cheney's plurality is 3,614; his majority 3,208. The official returns may perhaps increase the scattering vote and decrease the majority 30 or 40. Cheney's vote exceeds that which he received last year 2,454, and Marcy's is 993 less than that received by Roberts.

Errol and the towns classed with it will hold an election March 28, and will doubtless elect a democrat, when the House will stand 178 democrats and 211 republicans, making the republican majority 33.

Hon. Samuel N. Bell is no doubt opposed to a third term. There is a republican plurality of 1,407 in his district, last election.

The moderator in Ward Three, Concord, having become insane, the selectmen appointed a moderator, in secret, before the opening of the polls. As the choice of moderator belongs to the voters of the ward, there is a question if this irregularity does not invalidate the whole election in that ward.

Notice has been served on John L. Kennedy, declared elected Alderman from Ward Four, Manchester, and Henry L. Drew, Charles H. Caverly and Edward Harrington, Jr., declared Councilmen, that their election will be contested by N. S. Clark, the republican candidate for Alderman, and John M. Stanton, Horace Stearns and Walter M. Parker, republican candidates for Councilmen, on the ground that they did not have majority of legal votes.

Returns of vote on Constitutional convention are not complete, many towns not returning the vote at all. As far as received it aggregates as follows: Yes, 26,247; no, 9522.

Rochester, the home of Hon. Chas. S. Whitehouse, made a handsome gain at the late election, notwithstanding the fact that the democracy boasted that they would capture its five Representatives. Gov. Cheney's majority is 110; last year 34.

William A. Peirce's majority for Railroad Commissioner is 3060. The vote is as follows: Peirce 41,717; Dinsmore 38,258; prohibition and scattering 399.

On the republican ticket, which was successful in Merrimack county, was the name of Frank S. Dodge of Concord for Register. The democrats say that his name is Francis S. Dodge, and that they shall go before the Circuit Court and demand the rejection of his vote, on the ground that his full Christian name was not on the ticket.

We learn that the republican who was drugged and run from Laconia through this place last Monday was left at West Ossipee by his kidnappers. After a few hours he became sufficiently sober to comprehend the situation and succeeded in making the landlord believe that he was a democrat and had been run off by republicans to keep him from voting the democratic ticket; whereupon the landlord hitched up his team and took him to Meredith, where he took the cars and returned to Laconia, arriving some hours before his kidnappers.—Wolfeboro News.

That money played only a secondary part in the contest, and even that only in the close towns, where it was employed to fight fire with fire, is clearly evident from the result in towns that are not close, and where little or no money was used. We have looked through the returns from most of these towns, and we find the republican gains uniform and large. We will take a dozen towns at random to illustrate this point. In Milford, no money used and a republican gain of 55. In Merrimack, no money used; republican gain, 25. In Pelham, no money used; republican gain, 9. In Chester, no money used; republican gain, 18. In Swanzey, no money used; republican gain, 11. In Stoddard, no money used; republican gain, 23. In Goffstown, no money used by agreement; republican gain, 31. In Amherst, no money used; republican gain, 18. In Wilton, no money used; republican gain, 20. In Francestown, no money used; republican gain, 14. We might go through the State in this fashion, with a similar showing. The only legitimate inference from these facts is, that Governor Cheney's majority of 3,000 is a legitimate majority, the result of a changed and aroused sentiment of the State consequent on the democratic outrages in New Hampshire and a Confederate irruption at Washington. These are causes sufficient for a revolution which would have occurred just the same had not a dollar been used improperly on either side.—Nashua Telegraph.

If there ever was justice in this world it was when Natt Head and George E. Todd were elected high and dry to the New Hampshire Senate, from which they were counted out last year by Weston and his rascally council.—Lowell Courier.

The records of the County Commissioners of Hillsborough county will show that on election day a leading democrat paid $38.-50 to the county in order to relieve one voter of the pauper disability and secure his vote which he could not cast until the bill was paid. If one democratic vote was worth $38.50, to have changed a republican to a democrat they could afford to pay $77, and doubtless would have done it. This shows how perfectly "rotten with money" our opponents were. The democratic managers tried to buy the State and failed. Let them hold their peace now. The people have spurned the bribe and stamped out those who offered it.—Mirror.

Daily Chronicle.

A Good Newspaper.

It most certainly requires something more than "independence" to make a good newspaper. Diogenes, Parson Brownlow, Brick Pomeroy, Thersites and other disagreeable people were models of independence. They were alike independent of grammar, soap and the opinions of others. The more they could hurt the feelings of others, the more their vanity was satisfied. And yet none of them were successful. None left a name worthy of remembrance for anything better than an example to be shunned. Diogenes was a much vainer man than Alcibiades, whom he made it his business to ridicule, and Thersites would not have been remembered at all but for the eminence of Ulysses, whom he calumniated, and his unlucky slander of Achilles who finally killed him.

In American parlance, an independent paper is usually a sort of double-ender ferryboat that can go one way as well as the other, and will readily do so if the fare be paid. It is ridiculous to suppose that all the political virtues have been discarded by party journals and left only to the political eunuchs yclept the independent press. All newspapers have to depend upon something for support. It may be a political party, a religious denomination, a school of science, a mercantile community, or the bank account of its publisher. Whichever interest it may be, the paper must be faithful to it or it will find itself out of employment. It requires something more than finite skill to please and reconcile all the conflicting interests of humanity and infinite power to rise to such a height as to be above human passions and contentions. There would be very little demand for such a thing, were its existence a possibility. A good newspaper should be like a good man, with a warm heart and an honest head, a friend of justice and mercy, and not too rigidly severe against the foibles of his fellow beings. When it pretends to be superlatively wise or honest, or virtuous, the chances are good that it is a pious fraud.—N. O. Republican.

—The ownership of a dog was the subject of litigation in Clarksville, Ky., and there was a large attendance of interested countrymen at the trial. Great things were expected of the opposing lawyers, Hurd and Dougall, who had been hired at great cost to come from Louisville. Hurd was prompt, but Dougall was delayed, and the Justice, being a stickler for punctuality, decided that the case must go on. All the evidence had been taken when Dougall entered. "I'm afraid I'll have to lose my fee," he whispered to Hurd, who responded, "Oh, no; I'll give you the points of the evidence in two minutes, and you can sum up just as well as though you had been here from the start." Thereupon Hurd told him that the trouble was about a trade of a dog for a jackass, and pretended to give him the particulars. The audience was impatient during the whispering, and was deeply attentive to the oratory when it began. Dougall glowingly described the qualities of the dog, told affecting stories of his sagacity, and wrought his hearers up to a high pitch of enthusiasm. Then he paused, wiped his heated brow, and said, solemnly: "Now, gentlemen of the jury, we come to the jackass." "Eh?" said the Justice, "Now," the orator repeated, with impressive emphasis, "we come to the jackass." "You are the first jackass I've heard of in this case," said the Justice, and an outburst of laughter informed Dougall how badly he had been sold. On the way to Louisville he said to Hurd: "I will make an earnest effort not to kill you, if you will promise never to mention this case," but Hurd said he would risk his life rather than not tell.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks that parents might educate their children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the children of this country it would be possible for the ingenuity of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually polluted as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence in large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

Rev. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE, QUIVER and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, and is helping to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to SEND THE NINE NUMBERS (Nov. '75, to Dec., '76) for $3.00.

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is 7.50 so that for $6.50 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $15.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid series, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 6,000 book pages costing $30.00!!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876 sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

Ten years ago Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. established their advertising agency in New York City. Five years ago they absorbed the business codducted by Mr. John Hooper, who was the first to go into this kind of enterprise. Now they have the satisfaction of controlling the most extensive and complete advertising connection which has never been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. They have succeeded in working down a complex business into so thoroughly a systematic method that no change in the newspaper system of America can escape notice, while the widest information upon all topics interesting to advertisers is placed readily at the disposal of the public.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household—to the children by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in endless variety, to the provident matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its tasteful designs for embroidered slippers and luxurious dressing-gowns. MAGIC

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

These Pills were first sold in America in the July of last year. Demand of the first purchaser of their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time the demand came pouring in from those who had been benefited by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years. Had that Liver was all, most a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and that fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and daily took my last dose, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can support myself comfortably. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please send five more packages.

SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills and can truly say they have done my kinders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials you said there is worth in your Pills, not gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends.

H. D. LEONARD,

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months at a time to do any work, and laid up from the poor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must suffer it out as best I could. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Cosmopolitan, and thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well again, and can't feel any more Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. I can only add my testimony to the Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to stick to it, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be informed of them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health Better at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 19, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.50 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it will present to the country the administration now drawing to a close. Its course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or enter upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government, the great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there will be unusual activity in the Church, in the State, and particularly in the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and enter largely into politics. In trade, commerce and industry the year promises more money on embellishments, stories, &c., &c., than any other. It gives more for the money than any in the world. Its

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

A YOUNG HEROINE.

Away out in the edge—or it used to be the edge—of West Philadelphia, more than a mile from Schuylkill, stands the hospitable mansion of Samuel Lippincott, the cheeriest, coziest, most homelike house, wherever any one made a visit.

So when I, Kate Newhouse, tired of music teaching, in a Philadelphia seminary, was warmly urged by sweet Alice Lippincott to spend my Summer vacation with her, you may be sure I gladly accepted the invitation. The more so, as—but never mind John Lippincott' (though I do mind him every day, for that matter,) he hasn't anything to do with this part of the story, anyhow. West Philadelphia is built up away beyond the Lippincotts' now, but at the time I write of, there was no dwelling house very near, excepting two or three Dutch lager beer saloons and breweries which did not add to the desirableness of the spot. But it was a lovely home, and a pleasant ride to the main city, so we spent happy, happy days that golden bright Summer.

Uncle Sammie and Aunt Sally Lippincott, as everybody called them, were the dearest and kindest of good old Hicksite Friends, and did their best to make every body happy under their roof. Alice was a darling girl and my dearest friend. George was a noble, generous fellow, and as for John,—well, he is peeping over my shoulder this minute to see what I am going to write about him, so I won't write a word. Alice was a slender creature, with fair hair and blue eyes, modest and retiring in her disposition, and rather inclined to be cowardly. I was a brunette, having no specialty of beauty or brains, but as John says, "I'll do well enough," so that much will answer for me. The sweet Summer passed rapidly away, and the first of September came, bringing my vacation very near to its close. One evening just after supper, word was brought to Uncle Sammie that his brother, who lived in the city, away up Wallace street, was severely hurt by a fall from his buggy, and wanted Aunt Sally and himself to come over. They prepared to set out at once, the only objection being that Alice and I would be left alone, the two servants having received permission to go to a wedding, while the boys—George and John—were over in Jersey for two or three days' shooting. But I declared I was not at all afraid to stay alone, and Alice said if they would promise not to stay all night she was not afraid either. They promised to be back by ten o'clock, if possible, and any way not to remain all night.

"Now, Ally," said Uncle Sammie, as they got into the buggy, "thee and Kate just lock up the doors and be good girls till we get back. Nothing will hurt thee."

"We're not afraid, we'll guard the castle safely, and capture the invaders!" said Alice, laughingly, and drawing her little form up valiantly. And then we bade them good-bye, and went back into the lonely house. We locked up the doors, lit the lamps and bolted the inevitable—Philadelphia white window shutters, and then sat down to amuse ourselves with some wonderful crochet work. It was very still and lonely, but we did not feel at all afraid, and by-and-by, lulled by the unwonted quiet, we both grew sleepy. It happened that the first ripe grapes of the season had been brought in, and put into the cellar to keep fresh and cool, that very day. To keep ourselves awake, Alice proposed that we should go down into the cellar and get a few bunches to eat. I agreed, so we went into the dining-room, took a small lamp from the table, and went into the cellar through the door leading down directly from the dining room. The grapes were in a basket upon the further side of the cellar. We crossed over to them, and Alice, stooping with the lamp in her hand, began to select the richest clusters.

"Kate," said she, presently, "these are so fine! Let us go up stairs and get a big glass fruit dish and take some up for the rest of the folks."

It struck me then there was an odd tone in her voice, and I wondered what "folks" she meant, but supposing her to mean her father and mother, I only said: "Very well, give me the lamp, and I'll wait here till you get the dish."

"No," she said, "let us take the lamp up. If I try to come blundering down in the dark, I'll be sure to break the dish. You go before and I'll carry the lamp."

We went up stairs, I in front, Alice carrying the lamp. As I turned at the head of the stairs, I saw Alice was white as death, her blue eyes dilated and gleaming. I was about to speak in alarm, but before I could utter a word, she seized me, and drew me into the china closet.

"Why, Alice, what in the name of the people can be the matter with you?" I cried.

"Kate!" she said, solemnly, dropping into a seat on a box, "we are alone in this large house, and there is a man in that cellar.

"Where? Oh, you must be mistaken!" I cried.

"I am not mistaken—I saw him plainly, when I stooped to get the grapes. He is crouched under the cellar stairs in the shadow; he means to rob us, Kate."

"Oh, what can we do?" I cried in great terror.

"We must take him prisoner!" said Alice, firmly.

"Oh, we can't!" I cried. "Let us get out of the house instantly and run for help, Alice!"

"Where? I am afraid of those Dutchmen at the saloon as much as of him, and there's no one else near. Besides, he may have confederates outside, who would not let us escape. We can't lock him in the cellar, because mother has the keys in her pocket. We must take him, Kate, and very quick, too, before he suspects."

I was terribly frightened, but in general Alice was much more a coward than I was. So, when I saw her courage rise to meet the occasion, I resolved not to be behind her, so I asked her what we should do, and followed her directions with a heart beating painfully hard. Alice quickly told her plan, and taking a strong linen napkin, she caught up a bottle of chloroform from the closet shelf, and saturated the napkin with it. Giving me a slender, stout rope, which hung behind the closet door, and bidding me hide it under my overskirt she gave me the lamp and taking the wet napkin herself we went down cellar.

"Now talk merrily, so he won't suspect," she whispered, as we reached the stairs, and then she said something in a laughing tone, but I'm sure I don't know what she said, and don't believe she did. We descended the stairs, turned to cross the cellar, passed the angle of the stairs and then—Alice sprang, swift as lightning, upon the crouching form, flung her arms about his neck, and held the napkin with all her slender strength over his mouth and nostrils.

"Quick! Kate, quick! with your rope,' she gasped. I flew to her aid, and so sudden and unexpected was the attack, that before the fellow's struggles could free him I had drawn the rope half a dozen times around him, and pulled it as tight as I could, tying it with all the force I could command; and as the chloroform began to take effect he rolled over before us like an inanimate log. Alice, bruised, panting, almost fainting, dropped on the ground beside him.

"Oh! Kate! Kate! If some one were only here!" she gasped. "I don't know how long he will stay under the influence of this, and if he comes to, I am afraid he'll break the rope."

"They will surely be here soon!" said I—"I—oh, Alice, I hear a buggy! Thank heaven, some one is coming!"

And as the sound of wheels and voices came to the side porch, I flew up stairs, flung open the side door of the dining room, and, oh, joy! threw myself straight into John Lippincott's arms! Don't be horrified, reader, for John and I were betrothed, and his arms had held me before. As quick as I could explain to the astonished boys the situation we were in we all went down together to poor Alice. She was still sitting on the ground beside her prisoner, white with pain as well as fright, for one of her wrists was terribly sprained by the man's struggles.

"And you took this fellow prisoner, you girl! Well!" was John's comment as he bent over our captive. Then he raised Alice tenderly in his strong arms, carried her up and laid her on a lounge in the dining room. Both he and George then went into the cellar, and with a strong effort carried up the insensible ruffian and laid him in the porch, to await Uncle Sammie's return. They tightened the rope so he could not possibly free himself if he came to, and bestowed their care upon us poor, frightened and exhausted girls. Very soon Uncle Sammie and Aunt Sally arrived, and great was their consternation upon hearing what had just happened. George immediately rode into the city after the proper officers to take the burglar, who came to his senses before they arrived.

He cursed and swore terribly as soon as he could have use of his tongue, and said to Alice with an awful oath, that if he had dreamed she saw him before she went up stairs, neither she nor I would have left the cellar alive. We were glad when the officers came and took him away, and then what a pet and baby we made of Alice, and how tenderly we cared for her poor little slender sprained wrist. They would have made a great fuss over me too, John especially declaring that I was a brave girl, a little soldier, etc. But I disclaimed their honors, telling him that but for Alice I should have taken an ignominious flight, leaving the burglar to work his will, and that Alice was the rightful and only heroine of our adventure.—Indiana Farmer.

TO MY PATIENTS!

DR. ALBION M. DUDLEY,

NOW OF SALEM, MASS.,

TO SUCCEED ME MARCH 13th,

Will be fully entitled to the respect and confidence of the citizens of Portsmouth. I can unreservedly recommend him, not only as a gentleman in the true meaning of the term, but as a well read, skillful and conscientious

Dental Practitioner.

DR. DUDLEY already has a fine and rapidly increasing practice in Salem, and consents to come here on trial for a year, (to be in Portsmouth three days of each week, and three days in Salem), at my earnest solicitation, backed by the free gift of my practice.

I could have sold my practice with a recommendation, for a large sum, but feeling the kindness and confidence with which I have been treated, I have chosen, nay, felt it impossible to do otherwise than sink private consideration of profit for the good of my patients.

If DR. DUDLEY is appreciated at his true worth by the people of Portsmouth, he can, through the confidence extended to him, be made to relinquish his practice in Salem, and settle here permanently. That such may be the result of his year of trial here is the devout wish of his friend and the friend of Portsmouth. A. P. STEVENS.

N. B.—I shall take great pleasure in pre-cating Dr. D. to such of my patients as my limited time here will permit, and also to make engagements for him with any who may wish suggestion or advice from me. A. P. S.

Jottings.

The schooner-yacht Lone Star, belonging to Laighton Brothers, sunk at her moorings at the Shoals during the gale on Tuesday.

All members of the Reform Club are requested to assemble at Mechanics' Hall tomorrow afternoon at 2:15 o'clock, and proceed to the North Church, (where seats will be reserved) to listen to an address from Rev. Carlos Martyn. Subject "Alcohol."

That Portsmouth egg upon which the democrats have set so long don't Hatch out a speaker this year. It was a bad egg from the start.—Mirror.

Schooner Gen. Taylor, before reported as wrecked at the entrance to this harbor and "raised and brought in before the late gale came on," was raised and brought in the gale, and drifted unguided up past all the dangers off Kittery to a point just back of the navy yard, where she was beached by men who saw her drifting past and attached ropes to her.

It seems all-sufficient for a full house just to say that Barnabee appears at the Temple this (Saturday) evening. But when we add that he is to present Mrs. H. E. H. Carter, soprano, Miss Annie C. Holbrook, contralto, Perais Bell violinist, and other equally notable talent, in a programme of great excellence, the hall ought to be too small to contain the crowd. Don't delay getting tickets, and by your presence show to Portsmouth's esteemed son that he is fully appreciated at home.

A meeting of the Reform Club, Thursday evening at the Temple, the crew of the schooner Andrew Dodge, of Gloucester, Mass., consisting of eight men, engaged in winter fishing out of this port, voluntarily went forward and signed the pledge. An elegant standard, suitably inscribed, was presented in behalf of the Woman's Temperance League by Mrs. B. F. Thorndike, and was responded to by Capt. John J. Churchill. The applause was deafening. Hardly had it ceased when the crew of nine men attached to the fishing schooner Velocipede, Capt. Jamieson, of this port, pressed forward to the Secretary's table and enrolled their names, the audience rising to their feet and cheering. A suitable flag is being prepared for presentation to this crew. Several prominent names were added to the pledge book, including three ministers. The club now numbers 970 names. Arrangements are being made to give an elegant solid silver trumpet to the engine company first coming forward and enrolling.

At a meeting of the Board of Aldermen, Thursday evening, Samuel Spinney, Ebenezer G. Adams and Nathaniel K. Raynes were appointed to make the enrolment of the militia, and to take the vital statistics of the city for the year ending March 31, 1876.

The wreck of brig Hattie Eaton was sold on Thursday for $300. The bodies of the second mate and a seaman, recovered on Thursday, were buried at Kittery on Friday.

Subject at the Bow Mission Service, Sabbath evening, "Praise and Promise." Service at 4:15; all are welcome.

On Sunday evening a beautiful flag will be presented by the Woman's Temperance League at the Temple, to the second fishing crew who signed the pledge of the Reform Club in a body last Thursday evening.

Our citizens will have the opportunity for the first time, Sunday evening, at the meeting of the Temperance Reform Club, to hear its earnest President, John S. Treat, Esq., make his first address, and tell how rum conquered him, and how temperance has blessed him. This will be the speech of the evening. Other reformed men will make short addresses. The usual collection will be taken at the door, and the Temple will be opened at 6:30.

News and Notes.

A daughter of James Hoyt, of Northwood, in coasting upon a sled down a long and steep hill, ran into a swamp-wood, striking against trees, and was taken up insensible, in which condition she remained for a long time. No bones were broken, but her system was terribly shocked.

The Nashua Telegraph, having set up a man of straw for an imaginable Senator, keeps exhibiting it, and is so satisfied that its knuckles are not barked by the wind, that it continues the practice as if it excited the greatest attention from the smiling lookers-on.

The vote for State Senators at the recent election shows a clear republican majority of 3900 over all. How are you, Senate thieves?

Mrs. Marsh testified on Friday that Pendleton went to Europe in company with herself and Mrs. Belknap, then Mrs. Bowers, in 1871. Pendleton had previously denied it.

A PAUPER'S PROPHECY.

Nearly half a century ago, a woman by the name of Loomis, living in the town of Pawlet, Vt., was compelled to ask relief from the town which was refused. She finally became a charge upon the town, and she then made a vow that the town of Pawlet should not be without a pauper for fifty years. She will be one hundred years old in October, 1876, and the fifty years will expire some time next winter. She has had offers of marriage during her dependence, but her answer always was, "I would not swap the town of Pawlet for the best man living." The town house, where she now resides, is over a mile from Pawlet village. Last fall she made her annual visit to the village on foot.

Heavy Betting.

A correspondent telling of the way in which they played in the West years ago, relates a couple of incidents: I shall never forget the hand that was played between Judge Puterbaugh and Col. Tanzy, five or six years ago. I don't know what either of them had, but both had all their money on the table, and Col. Tanzy, drawing a check out of his pocket, filled it up, and said: "I raise you, sir, $50." Judge Puterbaugh gave an anxious glance at his hand, and being satisfied with its contents, apparently, called for a bank check himself, and, rapidly filling it up and throwing it upon the table, said: "I see your raise, sir, and go you $200 better." "I am sincerely grieved at the circumstance," the colonel replied, "but I must play my hand;" and, calling for another check and filling it up, he went the judge a thousand better. "Oh, that's a mere bagatelle," remarked the judge. "I have a check here for the balance of the money in the world, and I guess you can't raise me above that." That was a settler, and the judge took the money; but I don't think I ever enjoyed myself so much as when the colonel's and the judge's checks were taken down to the bank the next day, and both were found to be quite worthless.

The judge was very fond of a quiet game of draw, and when he could come in on two pair didn't care whether his judicial circuit was attended to or not. At the capital one night there was a big pot on the table, and it came down between the judge and a member from the sawlog region. They both seemed to have good hands, and after the preliminary betting the judge raised his antagonist twenty dollars—all the money he had before him. "I see that raise," exclaimed the sawlog man, nervously shoving his cards together, "and go you this pocket-book better," producing an old leather wallet with fifty or a hundred wraps about it. "Oh, you do, do you?" said the judge; suspiciously eyeing the battered receptacle of wealth. "Well, then, I am forced under the circumstances"—reaching down into his overcoat pocket and producing half a dozen brand new wallets—"to go you five pocket-books better." Both men got their pistols out about that time, and the delicate matter of examining the pocketbooks was referred to a committee of three of the bystanders, who reported that there was nothing in any of the wallets, when the judge and the lumberman cordially shook hands across the board, and the game went on.

Notwithstanding the unprecedented depression of business the past year, it has issued 9842 policies, insuring nearly $25,000,000. The old Equitable society of London was sixty years accumulating $25,000,000. The Mutual Life has accumulated nearly $80,000,000 in thirty-three years. Particular attention is called to the substantial and safe investments of this company. No Premiums Notes or other questionable securities received or held.

Insurance in this Company COST LESS as its DIVIDENDS are LARGER than those of any other Company.

Dividends declared and paid in cash at the end of first year, and annually thereafter.

Its securities are BETTER—its expenses SMALLER than any other.

Many of its Policies nearly doubled in amount during the past 20 years, and the CASH Dividends in many cases, are more than the Annual Premiums, so that in a few years Policies become self-sustaining. No other Life Company in this country, of the world, has shown such results, or presents such advantages for insurance as this.

Daily Chronicle.

—The Rondout Freeman has a newsgatherer at Saugerties who is pretty good at a yarn, for example: The Recorder man took a sleeping car the other night at Poughkeepsie, and being unable to stretch out his manly limbs to its full length in the little bank, stuck his feet out the window and sank to rest until he arrived at Catskill, where he got off. The next morning every telegraph pole on the east side of the track from Poughkeepsie to Catskill station, was found torn down, and when he spoke to him about it he said he thought something did tickle his feet on the way up. Oh, what feet! The Centennial authorities have applied for the soles of his shoes to be used as bulletin boards at Philadelphia, on which will be recorded all the arrivals during 1876.

READING FOR CHILDREN.

OPINION OF CHAS. FRANCIS ADAMS.

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Boston Advertiser, in

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is spread before the youth of this century it would scarcely be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open advocacy of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have exists, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits it for healthy food, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose plastic minds come under their influency."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome and really attractive magazine is required. St. Nicholas, and Mr. Nicholas has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more trustworthy periodical for young people cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $5.00.

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, the full price of which is $7.50. Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the list price of which is $11.50.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five splendid stories, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books at $1.50 each; paper cover, $20.00!!

Two specimen numbers, or a Prospectus for 1876 sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

DR. QUAIN'S MAGIC CONDITION PILLS!!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and in a short time testimonials came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cures were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, so Bad that Life was almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 5, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE—For over twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged and finally took my bed, and for lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, but with little hopes of receiving any permanent benefit. I felt benefitted by the first dose, and after using one package I did like a new man, and now I can report myself cured. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I have recommended them to several others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, who has derived benefit herself cured. Enclosed please find $1.00 for two packages. SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, ME., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—Inclosed find two packages of Pills, and can truly say they have done wonders for me. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have sold many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't stand it much longer. Have tried most everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can say they are worth ten dollars a pill; they are worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this please find $1.50 for three more packages for my friends. H. D. LEONARD.

Care Watson & Gannett.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaints, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable to move without assistance, and quite a cripple from the poor. I have had several doctors, spent a great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded I must spend my life in misery. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Cosmopolitan, and thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent to you last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep well without pain, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as well as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it will not last. My sister has suffered from Inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wished to try your Pills, but could still take them, and would not be without them if money would buy them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be induced to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. B. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. B. T. Lane—Health much Better at 64 than 44—Neuralgia and Kidney Troubles Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 16, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have no Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly cleansed. My health is much better at 64 than it was at 44. Pills, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Haverhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. B. T. LANE.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing to its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is soothing and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For terrible diseases engendered by the humid trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

PULMOCINE.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the great concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign peculiarly exciting. The House of Representatives for the first time since the close of Mr. Buchanan's term is under the control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration now drawing to a close. Its course during the next six sessions will define a policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; and the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the organization which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fail to place a second time a new era of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the settlement of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our affairs. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, for there are many signs that the relations of the Church to the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke sharp discussion, and tend largely in to politics. In trade, commerce and productive industry there are hopes that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued regard of all old readers, and the accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan necessities or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain while it does forever the old Republican principles of which it was the champion all through the American conflict, and it will regard those principles as irrevocably victorious under the old banners. But it can never be the servant of current party interests, and it will support what it finds good in the acts and professions of either party, and apologize for the wrongdoing of neither. In giving the news it can see no reason to distort the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; in politics its great object is to secure honest men, whom the country knows and can trust; to secure hard money, Administrative reform, such economy in public affairs as the hard times compel from private citizens, and, as a consequence, lower taxes. Thus it found itself last Fall, rallying the forces for the splendid hard-money triumphs won by the Republicans and their allies in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and as constantly striving to lift up the hands of an Administration in New York, which was busy fighting the Canal Ring, stopping leaks in the treasury, and lowering taxes. In each case it found the people sustaining its positions, and it hopes to be so clearly right in its political course through all the storms of 1876 as to win equal success, and command yet greater approval.

One result of this policy of struggling for the triumph of honest men and sound principles, without being too much controlled by mere names, has been that the methods which have already proved useful in popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost candor with judicial fairness; will keep its columns free from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and in heretofore will reserve all its space for its readers' interests.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past. During the years 1872 and 1873 the position assigned it long ago by foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. It has won this position by the closest watchfulness and the most lavish expenditure to procure the most est intelligence, the most complete reports, the most interesting letters and essays, and the ablest work in every department. Its staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors it numbers many of the most eminent men in the country.

Peterson's Magazine

☞ POSTAGE PREPAID ON ALL SUBSCRIPTIONS.

"PETERSON'S MAGAZINE" contains, every year, 1000 pages, 14 steel plates, 12 colored Berlin patterns, 12 mammoth colored fashion plates, 24 pages of music, and 900 wood cuts.

Great improvements will be made in 1876. Among them will be a series of illustrated articles on the Great Exhibition at Philadelphia, which will alone be worth the subscription price. They will be appropriately called

THE CENTENNIAL IN PEN AND PENCIL!

The immense circulation of "Peterson" enables its proprietor to expend more money on embellishments—stories, &c., than any other. It gives more for the money than any in the world. It

Frank Scheuer lives at 24 Berlin street, Newark, N. J. His fellow laborers for a time looked with envy upon the juicy fresh meat that Scheuer had for his dinner every day, unable to understand how he made his small wages go far enough to support a family and furnish himself daily with fresh meat. One day, in answer to inquiry, he said: "That is not mutton; that is dog's meat. It is good. Will you try it?" They did not try it, although they could hardly persuade themselves that he spoke the truth. Scheuer smiled at their scruples. He even asked some of his fellow-laborers to visit him, and when they did so he pointed to the kennels, in which were several dogs fattening for the knife. When the facts were noised abroad they created no little scandal. The neighbors wondered how Scheuer had been able to keep so many dogs, and why he changed them so often, but none had suspected the truth. They had very little to do with Mrs. Scheuer, and no feeling of friendship prevented them from making as much talk as they pleased. As Scheuer and his wife could not understand the language and the scandalous reports, they went on fattening, killing and eating dogs. Complaint of Scheuer's doings was made to Newark's health inspector, who found all that had been alleged against Scheuer was true, but there was no law forbidding the use of dog's meat for food. Scheuer told him candidly that he ate dog meat not because he was poor, but because he liked it.

"How long is it since you ate it the first time?"

"Oh, four or five years before I came from Germany. A doctor told me to eat a dog, and it would cure my consumption; I did so, and liked it so well, that I have been eating it ever since."

"What meat is it most like?"

"Mutton or veal. That is when the dog is young. If it is old it gets strong, and I have to season it high with pepper and vinegar."

"Where do you get your dogs?"

"Whenever I see a stray dog that looks hungry, I take it home and feed it until it gets fat. Then, whenever a person gets tired of his dog and wants to get rid of him, I take him."

"Your neighbors don't seem to like the plan of living alongside of a man who eats dogs?"

"Oh, if they don't like it, let them go away. They don't have to eat it. I think dog meat is better than pork, any day. I don't quarrel with them because they eat pork."

The Local Editor.

If a man buys a new buggy, or if his cow can bawl three times without winking, the local is expected to proclaim it with a grand flourish. If he starts a two-penny business his first thought is to bribe the local with a five-cent cigar to write up a five dollar puff. Indeed, he thinks it is a mission of the local to make his fortune for him by "free blowing." He will take the local to one side and point out the superior qualities of a rat terrier dog, and coolly ask him to "give him a hoist." He don't care anything about it, only Spriggins has a dog which he thinks is a buster, and some of 'em wanted his "put in" just to "take the conceit out of Spriggins." Everybody wants to be "put in." They are the "Great I Am," but no one says, "Here, local, put yourself inside of this new suit of clothes, or throw yourself outside of this oyster stew, or stuff this watch into your pocket." Oh, no, of course not; that would cost something. The shoe is on the other foot, you see. The local is supposed to know everything about other people's business, and is expected to show up all the actors in every family broil in town. If the vile tongue of scandal finds a victim, people wonder why he don't run about with his note-book and gather up the vituperative bits of slander for his paper. If he steps into a billiard hall he is requested to make a note of the astonishing fact that Bill Tompkins has made a run of eleven points. When the minstrel troupe arrives in town, the agent immediately rushes into the printing office, and calling for the local, he slips three or four tickets in his hand, and whispers: "Draw us a big house! Put it in strong!" and patting him patronizingly on the shoulder, the agent admits the inferiority of the troupe, but we are not to "let on." It is no sin for the local to lie. To please the lecturer the local is forced to sit two mortal hours to hear him through an insipid discourse so that he can "write him up." And so it goes. All are anxious to appear favorably in print, but few are willing to pay for it! The local's time is worth nothing but to bother his head writing puffs for ambitious persons. It don't cost him anything to live. He never eats, or drinks, or travels, and money is of no use to him. Put it in! Put it in.

Prophets Without Honor.

If we could have had democratic candidates enough there would not have been a democratic town left in the State. Marcy of Portsmouth very nearly wiped out the democratic majority of about 200 in his own city. Benjamin Franklin Jones of Barrington changed a last year's democratic plurality of 12 in that town to a republican majority of 13. Thomas Dinsmore of Alstead sent his town over to the republicans, and gave them all the town officers. Dana Sargent of Hudson, who wanted to represent District No. 2 in the Senate, Mr. Straw of Manchester, who had similar ambition to serve this district, and Mr. Weeks of Canaan, who wanted to be re-elected from No. 11, were all eminently successful in changing their towns from the democratic to the republican column.

Mr. Carr of Goffstown, Senator from No. 8, had less opportunity to distinguish himself, for he lived in a republican town, but he is entitled to the credit of increasing the republican majority four-fold; and Averill of Milford, the Senatorial candidate in No. 7, added 55 to the republican majority in that town. Cloutman of Farmington, Senatorial candidate in No. 6, found no difficulty in using up last year's democratic plurality of 27, and giving the republicans a plurality of 20. "Our friend Sturoe" of Sunapee had a hard field to work in, but he shaved down his party's majority very handsomely, and Cobleigh of Northumberland did work in the same direction.

Nor were the democratic candidates for Councillors less effective in good works. Four out of five were beaten by their republican opponents, and Marston of Sanowich not only gave us his district, but threw in his town to help us in the House. Wherever a democratic candidate, and particularly where a Senate-stealer lived, there the lightning struck.—Mirror.

The Crying Babies.

The Gazette is still harping on the bribery question as the only alleviation for its soreness over the republican victory in this State in general and in Ward Six in particular. As the Gazette presents no better backing for its charges than a series of base and baseless statements and insinuations, we propose three or four tangible propositions for it to consider. 1. More money was spent by the democrats to carry Laconia than was spent by the republicans outside of Manchester and Nashua in Hillsborough county. 2. More money was spent by the democrats to carry Laconia than was spent by the republicans in both the cities of Manchester and Nashua. 3. More money was spent last year by the democratic candidate for Congress in the First District to secure his election than was spent for all purposes by the republican State Committee for either the campaign of 1875 or 1876. 4. Three times as much money was spent by the democrats in this city at the late election as was spent by the republicans. When fifty dollars apiece was paid by the democratic fuglers for votes in Ward One, it is certain that a round sum was received and paid out in all the close wards of this city for the same purpose. A member of the democratic State Executive Committee admitted to us that a considerable sum was raised in New York to help his party carry this State, and there is no doubt of it. The democrats spent three times the money to carry the election in this State that they ever spent before, and the excessive soreness of such papers as the Gazette is owing to the fact that so much money was spent or stolen, and now there is nothing but a disgraceful and disastrous defeat to show for it. All this talk about bribery and corruption by the democratic press is the sheerest hypocritical snivelling.—Nashua Telegraph.

News and Notes.

The democratic papers all exhorted New Hampshire to "speak up loud" so that there should be no misunderstanding of what she said. But they didn't suppose she would "holler" so right in their ears. It fairly deafens them.—Springfield Union.

When a democratic official comes round with a petition asking that he may be kept in his place, ask him what republican was kicked out to make room for him.

The Union is progressing finely; "hell holes" is its pet name for New Hampshire. "Oh, my native land, I love thee!"—Mirror.

The New York World says that the Curtis wing of the New York delegation will not vote for Conkling in the republican national convention, and are likely to go for Blaine.

An amendment has been offered in Congress to a bill prohibiting election contributions from Senators, Representatives and Delegates to Congress, in these words: "And the contributions of money or other valuable thing as herein prohibited by any Senator, Representative or delegate to Congress shall, in addition to the penalties herein described operates as a disqualification as to his holding his seat." Let that become a law and what will become of Burleigh?—Biddeford Journal.

What mean'st thou, Bro. Butler?

The closest fight in any town was in Centre Harbor. They balloted three times for moderator, there being a tie vote twice. On the entire State and County ticket each party cast 79 votes. The democrats finally elected the representative and all the town officers.

The republican State central committee of New York has adopted resolutions formally condemning Belknap, and demanding in behalf of the party his exemplary punishment when found guilty.

The seat of Mr. Jameson, the democratic representative declared elected in Antrim, will be contested by Mr. D. H. Goodell, the republican candidate. It is alleged that the democratic board of selectmen allowed more than a score of men imported for the purpose to vote, and that several republicans were deprived of their undoubted legal right to vote.

Some wicked republican reminds the democrats that Mr. Schumaker, democratic representative from New York, had $300,000 of Pacific Mail corruption funds in his pocket at the time he voted for the impeachment of Belknap. Mr. Schumaker still keeps his seat, and no democrat raises an objection.

Considerable excitement exists among the milk producers at Hampton Falls, owing to the tardiness of the purchasers in paying for the milk. The amount due the farmers of Hampton Falls is estimated by competent judges at from $7000 to $8000, and by some as high as $10,000. Many have left off selling their milk, and advertise their cows for sale.

The republicans of Exeter held a jubilee meeting in the Town Hall, Thursday evening, Hon. Thomas Leavitt, Senator elect, presding. Speeches were made by the President, Gen. Gilman Marston, Gen. Natt Head, Hon. Charles J. Gilman, Hon. John D. Lyman and others. The Exeter Cornet Band and the Squamscott Glee Club enlivened the meeting with National airs and songs. The affair closed with a bonfire, an exhibition of fireworks and a dance which kept up till a late hour.

The Senate passed the electoral bill on Friday, 32 to 26.

Mrs. Marsh testified in the Belknap case, Friday, and nothing of importance was alarmed from her testimony. Her husband appeared again and told contradictory stories.

We coincide with the Concord Monitor and Nashua Telegraph in the expression of the desire that the delegates to be chosen to the National republican convention from this State be not hampered by the expression of a preference by the convention for any particular candidate for the Presidency. If there be any office holders who are candidates for delegates we trust they will have the good sense to retire and let the people make the selections.

In the Spalding court-martial at San Francisco, the testimony of S. P. Higgins went to show that Spalding had signed a navy certificate of $13,850, payable to witness, when the latter had no claim whatever on the Government. The body of the certificate was in Pinney's writing. Witness endorsed the certificate without examining on Pinney's representation that it was a promissory note made by Pinney. The certificate was then deposited in the Savings Bank as collateral for a loan of $10,000 by Pinney. In a subsequent interview Spalding did not deny the genuineness of his signature.

The Concord Monitor notices with regret a disposition in some quarters to extort from the republican party of New Hampshire the expression of a preference for Benjamin H. Bristow as the republican candidate for the Presidency. It thinks that the New Hampshire delegation should go to Cincinnati unpledged, and that "if the other New England States are a unit in favor of a New England candidate, it ought to be understood that the Granite State will not prove a stumbling block, or assume a 'holier than thou' attitude in convention."

The legal friends of Gen. Belknap assert that it will be proved on his trial, either before the Senate or in the Courts, that he never know of the Fort Sill moneys coming to either of his wives, or anything of the arrangements made in regard to that matter with either of them. He received one remittance without suspecting its character, on account of his deceased wife, and after that Mrs. Bowers told him there would be regular remittances to him from Marsh on her account, and asked him to send them to her at Cincinnati, which was done.

Mrs. Susie W. Rogers, wife of Augustus Rogers, was found dead in her bed Thursday morning at Concord. It is supposed to have been a case of suicide by arsenic poison. She had been sick during the night, and was in her bed with her husband and child when she died. The husband assigns domestic troubles as the cause, and says that he went to sleep about two o'clock and awoke about five o'clock and found her dead. She was taken sick about nine the previous evening, and continued sick during the night. No physician was summoned, but the people in the boarding-house where she lived were called to her assistance. The husband says he had talked with her about a separation on the evening she was taken sick. She was 25 years old. It is said that she purchased arsenic at an apothecary store.

The steamship Donati, from Rio Janeiro, which arrived at Philadelphia on Friday, brought 1005 packages of Centennial exhibits, among which are 900 specimens of native woods. The French steamship Labrador, from Havre, also arrived there on Friday afternoon, having on board the exhibits forwarded by the French Government for the Centennial.

A dispatch from Paris says the dykes protecting Herzogenbosch, Holland, have been swept away by the floods, the railway bridge destroyed and the town completely inundated. Hundreds of houses have disappeared, and 6000 persons are homeless.

The outrageous gerrymander of the Councillor districts perpetrated in 1874 by the democrats is shown by the returns of the votes for Councillor this year. The total majority in the State is 3252, and in two districts the republican majority is 3689, while a democratic majority of 462 would have elected three of the five Councillors. As it was, the republicans carried one of these three by twelve majority over all, and lacked but twenty-five votes of carrying another, defeating a choice, however. The legislature will elect the republican nominee.

Fishing schooner Carrie Forrester, the largest vessel of the Swampscot fleet, which was driven on shore at that port by the line gale, will not be got off. The Minnehaha and Alberta Story, driven on shore at the same time and place, will come off; the former was damaged about $2000. The Flight went to pieces within twenty feet of the piazza of the Lincoln House; she was one of the most successful fishermen out of Gloucester.

Unlimited Remedial Resources.

People sometimes suppose that Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines represent the entire extent of his resources for curing disease. This is an error. Experience proved that while the Golden Medical Discovery, Favorite Prescription, Pleasant Purgative Pellets, Compound Extract of Smart-Weed, and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, would, if faithfully used, cure a large variety of chronic complaints, there would be here and there a case which, from its severity, or from its complication with other disorders, would resist their action. These exceptional cases required a thorough examination into their symptoms, to ascertain the exact nature and extent of the diseases under which the patient was laboring, and the use of specific remedies to meet and overcome the same. This led to the establishment of the World's Dispensary, at Buffalo, N. Y., with its Faculty of Physicians and Surgeons, each of whom is skilled in the treatment of chronic disorders in general and these belonging to his own special department in particular. To one is assigned diseases of the throat and lungs; to another, diseases of the kidneys and urogenital organs; to another, diseases of the digestive system; to another, diseases of the nervous system; and to another, diseases of the eye and ear. Thus the highest degree of perfection in medicine and surgery is attained. The establishment of this institution enables the Doctor to meet a long-felt want in the treatment of the more severe chronic affections. By a careful consideration of the symptoms as given in writing, he successfully treats thousands of cases at their homes. Others visit the Dispensary in person. The ample resources for the treatment of lingering affections are thus placed at the disposal of every patient, and those on whom the proprietary medicines do not have the desired effect can procure a more thorough and efficient course by a personal application to the proprietor of the World's Dispensary.

The hardest cough yields readily to Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam, and the patient soon finds himself permanently cured. Sold by druggists everywhere.

Extra Liability to Malarial Infection.

Persons whose blood is thin, digestion weak and liver sluggish, are extra liable to the attacks of malarial disease. The most trifling exposure may, under such conditions, infect a system which, if healthy, would resist the miasmatic taint. The only way to secure immunity from malaria in localities where it is prevalent, is to tone and regulate the system by improving weakened digestion, enriching the blood, and giving a wholesome impetus to biliary secretion. These results are accomplished by nothing so effectively as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which long experience has proved to be the most reliable safeguard against fever and ague and kindred disorders, as well as the best remedy for them. The Bitters are, moreover, an excellent invigorant of the organs of urination, and an active deputent, eliminating from the blood those acrid impurities which originate rheumatic ailments.

Notwithstanding the unprecedented depression of business the past year, it has issued 9542 policies, insuring nearly $35,000,000. The old Equitable Society of London was sixty years accumulating $35,000,000. The Mutual Life has accumulated nearly $80,000,000 in thirty-three years. Particular attention is called to the substantial and safe investments of this company. No Premium Notes or other questionable securities received or held.

Insurance in this Company COSTS LESS as its DIVIDENDS are LARGER than those of any other Company.

Dividends declared and paid in cash at the end of first year, and annually thereafter.

Its securities are BETTER—its expenses SMALLER than any other.

Many of its Policies nearly doubled in amount during the past 20 years, and the CASH Dividends in many cases, are more than the Annual Premiums, so that in a few years Policies become self-sustaining. No other Life Company in this country, of the world, has shown such results, or presents such advantages for Insurance as this.

TO MY PATIENTS!

DR. ALBION M. DUDLEY,
NOW OF SALEM, MASS.,
TO SUCCEED ME MARCH 13th,

Will be fully entitled to the respect and confidence of the citizens of Portsmouth. I can unreservedly recommend him, not only as a gentleman in the true meaning of the term, but as a well read, skillful and conscientious

Dental Practitioner.

DR. DUDLEY already has a fine and rapidly increasing practice in Salem, and consents to come here on trial for a year, (to be in Portsmouth three days of each week, and three days in Salem), at my earnest solicitation, backed by the free gift of my practice.

I could have sold my practice with a recommendation, for a large sum, but rather than see the kindness and confidence with which I have been treated, I have chosen, nay, felt it impossible to do otherwise than sink private consideration of profit for the good of my patients.

If DR. DUDLEY is appreciated at his true worth by the people of Portsmouth, he can, through the confidence extended to him, be made to relinquish his practice in Salem, and settle here permanently. That such may be the result of his year of trial here is the devout wish of his friend and the friend of Portsmouth. A. P. STEVENS.

N. B.—I shall take great pleasure in presenting Dr. D. to such of my patients as my limited time here will permit, and also to make engagements for him with any who may wish suggestion or advice from me. A. P. S.

Quick Passage.

Schooner George L. Treadwell, of this port, made the passage from New York to Baracoa, Cuba, in five days and twenty hours, arriving out March 8th at 12 o'clock, noon. This is said to be the best time ever made by a sailing vessel between these ports, eight days being an average passage.

Schooner Daniel Marcy left Vineyard Haven March 18th, for Baracoa, and as she is a very fast vessel, we expect to hear a good report from her. These two schooners were both paid an extra price for charter on account of their reputation for speed, and we think their record will be satisfactory.

Jottings.

The schooners Gov. Goodwin, Anna M. Nash and W. H. Y. Hackett are now at Doane's wharf, fitting for the Grand Banks, and will sail in a few days.

The new blotters of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, of which company James P. Bartlett, Esq., is general agent for New Hampshire, are the best ink-sponges out we have used. Each has a calendar for seven days at the expiration of which they are cast aside and a fresh blotter and calendar are found beneath.

Hon. Frank Jones testified before the committee of the Massachusetts legislature on Friday that he had nothing to do with the purchase of property for the Eastern Railroad at Bar Harbor, Charlestown or Lynn.

The sale of the Davis farm was postponed from Saturday on account of the storm, until Wednesday at 12 M.

A Southerly snow storm interrupted the sight seers who were desirous of observing the partial eclipse of the sun, Saturday afternoon.

Schooner Active, of this port, has arrived at her port of lading all right.

The "Hattie Eaton" Disaster.

On Friday afternoon, in company with a friend of many years' nautical experience, we took a drive to the shore of Gerrish's island to inspect the wreck of the brig Hattie Eaton and see what further particulars we could gather concerning her loss. A more perfect wreck we never saw—and we have seen a good many, first and last. The bow of the vessel, from the stem to the break of the forecastle (some fifteen feet), was in one piece and sitting nearly upright, though the bow was further from the shore than any other part of the vessel and of course most exposed to the force of the waves; and we were told that after the sea subsided, the two anchors, the forecastle capstan and the windlass were all in their proper places and apparently uninjured, with the exception of one anchor which had lost one of its "pans." Perhaps a hundred yards away lay about half the vessel's bottom, keel uppermost, another portion being nearer the rest of the wreck and right side up; the two broadsides, with planking ripped off and timbers broken, were bilge up between the bow and the beach and at right angles to the latter, partially covering and partially covered by a confused mass of ground-up decks, knees, beams, timbers, casks, spars, sails, ropes and wire rigging; and at the end of this shattered and tangled mass, and not more than thirty feet from the bank, was a portion of the upper part of the brig's stern, which the waves had torn off and turned around so that the name faced the sea. The casks which contained the sugar and molasses of which the cargo was wholly composed, were scattered a half-mile along the beach each way from the wreck, not one being left with either head in, and the larger part of them being completely broken up.

A brief survey of the materials of which the brig was built, and her model, led our companion to say "This vessel was built in the Provinces;" and as we noticed the name "Demerara" painted on a portion of the stern from whence a thin sheathing had been torn off, we concluded that she had at some time borne that name under the British flag had been wrecked, sold, taken under the American flag and rechristened "Hattie Eaton." [We have since seen a paragraph in a Providence paper to the effect that the brig was built at St. John, N. B., in 1862.]

Calling at the nearest house we found our old friend Robert F. Gerrish, Esq., the proprietor, who gave us all the information and attention in his power; we also conversed with Mr. Mitchell, who (with his wife) takes care of the place for Mr. Gerrish, and who was the only man who saw the brig come on shore; Mr. Josiah Williams, whose son was one of the rescuers of the mate; and Mr. LeBaron, the mate of the brig and only survivor of the wreck. Mr. LeBaron, we are pleased to say, seems to be recovering from the rough usage he received before and at the time of the wreck; and in spite of a dislocated shoulder, almost innumerable cuts and bruises, the hammering he received from the sea and the terrible mental suffering he must have endured, will probably come out all right. All that humanity could do has been done for the poor fellow by Mr. Gerrish and others, and on Thursday his brother arrived from Massachusetts to take care of and cheer him. A more narrow escape from death has rarely been reported.

Mr. LeBaron is evidently a man of more than ordinary intelligence, and Mr. Mitchell has had thirty-five years' experience at sea; and though the former was suffering for some time before the wreck, as he explained to us, such excruciating agony from his dislocated shoulder and other injuries, that he could pay but comparatively slight attention to what was going on about him, and Mr. Mitchell would naturally be considerably excited by the spectacle of a vessel rushing to certain destruction and the almost certain destruction of her crew, yet the two men no doubt give the history of the end of the unlucky brig's last cruise with but trifling variations from the actual facts.

When Mr. Mitchell first saw the brig through the thick mist she was making a north by east course with the wind well on the quarter, and was too near the shore to have cleared the Eastern Sister on the one tack or Sea Point on the other, had she been brought to the wind; but no attempt was made to change her course, that he could see,—the trim of her sails was not altered nor did she yaw one way or the other except from the heave of the sea, but made a north by east course until she struck, stern on. He thinks the captain was running the brig on an error of reckoning which gave him more sea-room than he really had, and that the land was not seen by the crew until it was close aboard, or else that the captain, knowing pretty nearly his exact position and satisfied he could not keep the brig off shore another night, had determined to run her on the desperate chance of hitting Portsmouth harbor or at least of having day light to be wrecked in,—rather inclining to hold to the former opinion.

On our asking Mr. LeBaron if he thought the captain purposely beached his vessel to save the crew he replied that he did not, his opinion being that the brig ran away with them, and that in their wretched condition—short-handed, worn out with incessant and exhausting toil for many hours, and utterly disheartened,—they were impotent to do more than steer the brig straight for the land after they once saw it. An observation was taken the day before the gale, and early on the day of the wreck the captain announced that they were up with the head of the cape (Cape Cod) and that it would be prudent to heave the brig to, so far as sea room was concerned; but this could not be done on account of the tremendous sea, and the vessel was kept running until she struck—first to the eastward of north, then north, and at last northwest—courses which indicate the captain's purpose to have been to enter Portsmouth harbor, in pursuance of which purpose he would be likely to first steer east of north to keep well clear of Cape Ann and the Shoals, afterward hauling to the westward to strike the harbor's entrance. Taking this view, the landfall made was a good one; that the brig was driven all day before a terrific gale and sea, on a circuitous course and in a heavy storm of snow and rain followed by a thick fog, and then struck within two miles of her objective point, shows that the captain acted with judgment and coolness under most trying circumstances, though he did not succeed in saving his vessel, his crew or himself.

Mr. LeBaron says that some little time before the brig struck—from three-quarters of an hour to an hour, he thinks—land was reported to be in sight, not far away from the vessel. The land then seen must have been some part of the Shoals—probably Duck island, judging from the course the brig was steering when Mr. Mitchell saw her; and had Capt. Cook known exactly what land it was he could have run into the lower harbor with the wind nearly aft. But the momentary glimpse through the fog probably did not enable the captain to recognize the land and exactly locate the brig, and she was kept on the fatal course which so narrowly missed taking her into safety.

Where the vessel struck, the rocky shore runs off nearly on a level for some hundreds of feet seaward of where the brig's bow finally brought up; and that she scraped heavily along this table rock is plain from the track she left, the loose rocks having been thrown to each side, and one large boulder (weighing we should think ten tons or more) split in two by the heavily-laden craft in her headlong career. She was finally stopped not by running against a rock, but by being lifted by a big sea and then dropped upon a rock, which went through her bottom just forward of the step of the foremast, and held her, while she swung around with her stern close to the shore, filled, and finally went to pieces. Had the bow not been so held the brig would have swung broadside on to the beach, and as the vessel drew more water aft than forward, the bow would have been driven higher up on the rocks than the stern was, and all hands would possibly have been saved.

On the morning after the wreck a box some fifteen inches square was found on the rocks not far from where the brig struck. On opening it to find what it contained a fine tiger-skin came to view, inside which was a casket of solid silver weighing a pound or more and beautifully chased, the casket containing a letter addressed to a lady; other documents found scattered on the beach showed that the box and its contents were sent from Cienfuegos by the American consul there, by the hands of the captain of the Hattie Eaton, as a present to the lady mentioned; and her address having been learned from the same documents the box was on Thursday forwarded to her by Mr. Gerrish. The singular thing connected with the box is, that though made of the most fragile materials, (such as cigar-boxes are made of,) and exposed for hours to the same pitiless sea which shattered the brig, snapped the stout timbers and knees like pipestems, twisted off heavy iron bolts and bars, ground the strong sugar-casks and molasses hogsheads to kindling-wood on the rocks, and piled the debris in tons around and upon the box, the box itself was not in the least damaged, and the white leather of the tiger-skin was not even stained by a single drop of salt water.

The bodies of Peter Botass, colored, and the spanish boy Joseph Aibans, were washed ashore Sunday forenoon.

A Magnificent Trust.

The statement which appears in another column of the financial condition of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, is a document of singular interest to the general public. This corporation is now by far the greatest financial trust on the Western Continent, and even in Europe has no parallel in the particular work assigned to it; only the two great national banks of England and of France having to deal with amounts of money comparable to those in its hands.

On this point the figures speak for themselves, and we can add nothing by comment to the impression they will make. The Company in question holds in trust nearly or quite one-sixth of the whole amount of funds devoted to life insurance in the United States, or more than one-third of the entire valuation of the State of Maine. That there are great advantages in insuring with a company like this is obvious, and is sufficiently illustrated by the statement itself; the whole expenses of the company were last year much less than half the average expended by similar companies. And it will doubtless be a long time before any similar corporation in the world can attain equal dimensions and rival its position and fame.

A single payment of $18.89 secures to a man aged 25 $1000. for his family in case of his death; if he lives his premium is constantly lessened by his increasing dividends, until in the course of years his dividends equal his premiums, leaving him nothing to pay. If the insured dies soon after paying his premium, which amounts to but a few dollars, the thousand dollars for which the policy was issued are at once secured.

A shrewd business man will readily see that it is much better for him to transfer a portion at least of the risk he is incurring to a life insurance company, rather than to retain the whole of it himself, especially in view of the large actual cash value that exists in his business capabilities which are rendered valueless in case of severe sickness or death.

We invite the attention of our readers to these facts and suggest that this would be a suitable time to apply to this great company before its ranks are full.

—Never say "Kid gloves." Either say "kids" or "gloves." Etiquette demands his.

—It is stated, upon German authority, that the unpleasant taste imparted to milk and butter by feeding turnips, etc., may be removed by simply throwing into each pan of milk of four or five quarts as much saltpetre as will lie on a point of a knife, when a gelatinous mass will separate from the milk and settle to the bottom.

—An advertisement appeared in various New York papers on Sunday, stating that Mr. Henry C. Motley of Nos. 96 and 98 Grand Street was desirous of purchasing fancy-bred dogs, for the purpose of establishing a centennial dog show. The advertisement requested the owners of the dogs to take them to Nos. 96 and 98 Grand Street. Mr. Motley is the senior partner of the firm of Elliot C. Cowdin & Co., wholesale silk importers. Before the warehouse was opened on Monday there were twenty-five persons with dogs waiting outside. The first to gain entrance to the warehouse was an Irish lady, who had a large white poodle for sale. Mr. Motley at once said he had a "full line" of dogs and that he did not desire to purchase any more. Up to five o'clock in the evening a constant stream of men and women having dogs for sale called at the warehouse. Among them were four owners of fighting bull-dogs, seventy-eight proprietors of terriers, six owners of spaniels blood-hounds, twenty-five possessors of black and tans, and four Irishmen who brought with them ferocious mastiffs. In addition, there came a number of old maiden ladies in quest of lost dogs.

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

WHAT YOU CAN GET FOR 5 DOLLARS.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Says, in a letter to the Quincy (Mass.) Patriot, that three-fourths of the books in brisk demand at the public libraries are "rapid and sensational." He thinks that parents ought to guide the children's taste in the choice of reading more than they do. The Newark Advertiser, u

A TRENCHANT EDITORIAL

On this subject, says: "A worse literature than that which is now poured from the hundred presses every day it would hardly be possible for the mind of man to conceive or his hand to execute. It is even worse than an open sewer of vice and intemperance, for that would carry its own antidote, while what we have excites, stimulates and debases the intellect, unfits the healthy body, fills the imagination with gaudy and distorted pictures of life, and develops the passions at an age when they should be most under control. How much of the low moral tone of society is due to these satanic issues of the press we do not know; but, as a river can nowhere be so effectually poisoned as at its source, so we have a right to believe that the millions of these papers, devoured by curious and eager children, must influence to a large extent the tone of thought and the drift of action of those whose souls are to come under their influence."

The writer adds: "It may be somewhat unnecessary to state that we have no reference in the above to those monthly magazines for children, which are as healthful as they are beautiful. If all editors were as able, truthful and devoted as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge (who edits ST. NICHOLAS), there would be nothing to complain of. The New York Tribune says: "In

That threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in arts and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

A CLERGYMAN'S OPINION.

REV. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., in an article in the Sunday School Times on the subject, says of ST. NICHOLAS, SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for GIRLS and BOYS: "A cleaner, purer, more truly worthy periodical for children cannot be named. It is on the side of all that is true and good, from beginning to end."

In order to place this magazine within the reach of all, the publishers offer to send the 14 numbers (Nov., '75, to Dec., '76) for $4.00.

Or, for $5.00, they will send the twelve numbers, beginning with Nov., '75, and either of the bound Volumes of ST. NICHOLAS for '74 or '75, at the price of which is $7.00. Or for $8.00 they will send ST. NICHOLAS as above, and both the bound volumes, the full price of which is $11.00.

Each of the volumes is complete in itself; they are by all odds not only the best, but the handsomest gift books for children ever issued.

The volumes contain more than 1,500 octavo pages, with nearly 1,000 illustrations; they have five spirited serials, besides shorter stories, historical and biographical papers, poems, sketches, rhymes, jingles, riddles, etc.; more than equal in contents to 20 volumes of ordinary children's books of 6,000 book pages costing $30.00!

Two specimen numbers, with Prospectus for 1876 sent, postage paid, on receipt of Twenty-five Cents.

DR. QUAIN'S

CONDITION PILLS!

The Wonderful Remedy for Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Headache, Kidney Complaint, Nervousness, Scrofula, Piles, and all diseases arising from a bad state of the Blood!

☞ These Pills were first sold in America in the Spring of 1874, but from the sale of the first package their success was assured, for almost every person who purchased one package soon ordered more for himself or friends, and for a short time the demand came pouring in from those who had been benefitted by them. Some of the cases were astonishing. Following are a few of the testimonials:

Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for Twenty-Five Years, and Kidney Complaint almost a Burden Cured by One Package of Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

ASHLAND, N. H., Oct. 3, 1875.

MR. THOS. W. LANE.—For over twenty-five years I have been troubled with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia. I have suffered much, and for a large part of the time have done no work. For two or three years past have been growing worse, and last Fall I was so bad that life became almost a burden. I was much discouraged, and finally took my bed, where I lay several weeks. About this time I saw your Pills advertised in the Manchester Mirror, and resolved to try them, as I had tried almost everything and permanent benefit. I felt benefited by the first dose, and after taking one package I felt like a new man, and now I can report myself well. One package has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took. I recommended them to some of my others, and have obtained two orders for them. I procured one package of you for a friend, and he reports himself cured. Enclosed please find pay for two packages.

SAMUEL PLAISTED, JR.

Worth Ten Dollars a Pill.

BATH, Me., Oct. 4, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE.—Dear Sir—I received your package of Pills, and can say they are the best I have ever seen. I have given away a few and those I gave to say, "Send for a package for me." I have told many what good they have done and are doing. I had the Dyspepsia so bad that I thought I couldn't endure it much longer. I tried almost everything, but nothing did good. I have taken only three pills and can eat anything. In one of the testimonials you sent me they were worth their weight in gold; they are worth, at least, ten dollars a pill, and I would give it before I would do without them. In this place and $1.50 for three more packages for my friends.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Complaint for Twenty-Five Years Cured by Dr. Quain's Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., July 19, 1875.

MR. LANE—Dear Sir—For the last twenty-five years I have suffered terribly with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, also Liver and Kidney Complaint, causing severe pain in the back and hips, often unable for months to stoop to pick up any small article from the floor. I have tried almost everything at great deal for medicine, which did no good, and finally concluded to suffer on the rest of my days. I happened one day to see your advertisement in the Comprehensive. I thought the medicine was just what I needed, and I sent for one last April for a package of Pills. Before I had taken eight I felt like a new person. Can sleep nights, eat well, and have no Neuralgia pain; can stoop as easily as ever. My friends are astonished at the change in me, and think it is the best pill they ever saw. I have no inflammation of the Bowels, and Constipation, and wishes to try your medicine. I intend still to take them, and would not be without them if I could get them. I think they must prove a blessing to thousands who will be indeed to try them. Enclosed you will find $1.00: please send two packages.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. R. T. LANE.

Another Letter from Mrs. R. T. Lane---Health much Better at 64 than 44---Neuralgia and Kidney Complaint Completely Cured by Dr. Quain's Magic Condition Pills.

DANVERS, MASS., Oct. 10, 1875.

THOMAS W. LANE—Dear Sir—I write again for more of your invaluable Pills. I have not Neuralgia, or Kidney Trouble, still I wish to take them until my blood is thoroughly purified, which I think is much better at 64 than it was at 44. This, with the blessing of God, I attribute wholly to your medicine. I have two friends in Hawerhill, one in Andover, and a lady in Roslendale, who are taking it, and are already much benefited. I send $1.00 for two packages.

MRS. R. T. LANE.

Ten years ago Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. established their advertising agency in New York City. Five years ago they absorbed the business conducted by Mr. John Hooper, who was the first to go into this kind of enterprise. Now they have the satisfaction of controlling the most extensive and complete advertising connection which has never been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. They have succeeded in working down a complex business into so thoroughly a systematic method that no change in the newspaper system of America can escape notice, while the widest information upon all topics interesting to advertisers is placed readily at the disposal of the public.

PULMOCINE.

PULMOCINE.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is authentic and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the luxury trying climate of New England

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agent. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The year 1876 promises to be crowded with more important and interesting occurrences than any since the close of the war. We shall celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of our national birth with the most remarkable display of our arts and industries, and the greatest concourse of visitors ever seen on the continent. We shall elect a new President under circumstances which threaten to make the political campaign specially exciting. The rival parties in Congress are for the first time since the close of Buchanan's term in sole control of the Democratic party, and it proposes to lay bare the secrets of the Administration now drawing to a close. Its course during the next six months will define the policy by which the Democratic party hopes to rule the country; while the action of the Republicans is likely to determine whether the party which saved the Union and freed the slave is to fall to pieces or raise upon a new career of usefulness. In the practical work of government there are great abuses to be swept away, and many promises to be put to the test. In the relations of the national finances the year may mark the crisis of our war. In religion it promises to mark a great revival, and there are many signs of the rapid decline of the Church in the State, and particularly to the State schools, will provoke many a discussion, and enter largely in to politics. In trade, commerce and production industry there are hopes that it will witness the long deferred revival.

In such a stirring and crowded period, THE TRIBUNE confidently appeals to its past record and its present performance, as constituting its claim for the continued regard of all old readers, and the accession of many new ones. No intelligent citizen can afford during such a year as 1876 to dispense with an independent newspaper, upon which he can rely for an impartial record of events, undistorted by partisan necessities or personal hates or ambitions.

THE TRIBUNE will maintain with the old vigor the old Republican principles and aims which it was chiefly instrumental in giving shape and which it was ever with the foremost in the great contest which put the Republican party in power. It will continue to advocate the principles and measures which have already commended it to popular favor. It will endeavor to combine the utmost candor with judicial fairness; will keep its columns free from personal wrangling; will waste no time in replying to the incessant attacks its success provokes from envious rivals, and as heretofore will reserve all its space for the readers' interests.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the favor it has so consistently enjoyed in the past. During the years 1874 and 1875 the position accorded it by the foreign critics, as "the leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized, and its circulation has been greater than at any previous period in its history. Its aim has been to publish for the closest watchfulness and the most careful expenditure, not only the fresh and intelligence, the most complete reports, the most interesting letters and essays, and the ablest work in every department, but a staff includes the most accomplished men in the profession, and among its outside contributors are some many of the most eminent men in the country.

THE MISCHIEF OF A TELEGRAM.

Jessie Johnson went flying down stairs at the ring of the door bell. "It's a telegram," she said to Melissa, on returning, "I knew Hopper's ring—Hopper's the messenger."

"Not a telegram for me, I hope," said Melissa, looking up from her work. "I do hate the sight of one; they always set my teeth on edge, and make the hair of my flesh stand up. You don't think anything has happened to—to Ledyard?"

"Certainly not; it's addressed to Ledyard!"

"And you are opening it!"

"He gives me permission to read his telegrams when he's out of town, so that I may forward them if they are important. You'll have that pleasure when you are married, I suppose."

And then Jennie relapsed into utter silence for full ten minutes, while Melissa fidgeted and coughed, and wondered what it was all about, too proud to ask till anxiety constrained her.

"Something must have happened to Ledyard, I know," she cried. "Why don't you speak, Jennie? Why do you look so—so distracted? Let me read it. I insist; it is my right, Jennie!"

"Yes," said Jennie, slowly, "it is your right, but I would not read it, if I were you."

"Not read it! Do you think I am selfish enough to spare myself so weakly? If he suffers, is it too much for me to know? Give it to me this minute, Jennie?"

"Oh, I don't believe you have any idea what it is. It's worse than death! Here, read it if you will. I hope I am not wrong to allow it!" And Melissa read:

To Dr. Ledyard Johnson:—

DEAREST. My parents consent at last! Come to me before my heart breaks, if you still love your EMILIE.

Melissa put it down without a tremor. Jennie dared not look at her.

"I must go home," said she, with a voice as hollow as the whispering of a seashell, "of course. When does the next train leave, Jenny, do you know?" And then her assumed calmness melted into a torrent of tears.

"Now I feel more composed," she said; "a good cry is equal to a tonic. I might have known it couldn't last. Only if he had told me himself! I think it would have been easier to bear if he had not deceived me. And yet he seems in earnest. He once told me he never loved but one woman, and I was fool enough to think that one was myself; though he did not say so his eyes swore to it. Oh, I have been too happy, but this ends it all. Jennie, for what are you crying? Tell him I hope he will be happy with—with Emilie. You know I cannot bring myself to like her just yet—"

"Oh, I detest the huzzy!" cried Jennie.

"Tell him I mean to forgive him; but I never, never wish to see his face again! Oh! oh! oh!" and another heavy dose of the aforesaid tonic; and the girls kissed and parted.

Dr. Ledyard had been expected home that night, but after Melissa had departed, Jennie received a note saying that he should be detained for a week or more, and not mentioning Melissa, as her visit had been kept a secret from him, Jennie intending a surprise. When they heard his ring, Melissa was to step behind the statue of Ariadne, and while Ledyard warmed his hands at the blaze on the hearth and dilated on the pleasures of home, hinting that there was one delight lacking, that one delight in the shape of Melissa, was to step from out the shadow of Ariadne, into the warm firelight and embracing arms. So that the little drama that Jennie had planned, failed of performance, and when Ledyard's note arrived, she enclosed Emilie's telegram to his address, having written on the other side of the sheet:

"Melissa has been visiting here. We intended a pleasant surprise for you, instead of which there was an ugly contretemps. She left instantly. The horrid telegram will explain. Your sorrowful sister.

JENNIE."

But in her agitation, Miss Jennie, who was always just a bit careless, though kind-hearted enough, directed her letter to East, instead of West Babylon street, number nine instead of ninety, and, therefore, it being prior to the present postal arrangement which returns a miscarried letter to the original writer at the expiration of a few weeks—Dr. Ledyard Johnson never received it. Judge of his surprise, then, when, having written to Melissa in his usual vein, his love letter was returned to him unopened.

"I should like just to know what he says about it," Melissa pleaded; "how he excuses himself." Having utterly resigned him, she was just dying for one word of affectionate apology and appreciation. In her own heart she had already excused him. He had loved Emilie first, but a cruel father had interfered. Then he met Melissa herself, and had fancied she could fill Emilie's place; but, oh! when she had stepped aside, what happiness she had been capable of sacrificing for him; the more costly since it was also her own happiness which she threw in to the scale.

Therefore she would fain have opened his letter, in order to verify her romance; but her mother, who understood human nature and the ways of the world better, to whom romance was a dead letter, said "No, dear; it will only probe the wound;" and the letter was returned.

Dr. Ledyard posted down to Doverby instantly to inquire into the affair, and was told that Melissa had left town, and her mother was indisposed, she having sent Melissa off on a visit. At his wit's end, Ledyard wrote on his card, "Will Mrs. Vaughan give me Melissa's address?" To which she replied:

"Under the circumstances, Mrs. Vaughan thinks it wise to withhold her daughter's address from Dr. Johnson, and she is greatly surprised at his importunity—after all."

Fairly puzzled, and not a little angry, Ledyard returned to town. He had no heart or spirits for anything, but it was his duty to see that people did not die needlessly, though he were dying by inches himself. He knew that it was not a grief to kill outright, but it threatened to be a life-long anguish. He had long known that the ambitious Mrs. Vaughan did not regard him as a brilliant match for her beautiful daughter, but that Melissa should disown her love was incomprehensive.

It would be a sorry Christmas for him, indeed, but he thought it best to leave his patients in the hands of his assistants, and run down to Haven to keep it with Jennie. When one has lost a sweetheart, a sister is perhaps, the next best thing.

But he found Jennie somewhat changed too; she was by no means in her usual sprightly vein; she had nothing for him but half smiles. He wondered, secretly, if she had ever experienced a like dissatisfaction with life, of which he had never dreamed before.

They were an uncommunicative family, he knew; and sisters and brothers much more readily repose sentimental confidence in strangers than in each other. To be sure Jennie had hung wreaths in the window. There was a goodly store of dainties in the pantry, too. But there was little of Christmas cheer besides, though the frost was on the pane, the old church bells saluted the Christmas eve with cracked but jubilant voices, and the moon was rising overhead, as it rose over Palestine when first the song of "Peace on earth, good will toward men," was heard, whose echo still vibrates across the centuries.

Dr. Ledyard stood before the blazing hearth, thinking what a different night it might have been, had Melissa continued true; wondered what she was doing; if the firelight still flushed her cheek in the low parlor; if she and Lenox March still sung together sweet Christmas choruses. He was thinking thus bitterly, when a sharp ring at the door startled both brother and sister from their reveries.

"Hopper's ring," said Jennie. She had never exchanged a word with Ledyard about the fatal telegram. If he did not choose to mention it and explain, why should she? How could she? she had not the courage.

But sitting there, it had struck her that he was looking worn and depressed, and it was on her lips to say something comforting when a little boy entered with a yellow envelope.

"A telegram, doctor," said he.

"I hope they haven't called me back to the city—no urgent case, I trust. Humph, poor thing, poor thing!" and he tossed the telegram upon the table.

"Is any one ill?" said Jennie. "Must you go?"

"Oh, no; it's the same old story. Read it; if you wish."

Jennie took it and read:

To Dr. Ledyard Johnson:—

DEAREST.—My parents consent at last. Come to me before my heart breaks, if you still love your EMILIE.

Then she looked up at Ledyard, who seemed to have forgotten all about it. He was still standing before the fire, looking at the picture of the "Sleeping Palace," hanging over the mantel.

"That's a capital thing, Jennie, do you know it? One would think the artist had visited the old sleep-shops. It's the genuine blue sleep. See this old sensechal, who was about to blow his trumpet when the chantmen seized him, with his two cheeks distended! And there comes the fairy prince across the hills. 'The many fails, the one succeeds.' I say Jennie, why do they always paint a fairy prince with a feather in his hat?"

"But—but the telegram?" gasped Jennie.

"The telegram? Oh yes. Sad, isn't it?"

"Oh, it's the same—the very same."

"Then you have seen it before. I thought it was probable. I have had a dozen, or less, word for word. She's as mad as a March hare, you see, but quite harmless. She had a lover, they say, whom her father dismissed, and it affected her reason. She took the greatest fancy to me from the first, imagines I am the young man in question—it's plain she has forgotten his name—and so every little while she gives her keepers the slip and telegraphs to me. Poor child! she must be at least fifty years old. There's a heart-wound for you, Jennie, what's the matter, dear? It's not a nice story for Christmas eve."

"Oh, it's the best story I ever heard—the very best!" she cried, rising and stretching out her arms to a charming apparition in the door-way—or could it be Miss Melissa Vaughan, wrapped in ermine and crowned with smiles?

"I heard every word of it," said the phantom of Melissa; "so much for eavesdropping; but then to be sure it is an old story; I had heard it before. Dr. Rightabout is my godfather, you know. Godfathers always bring gifts in the fairy books. So this morning at breakfast we happened to be talking of insanity, and, 'by the way, Melissa,' said he, 'there's a rival of yours at the Guinness Hospital. There's an Emilie St. Raymond in love with your Dr. Johnson—sends him telegrams by the armful of lovingest sort. It's lucky you aren't jealous; but bless me, she's as mad as Hamlet—been so this twenty years—perfectly harmless, though.' Do you know Ledyard," she pursued, coming toward him and putting out her hands, "I couldn't speak a word. The tears just filled my eyes, thinking how I had sentenced you without a hearing. Don't you think they look terribly red?"

"They look terribly beautiful," he said, kissing the bent brow. It seemed that he was beginning to see through the fog.

"And mamma," continued Melissa, "who was always hard upon evil-doers, but kind-hearted withal, said I must run right down, this Christmas eve, and make it straight with Jennie—for we thought you were at Babylon street still—and she is waiting in the hall, hoping you will forgive us."

"I will go and help her take off her wraps," said Jennie, leaving the lovers alone.

And so the curtain falls! Nay, it is revealing a happy Christmas eve in store for Dr. Johnson and Miss Vaughan.

Daily Chronicle.

TUESDAY, MARCH 28, 1876.

The Storm.

The rain storm of Saturday night and Sunday morning was one of the most extensive of recent years, and probably covered a larger area than any since 1873. From Cheyenne on the west to Boston on the east and from New Orleans to the lakes, the storm raged unceasingly for more than twelve hours, sleet and rain prevailing in the West and snow and rain in the East and South. Every State east of the Rocky Mountains, with the exception of certain portions of the Gulf States, was invaded by the storm.

In Rhode Island, Burrillville seems to have suffered the most severely, the breaking away of Wilson's reservoir having liberated a flood which swept away several dams and mills. In Eastern Connecticut there was much damage, and it is stated that the Norwich and Worcester Railroad will be impassable for a week. In the neighborhood of Worcester the damage is very extensive, and several dams are gone in the upper Blackstone. Below, at Blackstone, Woonsocket and Pawtucket, the river is at about the highest point ever known.

News and Notes.

Roscoe Conkling was probably nearer being President on Wednesday morning than he will ever be again; and that wasn't near enough "to hurt."—N. Y. Tribune.

Belknap County, in New Hampshire, gave the democratic candidate for Governor a small majority. There's something in a name, and a county by any other name would smell more sweet.—Cincin. Times.

During the republican celebration at Littleton, Mr. John Munday was injured by the bursting of a cannon.

They are putting up a large ice house at Alton, capable of holding 60,000 tons of ice.

True W. Thompson of Newmarket sues the Dover Press for $10,000 damages for the publication of a libel in that paper in a communication sent from Newmarket last December.

Connecticut election next Monday.

A deer weighing 100 pounds was shot about a mile from Laconia, recently, by Warren Huse.

Senator Wadleigh is quite ill at Washington.

Ex-Gov. James Y. Smith of Rhode Island died, Sunday, at the age of sixty-seven years.

While William Hoggan, wife and four children were crossing the bridge over Big Sandy creek, three miles from Winchester, Ill., Saturday, the horse ran off at the end of the bridge, which was covered with water and Mrs. Hoggan and three children were drowned.

Mr. Smith Dore, of Ossipee, while attempting to change a belt in a saw mill by some means caught his hand under the belt, the result of which was the breaking of his arm, the bone protruding through the flesh. A physician was sent for, but before he arrived Mr. Dore had set his own arm, leaving nothing for the doctor to do but to put on the splints.

Some of the papers are beginning to discuss the Senatorial question; and the Nashua Telegraph is anxious in the matter particularly. In a recent issue it said: It is a position that should seek the man, and not the man the position. True, any man has an equal right with any other man to aspire to this high office, but the men who are to say who shall succeed to it have no right to regard such aspirations unless they are grounded in fitness, in ability, in integrity, in fidelity, and in consecration to the best interests of the republic and the republican party.

To which the Concord Monitor pertinently responds: True as gold. "Let the Senatorship seek the man." Let the field be open. For ourselves we do not question the choice of the people. That is already clear. The people delight to reward their true and faithful servants.

The Concord Monitor says of Hon. Edward H. Rollins: Without a superior anywhere as an organizer and leader, he has, as the head of the executive committee, put all his energies, all his thoughts, into this campaign from the outset. Indeed, he may be said to have kept up the fight continuously for two years. The outrage of last June, which robbed him of a portion of his well-earned victory, did not discourage him. On the contrary it gave him new strength, new determination, and he has, from that hour to the present, brought all his splendid powers of organization, his foresight, his aggressive habit, his pluck, and his great experience, to bear on the enemy.

Let New Hampshire go to Cincinnati unpledged, but prepared to do justice to herself, to New England and to the nation.—Concord Monitor.

The Cleveland leader says: "The crowd of candidates has been reduced to two—Blaine and Bristow. Both of these are able, honest, competent, and fully possessed of the confidence of the party."

The Lowell Courier says of Mr. Bristow: "We do not know how he can be improved, nor do we know how he can be injured, unless there is too much guerrilla enlistment in his ranks."

Members of the House judiciary committee, including republicans, say the testimony given by Marsh before that committee is stronger than his testimony before the committee on expenditures in the War Department, and that it is so conclusive of Gen. Belknap's guilt that he cannot escape. It is believed the judiciary committee will formally present their articles of impeachment this week.

The Worcester Spy, while expressing its preference for Bristow for President, says of Blaine: "If our preference of a candidate were determined wholly by personal considerations, our first choice might be for Blaine; for we know him well and like him. He is honest, capable and patriotic."

A compromise on the currency question is now contemplated in the House. Not among the democrats by themselves; that has been shown to be impracticable by the action of the caucus: but through a combination of the better elements of both parties, including especially members most free from partisan control. It is proposed to restore to holders of $50 and upward of United States notes, the privilege of funding them in Government bonds. The justice and desirableness of such a privilege have been urged by several of the more intelligent students of the subject. The most objectionable feature about the proposed compromise is that the repeal of the Resumption act is talked of as part of the programme. Such a repeal might do immeasurable damage to the national credit and greatly intensify the hard times.—Tribune.

Advices from southern Georgia and Florida say that early vegetables were generally ruined by the recent cold spell. In the vicinity of Lake City, Florida, several acres of early vegetables were killed, not withstanding fires were kept in the fields during the cold nights. The cold wave extended as far south as Gainesville, Florida, as some information comes from Live Oak and Welbern. This disaster will materially reduce the shipments of vegetables to the Northern markets during the next few weeks. The destruction of field crops has been general in Georgia and Florida, and farmers will have to replant.

Mr. Marcellus F. Berry, son of Mr. Samuel C. Berry, and for several years chief Corresponding Clerk, at Chicago, of the Eastern Express Co., has been transferred to the agency at Boston. Mr. Berry, though quite young in years has had a valuable experience in the service of the company.

The Newburyport Herald says that the majority of Governor Cheney is more than all the purchaseable votes in New Hampshire. Nonsense, man; Cheney's majority is nothing near to eight thousand.—Concord People.

No; Cheney's majority is only three thousand; the democrats must have purchased the other five thousands with the Jones-Marcy-Tilden-Tammany corruption fund.

There have been 536 deaths from yellow fever in Rio Janeiro within the last fifteen days.

The following particulars of the disaster at Caub on the Rhine, an occurrence briefly cabled at the time, are received: "An ounce of prevention would have saved us; but no preventive measures were taken and last night the disaster which had been threatening us for some time came. The mountain overhanging the town came down with a terrible crash and eight houses were immediately destroyed. Terrible scenes ensued. A husband and wife killed in the act of jumping from the window. Another man had his head cut off by a rock. Six persons were killed immediately and a large number were buried in the ruins. The military arrived from Coblenz and Mayence and assisted in rescuing those buried under the ruins, twenty-one in all, it is feared. But few of this number will be rescued alive, as another land slide is threatening, and the scene of the disaster can be approached but with the greatest caution. The work of removing the debris is progressing very slowly. On March 14 there was almost a conflict between the military and a party of miners because the latter were not permitted to assist in the work of rescuing persons buried under the ruins."

—The intelligent compositor was setting up an article contributed, when he came across the following passage:

"Elvira," he cried, in a passionate voice, "Elvira, fly with me!"

"Antonio," she sobbed, smiling through her tears, "I will. Blame me if I don't."

At that moment a tall figure stepped between them, and the sullen voice of Hugo de Grubbs was heard:

"Avaunt, slight girl! And as for you, base minion—"

The intelligent compositor had just got as far as this when an illegitimate idea was born to him, and with the remark, "The bowling ignoramus! Why, minion wasn't invented until 1654, and this is a story of the Middle Ages," he changed the passage so that it read:

"Avaunt, slight girl! And as for you, base brevier—"

The foreman shot him with a shooting stick. The sad event has cast a gloom over the community.—Chicago Tribune.

Notwithstanding the unprecedented depression of business the past year, it has issued 9842 policies, insuring nearly $15,000,000. The old Equitable Society of London was sixty years accumulating $50,000,000. The Mutual Life has accumulated nearly $80,000,000 in thirty-three years. Particular attention is called to the substantial and safe investments of this company. No Premiums Notes or other questionable securities received or held.

Insurance in this Company COSTS LESS as its DIVIDENDS are LARGER than those of any other Company.

Dividends declared and paid in cash at the end of first year, and annually thereafter.

Its securities are BETTER—its expenses SMALLER than any other.

Many of its Policies nearly doubled in amount during the past 20 years, and the CASH Dividends in many cases, are more than the Annual Premiums, so that in a few years Policies become self-sustaining. No other Life Company in this country, of the world, has shown such results, or presents such advantages for insurance as this.

TO MY PATIENTS!

DR. ALBION M. DUDLEY,

NOW OF SALEM, MASS.,

TO SUCCEED ME MARCH 13th,

Will be fully entitled to the respect and confidence of the citizens of Portsmouth. I can unreservedly recommend him, not only as a gentleman in the true meaning of the term, but as a well read, skillful and conscientious

Dental Practitioner.

DR. DUDLEY already has a fine and rapidly increasing practice in Salem, and consents to come here on trial for a year, (to be in Portsmouth three days of each week, and three days in Salem), at my earnest solicitation, backed by the free gift of my practice.

I could have sold my practice with a recommendation; for a large sum, but feeling the kindness and confidence with which I have been treated, I have chosen, nay, felt it impossible to do otherwise than sink private consideration of profit for the good of my patients.

If DR. DUDLEY is appreciated at his true worth by the people of Portsmouth, he can, through the confidence extended to him, be made to relinquish his practice in Salem, and settle here permanently. That such may be the result of his year of trial here is the devout wish of his friend and the friend of Portsmouth. A. P. STEVENS.

N. B.—I shall take great pleasure in presenting Dr. D. to such of my patients as my limited time here will permit, and also to make engagements for him with any who may wish suggestion or advice from me. A. P. S.
